ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, JULY 5, 1881.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, June 14; Madras and Allahabad, June 12; Calcutta, June 11.

THE reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending May 31 state that there has been heavy rain in Burma and Assam, and there has also been a good deal in Bengal, Madras, and in the Southern and Central Districts of the Bombay Presidency. In the Central Provinces and the Central India States there were a few slight showers. The weather in the North Western Provinces and Oudh was unsettled, storms and slight rain being reported from a good many districts. Agricultural prospects are so far good, as there are some indications of the early approach of the monsoon. Fever and small-pox are reported in places, but on the whole the public health continues fair.

WE are glad to say that cholera was disappearing from Bombay at the date of departure of the mail.

A REUTER'S telegram from Calcutta, dated July 4, reports a rumour of Ayub Khan having left Herat with a force of all arms. No news of this movement had reached Quetta on July 3; the Times correspondent there telegraphed on that day as follows:—

"The repulse of Ayub's advanced guard has been succeeded by outward tranquillity at Kandahar, but the people are far from confident that another invasion from Herat is not imminent, and merchants continue to write to their correspondents here to retain goods for the present. Ayub's troops have gone on to the frontier, but will not pass it till considerably reinforced. Sirdar Muhamad Hashim Khan is said to have retreated no further than Bakwa, just across the frontier, where he is collecting land revenue. From Herat there has been no news except that the various reports of the march of regular troops to Farah and Washir were groundless. No attempt at a forward movement had taken place up to the date of the latest information. Tidings of Hashim's defeat had not then arrived, and its effect on Ayub's position remains to be seen. Nothing is being done to the cantonments here beyond improving the existing accommodation for the troops, and it may, therefore, be assumed that the garrison will be reduced by half at least before the cold weather. With the exception, however, of the 3rd Bengal Native Infantry, which is to be relieved in the usual course by the 28th, none of the regiments have been informed whether they are to remain here during the winter or not. The Bombay relief list just published is entirely silent on the subject. Brigadier General Henderson, of the Bombay Army, commanding the infantry here, died of dysentery on the 27th ult."

FROM Calcutta the Times has received a telegram, dated July 3, at which time it was believed that Ayub's departure had been postponed for a fortnight. The telegram runs thus:—

"The events of the last few weeks are gradually strengthening the impression that Ayub's prospects, if not actually hopeless, are becoming exceedingly doubtful. He seems to be embarrassed by local complications, and to be without the resources in money and arms requisite for a considerable movement against the Ameer, who, although not popular, has a respectably-organised force in the field at Kandahar and on the Helmand. Reports from Herat, dated June 18, state that a son of Khan Aga had brought a force to remove his tribe, and that Ayub had sent 800 cavalry to oppose him. The Hazaras are said to be the only tribe at all disposed to join Ayub, and they are at war with the other tribes. The people of Zamindawar are believed to be trifling with Ayub. The officers of Ayub are said to be much dejected by the news from the tribes and from Zamindawar. He has postponed his departure for a fortnight, and is awaiting the return of Uzful Khan."

THE same telegram says—"The Pioneer asserts that the abandonment of Quetta will be carried out shortly, and current rumour points in the same direction. This step, however, appears not yet to have been even seriously contemplated by the Indian Government." Since the "reorganisation" of the Press Commissioner's office, the announcements of the Pioneer have come to be again looked upon as the demi-official utterances of the Viceroy. We trust, however, that the astounding statement now made by that journal will be promptly contradicted on authority.

A REUTER'S telegram from St. Petersburg, dated June 29, has the following:—

"The Journal de St. Pétersbourg reviews to-day an article of General Annenkoff upon the Akkal-Tekke oasis, and other articles published by the European Messenger, the New Review, and the Russian Review. It points out that the views expressed by General Annenkoff are simply his own opinions, but says that he has from his own observation arrived at the conclusions which have already been expressed by the Russian Government, and are shared by several prominent British statesmen—namely, that England and Russia can have no object in taking up antagonistic ground in Asia. It adds:—'There is room enough there for both of them to develop their influence in its natural sphere without coming into collision. They can by artificial rivalry injure themselves as much as by open, friendly relations they could benefit each other. The authors of these articles point out that commerce should be a strong and permanent bond, uniting, instead of dividing, the two Empires. The necessary railway route has already been open to Krasnovodsk. As soon as it has been continued as far as Serax (?) and England completes her network over Kandahar and Herat, the two Empires will meet, not through political intrigues, not with armies and artillery, not by costly war and provocation to mutual hatred, but by means of one of the most fruitful instruments of peaceful civilisation. When rapid and regular communication has been established by Russia from Europe to India, and vice versa, a conflict between the two Empires will be placed beyond the bounds of probability, and the Asiatic Question will be irrevocably solved, to the advantage of the two countries and the benefit of civilisation and humanity."

THE new Warrant embodying the changes in the organisation of the army under Mr. Childers's scheme has been issued and came into effect on July 1. The Gazette, however, announcing the various changes and promotions consequent thereon, will not appear for about a fortnight yet.

THE excitement in the silver market has been rapidly growing in consequence of the rumour—strengthened by Mr. Gladstone's cautious words on the subject in the House of Commons last night, which we report in the usual place—that the Bank of England has engaged to resume its former practice of holding a certain amount of silver bullion against notes, and the consequent expectation that the Paris Monetary Conference will result in the rehabilitation of silver. On Saturday in some quarters, fine bars were quoted at 51½d. buyers, but it was very difficult to obtain supplies. The exchanges in India responded to the impetus given on this side, the rate for telegraphic transfers being equal to about 1s. 7 13-16d. to 1s. 7½d. Rupee paper also marked a most extraordinary rise to 95 95½ for the Four-and-a-Half and 86½ to 87 for the Four per Cents.

YESTERDAY the price of bar silver again advanced. Rather less than £50,000 per Euclid, from Brazil, came to hand, and this, together with some small parcels, found buyers at 52½d. per oz., marking a rise of almost ½d. since the close of the week. No business was done in Mexican dollars, but 51½d. was nominally quoted. All the Eastern exchanges, too, were higher. From India the rate for telegraphic transfers was equal to a fraction over 1s. 8d., while the respective rates in Shanghai and Hong Kong were 3s. 9½d. to 3s. 9¾d., and 5s. 3d. to 5s. 3½d. Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Rupee Paper, however, fell almost as suddenly as it rose at the end of last week. Last night the closing price was only a little over 93, while the Four per Cents. were scarcely changed.

WE reproduce elsewhere four valuable letters that have appeared in the Calcutta Englishman on this question from the pen of "R. H. H." The initials will be recognised by all Anglo-Indians as those of a high financial authority.

APROPPOS, we learn from the Pioneer received by this mail, that the latest convert to bimetalism, according to Simla gossip, is the Finance Minister, Major Baring. The Pioneer adds:—"It may not be generally known that the Executive Council of the Governor General have been of late tempering their toilsome task of army reorganisation with mild arguments on the currency question."

WE quoted last week a paragraph from the Indian Mirror, in which credit was given to Sir Louis Mallet for his bold and statesmanlike attitude at the Paris Monetary Conference. From the following, which appeared in the Times money article last Tuesday, it will be seen that Sir Louis's boldness is not looked on in Printinghouse-square as favourably as it is in Calcutta. Seeing, however, that he represents India at the Conference, this perhaps need hardly surprise us:—

"The approach of the date for resuming the meetings of the Monetary Conference in Paris suggests the expediency of a reconsideration by the Government of their policy of sending delegates to it. It is not improbable that the Conference will only meet simply to adjourn; but although nothing may come of it directly—and there is no question in any case of this country agreeing to anything which would affect our adhesion to a single gold standard—it is yet to be feared that the presence of our delegates is not altogether the indifferent matter it was at first supposed to be. Until the Conference had actually met it seemed only an act of courtesy to the Governments of France and the United States to accept their invitation, provided we made it clear that we were not thereby committed to the acceptance of bimetallism. It seemed also reasonable, for the sake of India, that we should undertake on its behalf to co-operate in any proper measures for increasing the employment of silver and so raising its price. But now that the Conference has met, and we have had its proceedings before us, the question assumes a different aspect. No one can read the account of these proceedings without being assured that the presence of English delegates at the Congress is most unfortunate, and will act most injuriously on the reputation of the English Government. Whatever the Governments of France and the United States may say, the basis of the Conference is a fundamentally erroneous conception of the functions of government in regard to a metallic currency—a conception, at any rate, utterly opposed to the essential and traditional principles of our own currency system. The English idea, which is also the orthodox economic idea, is that a Government, in dealing with a metallic currency, does nothing but make a 'declaration.' It stamps a metal in a certain way in order to guarantee its weight and fineness, but it follows the wishes of its subjects in the selection of a metal, and pretends to no sort of function in the way of regulating the supply of the metal itself, so as to make money cheap or scarce. The heretical idea, on the contrary, is that a Government ought to take care to keep money abundant, or possessed of some such quality, besides the essential qualities which make it useful as money; in other words, to do for its subjects what they will do best for themselves, and which it will probably not be able to prevent them doing for themselves by all the regulations in the world, while its attempted interference will probably be mischievous. This heresy has been repeated ad nauseam at the Conference, with English delegates not only standing by, but with the most prominent of them, Sir Louis Mallet, in the name of India, rather encouraging the heresy. The resulting position for England in the Conference has been most humiliating. With a currency system of which the business world and our most distinguished economists are proud, we send delegates to a Conference in which that system is assailed and vilified by second and third rate economists, or by people who are not economists at all, and these delegates have not a word to say in disapproval. The subject is so important that we may suggest to those members of Parliament who have any regard for the principles of political economy and of a sound currency the expediency of calling in question the conduct of the Government in the matter. It may be said, perhaps, that Sir Louis Mallet represents a specially Indian view. But this is not so. The Government of the British Empire is one and indivisible, and Sir Louis Mallet's language will certainly be interpreted abroad as in some way representative of English opinion, whereas it is no way representative. It would be a great mistake to let English delegates return to the conference unless with very different instructions from what they seem to have had. If we are to co-operate with foreign Governments at all in restoring silver it ought to be in some other way. A petition in a sense contrary to what we are expressing is now lying for signature at some banks in the City, but the best City opinion, it should be understood, is entirely opposed to the views of the petitioners. If it were thought that there was any real chance of a disturbance of our monetary standard this opinion would very quickly show itself."

In the above disquisition there is a sublimity of absolute unquestioning faith in "the orthodox economic idea" that is really touching. And the old definition of orthodoxy is most admirably illustrated by the phrase which is naively used—"the English idea, which is also (? therefore) the orthodox economic idea." Without wishing to array ourselves unreservedly on the side of the bimetalists, we would take leave to point out that no reform, monetary or otherwise, could ever be introduced anywhere if "orthodoxy" is to be the inflexible rule, and if "heresy" is to be flouted as the Times here flouts it, as the views of "second and third rate economists or people who are not economists at all." It will be observed that the august economist who thus treats his opponents de haut en bas offers us no shred of argument to support his imperious orthodoxy. Unless, indeed, the two "probably" clauses are to be considered in the light of arguments; and they only make the bare assertions (1) that Government interference in the proposed direction will "probably" be mischievous, and (2) that Government will "probably" not be able to do something or other—to which it is quite open to the other side to reply that "probably" both these assertions will prove untrue. In the Times money article of Wednesday the subject was again discussed in the following paragraphs:—

"M. de Thoerner, the Russian delegate at the Paris Monetary Conference, has just submitted an interesting report to his Government on the proceedings of that conference. His conclusions are that Russia, while under the régime of inconvertible paper, should prepare for the resumption of specie payments by permitting the circulation of silver and gold at a premium, and that afterwards, when resumption becomes possible, silver should be the standard, gold being allowed to circulate at a premium corresponding to its market price in silver. 'If the price of silver,' he says, 'should remain in the relation of 1 to 18 the new half imperial would be quoted at six roubles silver.' This fixation of a premium, he contemplates, should be made from time to time by the Government, and should not follow the minor Bourse fluctuations. The conclusions of the Russian delegate, who may be considered the representative of a Government which is without bias in the matter, are thus adverse to the bimetalists, and M. de Thoerner, we observe, expressly declares that, even in the case of the market value of silver rising to the value of 1 to 15½, the Russian Government should adhere to its principle of one standard of values. With reference to the alleged interests of India in what is called the 'rehabilitation of silver' which appears to have had so much to do with the idea of giving India a separate representation at the Monetary Conference, we may point out, by way of supplement to our remarks in yesterday's article, that the very assertion of these alleged Indian interests, instead of being an excuse for our Government permitting itself to be misrepresented at the Conference, was really a reason for adopting special precautions against misrepresentation. There is a fatal economic error in the excessive importance which so many Indian officials attach to the fall of silver and the loss by exchange, an error which has already betrayed them into the proposal of dangerous currency nostrums, from which they were only saved with difficulty by the action of the Home Government. People will not have forgotten the remarkable proposal of Col. Smith to raise the value of the rupee to 2s. by suspending the coinage of silver, a measure the very opposite of bimetallism, though equally erroneous. The present affection of Indian officials for bimetallism has its source in the same errors and confusion of mind. It is of great importance to this country, therefore, that the Indian Government, infected as it is by currency heresies, should not be allowed in any way to represent the English Government in a Monetary Conference. As we stated yesterday, we must either send no delegates at all to the Monetary Conference in Paris, or the instructions to the delegates we do send must be far more stringent than they have been. The past expressions of personal opinion by any of the delegates ought also to be expressly withdrawn. Unless some measure of this kind is adopted the stultification of England at the Monetary Conference will remain permanently on record."

AGAIN, on Saturday last, the Times had the following, in reference to the expected result of the Paris Conference:

"The opinion that the Bank of England has virtually agreed to purchase and hold a certain amount of silver in lieu of gold, against its note circulation, on the condition that the United States, France, and the other countries of the Latin Convention agree to maintain the free mintage of silver at the ratio of 15½ to 1 of gold, still continues to affect seriously the price of silver and of rupee paper. The belief is that, with such an engagement on the part of the Bank of England, the United States, France, and the other countries referred to will form a bimetallic union; that silver will accordingly be 'rehabilitated,' at any rate for a time; and that money will consequently continue abundant and cheap, the gold which is to be exchanged for silver increasing the money offering in the short loan market. We shall probably know shortly, as the result of the Paris Conference, whether anything is to come of such an engagement on the part of the Bank of England, but we cannot but express our regret at a pledge having virtually been given, as we understand has been the case. Probably no great harm will come of it, but the tendency of the Act will be to encourage the delusions of the promoters of cheap money. England will also be accused henceforth of having encouraged bimetallicism, and the charge will not be without foundation. If it is not yet too late we hope the Government will give such instructions to its delegates at the conference as will make its position quite clear. England has cut a very sorry figure indeed at the conference, and something should be done to recover the economic reputation which has been lost."

Here we have, stated more clearly than hitherto, the real objection entertained by the Times critic to the proposals of the bimetallicists—that they will tend to make money unduly cheap by letting loose the reserves of gold in the Bank of England to the full extent for which silver is to be substituted for it in those reserves. This objection would have had more force if silver had already been demonetised throughout the civilised world. But silver is still "money" in many of the most important commercial countries, and its economic position as such will certainly be more assured than ever after the hoped-for rehabilitation. So that the effect on the money market of the release of so much gold from the Bank reserves will be almost, and in the long run perhaps altogether, neutralised by the shutting up of an equivalent amount of silver.

"It is well known that up to a certain date silver bullion figured in the Bank's accounts as part of the bullion against which notes are issued, the Act of 1844 authorising the Bank to hold one-fifth of its specie in that form, and the Bank bought and sold silver when it suited them, as they now buy and sell gold. They purchased it at about 58½d. per oz., and sold it at about 60d., making a profit of about 1½d. This went on as long as the Bank was able to buy silver at 58½d. and get that silver coined into 5fr. pieces. But as a consequence of the appreciation of silver resulting from the large discoveries of gold in California, the Bank, after these discoveries, sold what it had of silver in store, and was never able, until recent years, when the measure became inadvisable, to repurchase at the price of 58½d. per oz. Since that period there has been no silver bullion in the Bank's weekly return. So matters went on until the great fall in the price through the demonetisation of the metal by Germany in 1872-73 and the measures taken by the Latin Convention about the same period to restrict the coinage of silver. What the Bank says now we believe, is that their attitude towards silver is just the same as it was. They bought that metal formerly when 15½oz. in 5fr. pieces were interchangeable with 10z. of gold, and they are not prepared to say that they might not do so again if that ratio were restored, and the mints of the United States and France were open and free for the coinage of silver. The English Government exercises no control over Bank directors as regards purchases and sales of silver; but we believe the new instructions which have been given to the English delegates who attend the conference now sitting will enable them to make the foregoing statement. This, as we have said, really amounts to nothing, and is exactly the reply which a board of directors representing such an institution as the Bank of England would be likely to give to such a communication as they have received on the subject from the Treasury. The truth is, as we have more than once pointed out, that the Bank of England can give no real assistance to bimetallicists in the matter. The purchase by it of a few millions sterling of silver will have little permanent effect on the price. But if intending bimetallic countries will be satisfied with the Bank of England doing as much as it used to do, there can be little harm so far in letting them know as much, though probably the statement will encourage bimetallic delusions abroad."

THE Times to-day makes a further attempt to enforce its view that silver, not being money in England, ought not to be thus held by the Bank of England as a bullion reserve against notes, even to the small extent asked for by the bimetallicists. It remarks that "the proposition has raised some discussion as to whether it would be prudent for the Bank of England, notwithstanding the authority conferred on it by the Act of 1844, to purchase any silver to be held against its note circulation, even if France and the United States should agree to open their mints to the free coinage of silver under a bimetallic law. In former years, when the practice existed, the Bank of England did not lose, but rather gained, but this is hardly a sufficient reason for resuming the practice if principle is against it. And it appears to be a practice hardly in accordance with sound principle. The Bank of England might just as well, it would seem, buy wheat or pig-iron to be held against its note circulation. There might be greater risk of loss in so doing than by buying and holding silver, but the difference would be only one of degree. Silver in this country is only a commodity, less liable to fluctuation than other commodities from its being used as money in other countries, but still liable to some fluctuation. No doubt it will be said there is no risk so long as the mints of France and the United States are open; but the keeping open of the mints would depend on the action of foreign Governments beyond our control, and war might arise or some other accident happen to deprive the stipulation of its effect. There would, accordingly, be some risk of loss in holding silver, just as there would be in holding wheat or pig-iron. There would also, we think, be a special risk of loss in the United States people refusing to become bimetallic, whatever their Governments might engage to do; but, apart from this risk, which bimetallicists will dispute, there can be no question of the risk arising from war or some such accident. The wisdom of the Bank of England, therefore, in guarding itself against any positive engagements is obvious. When the question of the purchase of silver comes before the Bank it must be free at the time to examine the whole circumstances and judge for itself."

ON this very important subject the Times of to-day has the following further remarks, more or less hostile to what it is pleased to call "the bimetallic delusions":—

"The answer to a question which was to be put by Mr. Magniac to the Prime Minister last evening, respecting the Monetary Conference and the suggestion that the United States and France should become bimetallic, and Germany, India, and the Bank of England enter into engagements or understandings of the kind we have frequently explained, has been looked forward to in the City with no little interest. It will be observed, however, from our parliamentary report, that at the request of the Prime Minister the question has been postponed. From this we may suppose that negotiations continue, and that it is not yet possible to announce either that an agreement has been come to, or that negotiations are definitely at an end, although the language of the United States delegate, on Saturday, is understood to point in the latter direction.

"With regard to the explanations which have been given respecting the proposition that the Bank of England should in certain contingencies purchase silver to be held against its note circulation, it may be interesting to notice as a matter of history that the suggestion of this course at the conference proceeded from the Spanish delegate, Senor Moret y Prendergast. His remarks at the conference are either not accurately reported, or were made under a slight misapprehension; as he speaks of the silver which the Bank of England is entitled to hold under the Act of 1844 as a fourth of the whole bullion to be held against the note circulation, whereas it is only an amount equal to a fourth of the gold held, and it would thus be a fifth of the whole. But in substance the proposition came from the Spanish delegate, and it has evidently borne fruit so far, though it seems now doubtful whether the American delegates will confirm the understanding that the United States Government will concede the free mintage of silver at the ratio of 15½ to 1 of gold, and, if so, whether the American Legislature and people will ratify any engagement by their delegates to that effect. The action of the American Government in the matter has all along being most uncertain and puzzling."

It is understood that 25½ lakhs of rupees, being the balance of Indian Council bills unallotted on Wednesday last, have been sold at the price of 1s. 7½d. It will be seen that the Indian Council, by fixing a minimum price for its bills, has been able to avoid letting them go at less than the equivalent price in silver at the time, and, by waiting, it has obtained a better price.

THE correspondent of the Times, telegraphing from Calcutta on July 3, gives the following summary of the notification issued on Monday, June 27, inviting tenders for a new loan of three crores of rupees. The loan will form part of the loan of May 1, 1885. Promissory notes with coupons attached, or, at the option of the allottees, stock certificates with coupons attached, will be issued. Tenders for the whole or any part will be received by the Comptroller General up to noon on Monday, the 25th inst. If the tenderer be not resident in India he must name a resident agent. Tenderers must deposit 1 per cent., or, if they tender for less than five lakhs, 2 per cent. The deposit will be forfeited if the allotment be not fully taken up. The rate of each tender must be specified in rupees and annas, and must not contain a fraction of an anna. The minimum rate to be accepted will be recorded, but not declared unless some tender is rejected only because it is below that minimum. Tenders will be opened publicly. Those at and above the recorded minimum will be accepted in the order of the rates tendered, beginning with the highest. The amount allotted at the lowest rates accepted will be divided ratably among the tenders at that rate. Letters of allotment will be issued as soon as possible. Payment of the accepted tenders may be made to the banks of Bengal, Madras, or Bombay, or any Government treasury. Accepted tenders must be paid in three annual instalments—first, before August 8, second before September 5, third before September 26, but the whole may be paid at once. Interest at 4 per cent. on each payment will be promptly paid in advance to Oct. 31. Scrip receipts for instalments will be given, which will afterwards be exchanged for promissory notes or certificates. By the last clause of the notification as originally published the Governor General reserved the right of allotting any part of the loan to native chiefs at the average rate at which it was issued to the public, but the unfairness of that provision both to the public and to the Government having been pointed out it was cancelled. Since the appearance of the notification the price of Government securities has continued to advance and has now reached an almost unprecedented figure. It is confidently expected that the new loan will be taken up at a most favourable rate.

THE Government of the Central Provinces, we are informed by the Pioneer, has been attempting to get more work out of the prisoners in the Nagpur Central Gaol than the prisoners have been in the habit of doing. The prisoners have not readily taken to the increase in tasks; and the stimulus of punishment has therefore been more freely applied. Here is a chance for Mr. O'Donnell and the horror-mongers.

It appears that, when it was announced from Calcutta that the Bureau of Agriculture was to be revived as a minor department under a director, the official pendulum had only half completed its usual backward swing. Now the mot d'ordre is, unreservedly, "As you were!" The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs on July 3:—"The new Agricultural Bureau will, after all, be re-constituted under a secretary on the lines recommended by the Famine Commission, and will take over all the departments which were transferred to the Home-office in 1879, except the Forests. The existing establishment of the Home-office will be utilised as far as possible. Directors of Agriculture will be appointed for the Punjab and Burma."

WE hear from Calcutta that the trial of Hyat Khan will take place at Lahor this month, before Mr. Justice Smyth, of the Punjab Chief Court. The Government Advocate will prosecute.

An apology, apparently officially inspired, is put forth by the Calcutta correspondent of the Times for the feeble way—now, alas, too much the fashion—in which the recent Bheel troubles were hushed up by foolish and weak concessions. It is evident that the Nemesis that must surely attend such a policy, whether pursued in India or in Africa, is coming on us in the Bheel country with more than usual promptness. The telegram to which we refer runs as follows:—

"Some misapprehension appears to prevail in England regarding the recent disturbances among the Bheels and the treaty by which they were eventually quieted. These disturbances occurred in a wild part of the Meywar State, some distance from the British frontier. The policy of the British Government has been, not to withdraw these wild tribes directly from the authority of the chief within whose territory they are, but to mediate in the case of disputes between them and the chief, affording influence and support where necessary. In the late instance of the Meywar Bheels, the native officials, being alarmed, hastily patched up a settlement upon terms which the Indian Government highly disapproved, but which it was not advisable to direct the native State to rescind, as the Bheels would say they had been deceived. It is doubtful whether the troubles in that country are finally ended, as the Bheels in the neighbouring States of Myhee Caunta have been emboldened by the success of their Meywar brethren to demand various concessions."

WITH reference to the proposed "reforms" in the Indian Army, the Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs that the Indian Government has recommended reductions of the Bengal, Madras, and Bombay armies by six, eight, and four regiments respectively, the remaining corps to be increased to their maximum strength. This was proposed by the Army Commission. It is stated that the Viceregal Council is unanimously of opinion that the Staff Corps, as originally constituted, is unobjectionable, and that the existing evils have been caused by the action of the authorities in 1866 in admitting fresh Indian officers to its privileges, including colonel's allowances, after 38 years of service. It is hoped to mitigate the evils by inducing retirement. The new pension rules, which are expected to be sanctioned shortly, provide enhanced pensions after 20, 25, 28, and 31 years' service, the maximum pension being £700 per annum, and that after 20 years £250. Inefficient officers doing general duty will probably be compulsorily retired after being examined by military boards and reported unfit for service. Unemployed local field officers may be offered special terms. It is hoped that these measures, with five years' tenure of regimental commands, will restore the equilibrium.

THE "objection statements" of the Financial Department are not generally humorous. There seems, however, to have been a certain amount of grim facetiousness about such a statement recently sent to the quartermaster of the 1st Bombay Grenadiers. The 1st Grenadiers, in their usual statement in reference to the expenditure of cartridges, put down a very large number as expended at Maiwand. Soon after the return had been sent in the quartermaster received the following "objection statement":—"Why were not the cartridge cases collected and sent into store, as per paragraph of G.O.C.?" The same objection statement was sent to the regiments who expended their cartridges at Deh Khoja.

WE learn from the Times telegram of Sunday that the Intelligence Department at Simla is occupied in preparing an Afghan gazetteer embodying the geographical and other fresh knowledge acquired during the war. Col. Lockhart will compile the part relating to Northern Afghanistan, while the southern districts—viz., those below 34deg. north latitude—will be entrusted to Capt. Maitland, of the 3rd Sind Horse. The survey work done during the Waziri expedition will be included in the gazetteer.

THE Bombay Gazette states that the appointment of Sir C. U. Aitchison to succeed Sir Robert Egerton is un fait accompli.

WITH reference to the North East frontier the Times Calcutta telegram of July 3 has the following:—

"The news regarding the inter-tribal raids among the Nagas mentioned last week is not yet fully confirmed, but there seems to be no doubt that the Serna section attacked a village of the Latha section, situate some sixteen miles from the British station of Wokka, but beyond the recognised political frontier. The Sernas are said to have committed great atrocities, killing many women and children, and carrying off forty heads. The Government will probably not interfere unless the Sernas cross the Doyang river, our boundary, which they are not unlikely to do. The political agent has gone to Wokka to allay the excitement among the Latha section. The Secretary of State has sanctioned a grant of an India medal with clasp, inscribed 'Naga: 1879-80,' to all the troops engaged in the recent campaign in the Naga Hills. The recent disturbances on the Manipore and Burmese frontier appear to have been due to the Burmese Raja of Sumjok, who laid claim to a Manipore village and instigated the local Kuki tribes to harass Manipore. Some skirmishes, in which the Munniporis were generally successful, took place during January. Quiet has now been restored, and with a view to prevent future trouble it is intended to send a British officer next winter to the frontier. The Burmese Government will be invited to send an officer to co-operate."

ACCORDING to the latest reports the state of affairs in the native State of Jaipur is far from satisfactory. Since the death of the Maharaja Ram Singh there have been constant changes in the Ministry. The senior officials have been dismissed and new ones appointed in their places. Quarrels and rivalries have ensued, and several persons have, it is said, been punished.

A CEYLON paper announces the death of Mr. Susew de Soyza, Mudaliyar of the Governor's Gate, which occurred at his residence at Grand Pass. The old Mudaliyar will be much missed by reason of his munificent charity. In addition to the Panadure church, which he erected at his sole expense, he united with his nephew, Mr. Charles de Soyza, in founding and endowing the Moratuwa College, the Lying-in Hospital in the Cinnamon-gardens, and the Alfred Model Farm. He was made a mudaliydar on account of the manner in which he received the Duke of Edinburgh in 1870. His connection with the well-known firm which bears his name ceased about fifteen years ago.

THE departure of the King of the Hawaiian Islands from Alexandria to Naples has been announced by telegraph. The Bombay Gazette thus writes of his Majesty's visit to India:—

"King Kalakua, of the Hawaiian Islands, arrived in Bombay from Calcutta, by way of Benares and Allahabad, on Thursday evening, and leaves by to-day's mail steamer for England. His Majesty has been greatly interested by his visit to India, and has resolved to take Arab horses and Indian fruit-bearing and other trees and plants to acclimatise in Hawaii. His Majesty travels as a private gentleman, and lived in Bombay at Watson's Esplanade Hotel."

THE Times of India gives the following obituary of the week ending June 14:—Lieut. Col. W. Phaire; Mr. L. G. Hynes; Lieut. C. H. Williams, 39th Regiment; and Mr. J. W. Bailey.

LIBERIAN COFFEE.

THE species of coffee which is indigenous to Liberia, in West Africa, seems destined to have an important influence on the industry of those countries in which the coffee blight has almost extinguished the Arabian coffee plant. A little pamphlet by Dr. H. A. A. Nicholls, just published by Messrs. Silver and Co., gives some interesting information on the cultivation of Liberian coffee in the West Indies, and especially in Dominica. The plant was first grown in England in the Royal Gardens at Kew during the year 1872, and from thence seedlings were forwarded in 1874 to Dominica and to several of the colonies in the West Indies. Fifty years ago Dominica was essentially a coffee country; at one time, indeed, over three million pounds of this staple were exported annually, and the coffee was of so fine a quality that the Dominica produce usually obtained the highest price in the English market. Unfortunately, however, early in the present century a blight attacked the trees, and within a few years it committed such ravage that the cultivation of coffee became almost extinct. Naturally, on the introduction into Dominica of a new species of coffee, more vigorous than that of Arabia, hopes were entertained that the leaves would be impervious to the ravages of the blight, and these hopes, happily, were fully realised, for the young plants soon shot up into vigorous large shrubs, free from blight, and loaded with flowers and ripe and unripe berries. This immunity from blight enjoyed by Liberian coffee is, as Dr. Nicholls says, of the utmost importance to the welfare of Dominica and the neighbouring colonies, both English and French, for there is now nothing to prevent the islands of the Lesser Antilles from being once more large coffee-supplying countries. In Dominica the cultivation of coffee may be said to be re-established, although it is only yet in its infancy, and the productiveness of the Liberian trees is a matter of astonishment to those of the older residents who remember the coffee estates of forty years ago. The Liberian coffee plant is much larger than that of Arabia, being, indeed, in its native state, a small tree. It has several other characteristics which render its cultivation different from that of its Arabian congener, and gives it several advantages all in favour of the planter. Its leaves are much larger; it flowers for several months, so that flowers and berries may be found on the same plant, and the berries are twice the size of the ordinary coffee bean. The ripe berries do not fall from the tree, like the ordinary coffee plant, but remain on the tree, without detriment to their quality, for weeks; an important feature where it may be difficult to procure the labour necessary for speedy gathering. Dr. Nicholls gives many useful details as to the mode of cultivation and preparation. The flavour of the coffee, he maintains, is excellent, and he adduces evidence to show that it is quite as good as Java coffee. The success of the Liberian coffee in Dominica has been so great that already large supplies of berries are exported to several neighbouring islands. The history of the establishment of the new cultivation, Dr. Nicholls tells us, is full of promise to the future of the island. The plant is thoroughly acclimatised, the young trees are unaffected by blight, and their fruitfulness surpasses all expectations. In the island there are many abandoned estates, and large tracts of virgin soil, well watered with fine streams, eminently adapted for the cultivation of coffee and limes and other tropical plants. The plant has also been introduced into Ceylon, and Liberian coffee from that island has lately obtained 93s. per cwt. in the New York market—that is, 12s. above the quotation at the time for middling plantation Ceylon (Arabian) coffee to the London markets.

STAFF CORPS AND INDIAN ARMY FUND.

WE are enabled to give the following particulars of the action taken by the central committee of the above fund in England:—A considerable time was at first spent before it was settled that the English committee was really recognised by the local ones. The confusion was caused by an announcement in the Daily Telegraph that Messrs. Watson and Co. had been appointed bankers to the fund, whereas the English committee had appointed Messrs. Grindlay and Co., and no little delay took place before the difficulty was adjusted by the account being transferred from Messrs. Watson and Co. to Messrs. Grindlay and Co. Meanwhile, the English committee had prepared a circular, which was issued in England as soon as they found that their authority was duly recognised in India. The committee then—consisting of Lieut. Gen. Spence, Major Gen. Richards, Major Gen. J. T. Harris, Col. Malleson, Lieut. Col. Henderson, Sir Wilford Brett, and S. P. Low, Esq.—has since been reinforced by the addition of Major General Ward, Col. G. G. Channer, Col. Ogilvie, Col. S. Mainwaring, and H. S. King, Esq. Great efforts have been made to get some members of Parliament to join, but though many are most favourably disposed towards the movement they have declined hitherto to undertake the duties of the committee. Mr. W. Allison, barrister at law, has been appointed secretary, and the office of the fund is at 22, Grosvenor Mansions, Westminster. He has from time to time procured the insertion of letters in the Daily News, Daily Telegraph, Standard, and Morning Post calling attention to the grievances complained of, and has been actively engaged in organising the movement in England, corresponding and consulting with officers, &c. The committee in securing his services had the advantage of saving legal expenses and he had the forms of petition ready in draft, but it was thought better not to issue them till some definite information was obtained as to the new scheme. Sir Trevor Lawrence and Lord Elcho accordingly consented to ask questions the result of which has been already published. Letters from Mr. Allison were thereupon inserted in the Standard and Morning Post, and leading articles were written for the latter paper and for the United Service Gazette. These appeared on the 2nd and 4th of July respectively. It is, of course, useless to send out forms of petition that are not based on the new scheme, and so far as they go it is necessary to wait till the new scheme is promulgated, but the committee are fully alive to the great importance of moving before the scheme comes out. Sir Trevor Lawrence and Lord Elcho will therefore ask further questions, and the secretary is engaged giving the subject further prominence through the Press. No effort will be spared to give force to the movement, and to follow it up energetically, if the new scheme prove unsatisfactory.

INVESTITURE AT WINDSOR CASTLE.—The Queen, on Friday, held an Investiture of the Bath and other Orders at Windsor Castle, when Major General Sir Harry St. George Ord was introduced into the presence of the Sovereign by the Lord Chamberlain, attended by the King of Arms to the Order of St. Michael and St. George, carrying the insignia, when the Queen, assisted by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, invested him with the Riband and Badge (by placing the Riband over the right shoulder obliquely to the left side) of a Knight Grand Cross, and delivered to him the 'Star of his dignity in the Order. The Knight Commanders of the Bath and of the Order of St. Michael and St. George (whose names, published in a special Gazette, appeared in our columns some weeks since), were then introduced into the presence of the Sovereign, who conferred upon them the honour of Knighthood, and invested them with the insignia of their respective divisions. The undernamed Companions were introduced, and received from the Queen the decorations of the Order of the Indian Empire—viz., Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals Charles Morehead, M.D.; Deputy Surgeon General Norman Chevers, M.D.; Surgeon Major Edward John Waring, Brigade Surgeon Oliver Barnett. Garter then retired, after which Major Euston Henry Sartorius, 59th Foot, was introduced, and received from her Majesty the decoration of the Victoria Cross.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

A PLANTER'S LIFE IN SOUTHERN INDIA.*

"On the Indian Hills" is the log of a somewhat short-lived trial of coffee planting in Southern India. The descriptions of a planter's life and surroundings in those parts will be read with especial interest just now, when a good many fresh men are going out to the same districts under similar circumstances, in the exploitation of the recently commenced gold-mining enterprises. The titles of the first chapter, "Outward Bound," of the penultimate, "Vanquished by Fever," and of the conclusion, "Homeward Bound," give the leading points of life here sketched. An inordinate share of the space is allotted to the outward voyage, but many "griffs," anxious for all kinds of information for the outset of their new life, will not regard this as a defect. The book is written in a bright and pleasant style, and will be read with interest, not only by "griffs," but by all who have had, or are likely to have, any connection with India.

HINDU FOLK-LORE.*

IN this little volume we have the very creditable performance of a praiseworthy attempt to popularise, for English readers, some of the most widely current stories and legends that have for centuries amused and interested the peoples of India. The legends are all well known to Orientalists; and most Indian officers have read some or all of them in their native dress, either for amusement or as examination text-books. But we think that the author has judged rightly in believing that there must be many English readers who will be glad to be able to get a simple and well-arranged account of the most important elements of that folk-lore that is already winning for itself a place in an important section of English literature; and in many cases the stories themselves, on their own merits, are well worthy of the study of other Englishmen besides Orientalists. For such readers the author has wisely prefixed an "Introduction," in which he gives a readable description of the ancient social and domestic life of the Hindus as described by the sage Vatsyayana about the beginning of the Christian era. Then we have a good chapter, giving some of the familiar scenes of the "Pancha Tantra," followed by another dealing with the equally familiar "Hitopadesa." Then follow chapters on the "Vrihatkatha," on the "Dasakumaracharita," on the "Vetalpanchavinsati" (vulgo: the "Baital Pachi," as it is called in its Hindi form), on the "Sinhasana Dwatransatika;" and finally two chapters dealing with various legends attached to the name of King Vikramaditya, forming what may be called the Arthurian cycle of Hindu folk-lore. It will be seen from this brief enumeration that the author has selected for his little book all the best-known and most popular of the fable-literature proper, as distinguished from the mythological and heroic legends of the epic and dramatic literature of the Hindus. We have no doubt that his book will be widely read and generally appreciated.

THE LAST REBELLION IN POLAND.*

THIS story, founded on fact, is told in an interesting and graceful manner. The lost cause is, of course, that of the Polish insurgents of 1863; of which the heroine, Madame de Woronzow, is supposed to have been one of the leading spirits. When the scene opens, she is living alone in London, whilst her husband is living a profligate life elsewhere. Count Jagellon falls in love with her; she at first wishes him to marry her friend Miss Golding, but after the death of her husband she ends by marrying him herself. For her sake he has heartily joined "the great cause," and now, after his marriage, he is put in command of the Polish rebels. Ultimately he is killed in action, his wife brings back his corpse to England, and she and Miss Golding mourn together, for the latter, though engaged to a young attaché in the British diplomatic service, has all along loved Jagellon. Now, however, she ends happily by marrying the young diplomat; whilst the birth of a posthumous child serves in some measure to console the poor countess for her lost husband and her lost cause.

for Children." They are translated from the Swedish of Zach Topælius by Albert Alberg. The translator tells us that they have already found their way into the French, German, Danish, Finnish, and Russian languages; and the popularity vouched for by these numerous versions is certainly amply deserved. The stories here collected are full of that delicate, yet eminently pure and wholesome, beauty which has made the writings of Andersen such welcome guests among our children. The respective volumes—which, by the way, are very prettily illustrated and bound—are well entitled, the one "Whisperings in the Wood," the other "Snowdrops." We heartily commend them to those who love to put into the hands of our little ones books that will charm their imaginations and at the same time exercise a refining influence on their tastes.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

ARMY REORGANISATION.

THE Indian Government will probably find itself on the horns of a dilemma, through no fault of its own. The new orders affecting the British army come into force on July 1; and although it is now within about a month of the time when the Childers' scheme will become law no definite orders regarding the Indian Establishment have been received. There are so many points involved, owing to the peculiar conditions under which European troops serve in India, that the military authorities are growing a little anxious. The Home Government have not so far answered the questions addressed to them from India, and no doubt much confusion will arise hereafter. In the case of British cavalry, the difficulty is to know what formation is to be sanctioned for India. Is a regiment still to consist of three squadrons? As there are to be four majors, this would involve the anomaly of a major commanding a troop. Then, again, is brevet rank to be given to cavalry majors? If not, these officers will find themselves junior to all the infantry majors, who under the new scheme will be promoted lieutenant-colonels on July 1. The sooner a despatch from home clears up these moot points the better for the interests of the service.—Pioneer.

INDIAN ARMY REFORM.

WE stated, some little time ago, that in all probability the scheme of Indian army reform will not include the formation of a sepoy reserve, although this was one of the recommendations of the commission. The decision arrived at by the Government of India has been based, we believe, on a broad consideration for the ultimate safety of the empire. If the millions which inhabit the peninsula were of the Anglo-Saxon race, then short service and a large reserve would be desirable; but, under the conditions which exist, a reserve would be a two-edged weapon, which might in times of danger be turned against those who had invented it. By this no implication of disloyalty is meant to be cast upon the native army, which has during the Afghan campaigns done excellent service side by side with English soldiers; but it must not be forgotten that 100,000 sepoys in cantonments, under the direct control of their officers, are upon quite a different level to 100,000 or 200,000 men scattered throughout every village and town, and open to the operations of intrigue. The greatest danger India will ever have to face will come from within her own borders, at a time probably when an enemy from without is menacing her frontiers; and the Oriental mind is so impressed by the force of example that a single defeat in any of the lines of approach from the west might be the signal for a revolt against our seemingly tottering authority. To mobilise a reserve of 100,000 or 200,000 men would then be a task of such difficulty that the most experienced Indian soldier might hesitate to give the necessary order; and who could guarantee that the order once given would be obeyed? The armies of the native princes have before this caused us some anxiety; but how far greater would that anxiety be if their ranks were swelled by our highly trained reservists, men in the prime of life and inured to campaigning at all seasons of the year? We can now afford to despise the levies which do police duty in the native States, inasmuch as their component parts lack strength and cohesiveness; but it would be a very different story if the mass were leavened by the addition of men who had spent, say, five years in the ranks of our own army. Given the looting of one great arsenal, and formidable armies would be arrayed against British authority. It is less than a quarter of a century since the Meerut outbreak came like a thunderclap upon the country, and the lessons taught by the mutiny cannot yet have been forgotten. The details of our military organisation have been greatly changed, it is true; but it would be the height of fanatical trust in an excitable race to form a huge Landwehr, the units of which could scarcely be controlled when once they had passed out of sight, and had become merged in the general population. By all means let "big battalions" be the rule of the native army, and let the ambition of the warlike races be fostered by opening up a career for their best men in our service; but do not impart a military tone to the civil population, which outnumbers its rulers by millions, by sending yearly back to their homes thousands of men whose minds have been saturated with an idea of their own prowess and importance, and who suddenly find their occupation gone. A Landwehr, as even a Landsturm, may be possible hereafter, when England has recovered her prestige as a great military Power; but under present circumstances it would be criminal folly to train the population of India to arms.

THE SILVER QUESTION.

It is interesting, in view of the recent abolition of the duty on gold in Australia, at the direct instance of the home authorities, of the late proposed remission of the tax on silver plate in England, and of the views expressed at the recent Conference by Sir Louis Mallet, to peruse the following paper on the silver, subject written by an old Indian journalist and forwarded to the Home Minister. Among others, Sir Louis Mallet had access to it; and it will be seen that the above points, the expediency of which is now recognised, are included in it. We do not adopt all the opinions in the paper, for instance, that of having the silver rent into a gold rent in this country; but, as some of the recommendations have been adopted, it is possible that Sir Louis Mallet, with his expressed views regarding bimetalism, is a convert to the opinions represented in it. There is a very greatly increased supply of silver and a greatly diminished demand for it. The balance between gold and silver has consequently been disturbed, to the great loss of India. The increased supply of silver has come from the greatly increased production of silver mines in America, as well as the demonetising of silver in Germany and other countries of Northern Europe. Further, there has been a greater demand for gold, and there is an aggregate loss in working it. This "aggregate loss" is well-known to gold miners in Australia but needs no enlargement in connection with our subject. The greater demand for gold has come from the making of a gold standard for Germany (and other countries), and from general increase of luxury, inducing the wearing of gold ornaments both over Europe generally and in India. In India the passion for wearing gold is absorbing, and, as the masses have very largely bettered their circumstances, they both purchase more gold and pay more silver for it. Hence the greatly increased supply of silver, the greatly diminished demand for it, the greater demand for gold, have all contributed to depreciate the value of silver. Still further, another cause is the Secretary of State's bills on India. Another, and the last, cause of the depreciation is that there is no limit to the coinage of silver rupees in proportion to the gold coinage of the British Empire. It is in these causes that we are to seek the remedies, if any. First of all, it is to be remembered that the balance is a purely arbitrary one at present. The balance represented a truth once. Since then silver has outrun gold in production. There is thus no balance now such as there was. Let us see if there is any probability of the old balance being kept, and how to restore the present disturbed balance or make its evils least in operation. It ought to be remembered that, as long as there is a gold standard in one country and silver in another, there cannot possibly be a permanent balance, and the weaker one will always suffer and its working be thrown out of gear. This evil becomes very great in the instance of parts of the same empire, as in the case of England and India. The production and supply of gold and silver, as well as the passion for wearing and using gold articles, are beyond the reach and province of statesmen and financiers. We must confine ourselves to practical and attainable measures.—Friend of India.

THE OPIUM REVENUE.

OUR opium revenue is an eyesore to English moralists and philanthropists. We had thought that the last year's debate in Parliament had settled the question for the present. For the sentimental humanitarians, headed by Mr. Pease, made no signs when Mr. Gladstone and Lord Hartington inquired of them whether they were prepared to recoup the Indian Government the loss it would sustain from the cessation of the tax upon opium. Lord Hartington's cutting remarks about the "cheap morality" of those who, while eloquently declaiming against the immorality of the opium trade, had not a word to say in favour of the poor Indian people, who alone were called upon to make the necessary pecuniary sacrifice, stopped the mouths of Mr. Pease and his friends; but, as now appears, only for the time being. Agitation in the matter has been revived. Several petitions to Parliament against the trade have been adopted. A petition drawn up by the English Positivist Committee points out that the Chinese Government has unceasingly expressed a strong desire to restrict the importation of opium; that the disastrous effects of the consumption of opium, both morally and physically, are universally admitted, &c., &c. The petition is, however, candid enough to admit that the maintenance of exceptional laws and penalties respecting the manufacture and sale of opium have been hitherto defended by the exigencies of Indian finance, and it therefore prays that such steps may be adopted as are needed to relieve the Indian taxpayer from any loss to the Indian revenues by such aid as Parliament may deem meet. On the condition that they out of deference to whose moral feelings the trade is to be abolished should recoup the loss which India would sustain thereby, no Indian would object to relieve the English nation from the qualms of conscience it now suffers from owing to the continued retention of this source of revenue. This is what the Positivists have to say about the matter. But the morality of the Christians seems to be of that "cheap" kind, so unsparingly exposed last year by Lord Hartington. Another petition was signed at the Metropolitan Tabernacle. In referring to the subject Mr. Spurgeon said he thought one of the greatest crimes which England continued to commit was the carrying on of the opium traffic. That a nation should set up a grog-shop to pay its taxes was bad enough, but it was even worse to carry on a traffic in opium to pay the taxes of the people of India. "In China," he said, "we went with opium in one hand and the bill in the other." This is, no doubt, very embarrassing to Mr. Spurgeon and his missionary friends. But we doubt the morality of India being called upon to pay to relieve Mr. Spurgeon and his friends from a false and embarrassing position. Moreover, if Mr. Spurgeon would make it convenient to pay India a visit we could show him that there are even greater crimes than carrying on of the opium trade. He would then cease to talk of the opium traffic as one of the greatest of crimes. There was another meeting at the Cambridge Guildhall, at which resolutions advocating unconditional abolition were passed. It is thus clear the English philanthropists are in earnest, and we know, to our cost, what that means. We are afraid the Government will not long be able to withstand the pressure that is being brought to bear upon it. And woe then to India and its poor people.—Amritsa Bazar Patriot.

DEATH FROM HEAT APOPLEXY.—On Monday a sad incident occurred at the Allahabad Railway Station. A passenger by the Calcutta mail, who was afterwards ascertained to be Mr. Winter, gaoler of Hazaribagh, was observed to fall down on the platform, and was found to be suffering from heat apoplexy. Having recovered somewhat, he was conveyed to the hospital, where he lingered for some time and died about half-an-hour later. He was buried at the station cemetery.—Indian Herald.

TRADE AT RANGOON.—There has been no improvement in trade prospects since we last wrote, but rather the reverse. Two failures are reported in the bazaar, for, in the aggregate, something over a lakh of rupees, and great doubt is felt in many quarters whether there are not more to follow. Money is very scarce in the bazaar, and prices of piece goods are so low as to be hardly, if at all, remunerative; and hence the prospect for any one embarrassed is far from pleasant. The rains are upon us, and for the next four or five months we may expect to live in an atmosphere of damp and mildew. The rice mills are still at work, and the river is not quite so bare of ships as it usually is at this time of the year.—Rangoon Times.

THE TELEPHONE AT SIMLA.—The telephone is giving great satisfaction in Simla, where the distances between the various military offices are often the cause of much delay. A telephonic exchange, the principle of which was explained in one of our Calcutta letters, has been established in the Quartermaster General's office, and by this means six telephones are connected.—Pioneer.

A GEM WITH A HISTORY.—A few days ago we saw in the possession of Messrs. Hamilton and Co. an unusually large ruby, which bears on its very face proof of its antiquity and of its being a stone with a history. It is a real, not a spinel ruby, and is of an irregular shape, something like a large date, about two inches long, by an inch and a quarter broad, and something over half-an-inch thick in its thicker part. The colour is a fine cerise. The stone has at some time been perforated along its longest axis, a work of surprising labour. This was probably done to allow of the stone being strung in the front of a dress with other jewels, instead of being worn as a drop. It weighs 184 ruttees. The ruby has on it some four inscriptions. The first states that it belonged to the Emperor Akbar. It seems after this to have passed into the possession of the Ranas of Oudeypore, as another inscription records that it was given by Rana Ummer Sing to Sultan Khyrun, afterwards Shah Jehan. It bears also the statement that it had belonged to Alamghier; and, subsequently, it was taken away by Nadir Shah, forming, like the Kohinoor, a part of the sack of Delhi. Nadir's army was beset by the Afghans, and these lawless tribes secured no small share of the Indian loot of the Persian conqueror. At all events, the stone was once again brought into India for sale at Delhi. Kandahari declared he was a shawl merchant, and had acquired the gem in the way of business whilst travelling in Persia. It was bought from him by a Delhi noble, in whose family it has remained until now, when it is again seeking a new owner. It is rare, indeed, to see a ruby of such a size, and rarer still to find a stone of which the history can be traced step by step for over three hundred years.—Indian Daily News.

DISTRIBUTION OF CHAPLAINS.—The arrangements for the distribution of chaplains in the three dioceses of Calcutta, Lahor, and Rangoon have been finally sanctioned by the Secretary of State.—Ibid.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE'S REFORMATORY.—It affords us much pleasure to find that the Alipore Gaol Reformatory School, founded by Sir Richard Temple, is gradually becoming a very useful institution. From the Lieutenant Governor's resolution on the subject published in a recent Gazette it appears that there were ninety-six boys in the school on Jan. 1, 1880. During the year 1880-81, fifteen from the mofussil and nine from the police courts of Alipore and Calcutta were admitted, and two boys who had escaped were recaptured. Thus the total number of boys during the year was 122. Of these, eleven were released on the expiry of their sentences, two were made over to the care of their friends before the termination of their sentences, two died, three escaped, and one boy was sent before the magistrate for trial for a theft committed in the school. The number of boys remaining in the reformatory at the end of the year was therefore 103, of whom fifty-five were Hindus and forty-six Mahomedans. The average number of inmates has risen from 49.62 in 1878, the year in which the school was established, to 85.67 in 1879, and 98.32 in 1880. During the whole of the past year the school was quite full, and fresh inmates could only be received as vacancies occurred. The manufactory department of the reformatory made great progress during the year. After deducting the cost of war materials used in manufactures, and the pay of the extra trade instructors, the net profits amounted to Rs.2,538, as compared with Rs.1,589 in the previous year. In addition to this, the boys were employed in carrying out some minor public works in connection with and the value of their labour on these works is estimated at Rs.415, so that the net profits of the boys' work really amounted to very nearly Rs.3,000. This result is, the Lieutenant Governor considers, very satisfactory and creditable to the superintendent. The trades taught were those of the carpenter, tinsmith, caneworker, blacksmith, and bookbinder, and good work was also done in the garden, which yielded a considerable profit by the sale of the surplus produce after the requirements of the school had been supplied. It is manifest that the inmates of the reformatory are being permanently benefited by it, for we see that out of six boys released during the years 1879 and 1880, and regarding whom information has been received since their release, only one is reported to have relapsed into habits of dishonesty. One of the boys who was released in March, 1880, obtained employment as a carpenter on a salary of Rs.15 per month. On the whole, this institution, for which we are indebted to Sir Richard Temple, seems to be a great success, and we hope that it will increase in its usefulness and stand a monument to the memory of its great founder.—Amrita Bazar Patrika.

STREET PREACHING IN CALCUTTA.—This is not the first time that an order of the Commissioner of Police of Calcutta has been set at defiance by the citizens. The National Paper tells the story, which is in the memory of many residents of Calcutta, how Sir Stuart Hogg, indignant at the sight of sailors and baboos, and other ill-clad persons in the Eden Gardens, issued an order prohibiting persons from entering the gardens without season tickets. Of these he had already sold a large number, when Mr. Branson headed the revolt against the order of the Commissioner of Police and led the way into the gardens without a ticket. This is the statement of the National Paper, but, if we are not mistaken, Mr. Seton-Karr took a prominent part in testing the validity of the order. The police dared not arrest, but names were taken down, and the result was that the Commissioner was shown to be in the wrong, and the order was withdrawn. Mr. Harrison seems to have confidence in the validity of his order, however, and so the question is about to be tried by the magistrates, whose decision it would be alike useless and improper to try to anticipate. But we trust the public will clearly understand that in whichever way this case is decided the question as to the right of the Municipal Corporation will be in no way affected. The fact that the same gentleman holds the two offices of chairman of the corporation and commissioner of police, and the fact that since this controversy began he has appeared sometimes in the one character and sometimes in the other, may excite a little mental confusion on the part of those who have not looked closely at the events that have occurred. But it is most important that the distinction we have pointed out should be remembered. It may not be out of place to mention here who the five missionaries are that will stand before the magistrates to-day. They are—the Rev. George Kerry, of the Baptist Missionary Society, who came to India at the end of the year 1856; the Rev. K. S. Macdonald, of the Free Church Mission, who came to India nearly twenty years ago; the Rev. A. J. Bamford minister of Union Chapel, Dhurumtollah; the Rev. W. R. James, of the Baptist Mission, who came out in 1877; and Mr. E. C. Johnson, who is an independent gentleman not connected with any society now. Some years ago he was a missionary of the Baptist Missionary Society, but on religious grounds he separated from the society and is a kind of free lance. He is a man of the highest Christian character, and has shown exceptional devotedness to Christian work in India. Some years ago he sought to work his way into Afghanistan, and, on being discovered, was seized and brought back to Peshawur and made over to the English authorities, and was then prosecuted for having against orders crossed the frontier. He was released on the promise to leave Peshawur.—Friend of India.

MR. LE BRETON'S DEATH.—Further details have reached us concerning the lamentable death of Mr. Maurice Le Breton, C.I.E. It seems that he had followed up a wounded tiger over steep and rugged ground, and that while climbing over the rocks he gave his rifle to a coolie, who, as soon as the tiger was seen again, ran away, leaving Mr. Le Breton with nothing to defend himself. Mr. Le Breton sought refuge in a tree; but as he was climbing it the tiger clawed his leg. He was rescued and brought into Mount Abu, but the wound was a serious one, symptoms of mortification set in, and ended in his death.—Pioneer.

THE ARMS ACT.—Fifteen prosecutions, under the Indian Arms Act, were instituted last year in the town of Calcutta and three in the suburbs. Of all these, however, only one was of much consequence. A sircar, employed by a Calcutta native dealer of some standing, had procured, without license, a large supply of arms and ammunition for certain agents who had come down from Cachar. The arms were meant, no doubt, for the wild tribes on our north-eastern frontier; and it is satisfactory that the sircar and four others concerned in this illicit traffic were convicted and imprisoned. Such cases well illustrate the necessity of the Arms Act.

BENGAL CAVALRY.—Col. W. Musgrave, at present second in command of the 15th Bengal Cavalry, obtains the command of the 5th Bengal Cavalry, vice Lieut. Col. Sir C. J. S. Gough, K.C.B., V.C.; Lieut. Col. E. D. H. Vibart becomes second in command of the 5th Bengal Cavalry, in place of Col. Musgrave; Major C. R. Shakespear, D.A.A.G., obtains a squadron command in that regiment, but continues to serve at headquarters until his tour of service in Adjutant General's Department expires; Major A. B. Chapman, second in command of the 1st Bengal Cavalry, succeeds to the command of that regiment, vice Col. R. Jenkins, deceased; and Major T. B. M. Glascock becomes second in command.—Bombay Gazette.

BREAK OF GAUGE.—There is an outcry against the new Rajputana Railway for failing to carry the traffic offered. A very serious block has arisen at Sabarmati, the junction with the Bombay and Baroda Railway, in consequence of the break of gauge.—Ibid.

MOUNTAIN BATTERY EQUIPMENT.—A committee is to assemble at Simla almost directly to consider the equipment and working of the mountain batteries throughout India. It is expected that the 400lb. screw guns will be generally introduced.—Ibid.

CALCUTTA FREIGHT MARKET.—At date of departure of the mail the unfixed tonnage in port stood at 5,807 tons. The market was steady, and quotations were in some instances higher. London via Canal: Dead weight, 57s. 6d.; light freight, 57s. 6d.; one feature obtained last prices, viz., wheat at 57s. 6d., and rapeseed at 61s. 3d. MOOLTAN.—The ill feeling between the Hindus and Mahomedans at Mooltan, we regret to hear, still continues, and both parties are anxiously awaiting the reply of the local Government to the memorial which the Hindus recently submitted. At Lahore the disputes between the two great religious parties have been amicably settled.—Bombay Gazette.

MADRAS.

THE MAHOMEDANS OF MADRAS.—The Mahomedans of Madras seem at last to be awakening to a sense of the necessity of improving their condition and prospects. It is notorious that in the Southern Presidency the Mahomedans are most deplorably backward in the race of life. While Hindus in the employment of the Government are legion, Mahomedans in the same service might be counted on one's fingers. And this backwardness of their condition has been due mainly to usages and customs amongst them of a most pernicious tendency. An association, the Anjuman-Islamah, has now been started in Madras on a liberal basis, and one of the objects aimed at is to get rid of what experience has proved to be evil usages and customs. The association, in applying itself to effect a remedy in this direction, is striking at the root of the causes that have deterred the advancement of Mussulmans.—Indian Herald.

THE GOVERNMENT.—The Government of Madras, owing to the late melancholy occurrence, is now singularly constituted. Mr. Hudleston, the senior member of Council, has, in accordance with the provisions of Act 3 and 4 of William IV., chapter 85, assumed the reins of Government, and is designated the acting Governor; Mr. Carmichael, the junior member of Council, who was on duty at Vizagapatam, has been summoned back to take his seat as senior member of the Council; Mr. Davidson, the chief secretary, acts for Mr. Carmichael; and Mr. Master relieves Mr. Davidson at the secretariat. It will be seen therefore that our Government is practically an acting Government, all the members thereof acting one for another. The Commander in Chief is also acting, but he has no voice in Council, and is designated by the vague term of provincial, which, according to a dictionary by our side, means "countrified," "rude," "unpolished," &c. However, if the affairs of the State go on smoothly and pleasantly, and the people are contented, it is immaterial by what designations their rulers are known.—Madras Athenæum.

THE WEATHER AT MADRAS.—A correspondent writes:—"What fearful weather we are now passing through. I never knew such grilling during my forty-nine years of living in Madras."—Madras Times.

EUPHONIOUS.—We learn that from and after June 1 the Palur station on the Conjevaram branch line will be changed to "William-bakkum," taking the name of a village close by the station.—Ibid.

CIVIL ENGINEERING COLLEGE.—The anniversary of the Civil Engineering College was held on May 30. The Hon. Sir Charles A. Turner presided. The working of the institution was on the whole satisfactory, though it was disappointing to find from the results that it no longer attracts the number of European and Eurasian youths as it used to do in days gone by.—Ibid.

THE COUNCIL.—Mr. Hudleston, the Provisional Governor of Madras, has conferred the temporary vacancy in Council on Mr. R. Davidson, chief secretary to the Madras Government.—Pioneer.

BOMBAY.

OCTROI DUTY AT PUNA.—A large brass bell was received from Bombay for which the railway company charged Rs.1-15—i.e., railway charge, 15 annas; town duty, Rs.1. Is this not somewhat extraordinary, the duty to be higher than the cost of transit? This is only an insignificant instance of the hardship caused by the enhancement of the octroi duties.—Deccan Herald.

WIDOW REMARRIAGE.—The Bhattias of Kutch have resolved to petition the British House of Commons to declare that the remarriage of widows is an offence at law and against society. It is said they are emboldened to take this step from a belief that a Legislature which makes it unlawful to marry with a deceased wife's sister may also be induced to regard as offensive marriage with a deceased husband's wife.—Ibid.

RETIREMENT.—Colonel T. Thatcher, lately commanding the 11th Bombay Native Infantry at Poona, has been permitted to retire from the service under the provisions of G.G.O. No. 13 of the 10th January, 1881.—Ibid.

MAJOR RIVETT CARNAC.—Major S. Rivett Carnac, Military Secretary to H.E. the Commander in Chief, has taken a passage for Venice in the mail steamer leaving Bombay on the 14th inst.—Ibid.

ACCIDENT TO THE GOVERNOR.—A private letter, dated Mahableshwur, the 2nd ult., informs a Puna paper that as his Excellency Sir James Fergusson was returning from Mr. Campbell's residence, the Bule Valley Hall, at eleven o'clock the previous night, the tonga, somehow or other, fell into the gutter, near the native library. His Excellency jumped out in time to prevent further mischief.—Ibid.

A GOOD DEED.—Major General Beville, C.B., has generously handed to the Bombay Government the sum of Rs.5,600, which, at his request, is to be invested, and called the "Beville Trust." The interest will be drawn half-yearly, and be at the disposal without audit of the officer for the time being commanding his old regiment, the 1st Beloochees, for the benefit of the native ranks, particularly in assisting the wives and families of deceased soldiers to reach their homes. Major General Beville served twenty-eight years with the 1st Beloochees, and it is gratifying to meet with such a satisfactory proof of the good feeling that prevails with native regiments between the commandants and their men. We hope General Beville's example will find many imitators.—Ibid.

THE LATE AGA KHAN.—The remains of the late Aga Khan are not to be taken to Kerbela, but will be removed within a fortnight from the Jamat Khana at Dongree and deposited in the western part of Mr. Dady Limjee's garden at Mazagon. An imposing ceremony will be gone through on the occasion, and the place will, no doubt, be regarded with peculiar veneration by the Khojas, who, we understand, intend calling it Hassan Abad, or, "The Garden of Prosperity."—Ibid.

RETIREMENT OF COL. W. C. ANDERSON, C.S.I.—The following Bombay Government Gazette Extraordinary has been issued:—"The Right Hon. the Governor in Council desires to mark the close of the official career of the Hon. Col. William Coussmaker Anderson, C.S.I., commissioner of survey and settlement in this Presidency and Mysor, by a public recognition of the long and meritorious services which he has consistently rendered to Government for forty-one years. Except a brief interval of active military service, in the Sikh War in 1848, Col. Anderson's whole official life has been identified with the admirable system of survey and settlement of the land revenue which has taken shape and grown to maturity since he was first attached to that department. In the course of many years spent as assistant superintendent of survey under the influence of the distinguished men to whose keen insight and sound judgment this Presidency owes its survey system, Col. Anderson acquired at once a thorough mastery of the principles and practice of that system, and a complete knowledge of the habits and sentiments of the people for whose benefit it was devised. The experience thus laboriously built up Col. Anderson afterwards brought to bear on a larger field in 1865 as survey and settlement commissioner of the Southern Division, to which was shortly added the Province of Mysor, and in 1877 as sole survey and settlement commissioner in this Presidency, in which capacity his counsel, always clear, energetic, and decided, has been at the command of Government in the discussion of all the difficult questions which attend the assessment of the land revenue and affect the interests of the agricultural classes. His Excellency in Council has observed with satisfaction that the Resident at Mysor has expressed a sense entirely in accord with that entertained by this Government of the high ability and judgment displayed by Col. Anderson in the survey of that province. Since 1874, as a member of the Legislative Council of Bombay, Col. Anderson has applied his special knowledge and judgment to the elaboration of many measures of the first importance and value. His local knowledge was also of particular service to the Government in directing the measures for the relief of the famine-stricken population in 1876-78. In now saying farewell to the last of the distinguished officers who have devoted themselves to the Bombay Land Revenue Settlement from its creation to its maturity, his Excellency in Council is sensible that Government in that department of the administration is about to lose an adviser in whom ability, energy, and judgment are combined with professional experience and thorough knowledge of the people in a measure which can hardly be reproduced."—Ibid.

THE KOLHAPUR CONSPIRACY.—The Government of Bombay have issued a resolution reviewing Capt. Ferris's judgment in the Kolhapur Conspiracy Case, and greatly reducing the sentences passed against the accused. Of eight prisoners who were sentenced to transportation for life, two are to be imprisoned for five years, and the remaining seven, as also the nine prisoners whom Capt. Ferris sentenced to terms of imprisonment varying from five to seven years, as also the pretended Maharaja, who was originally sentenced to two years' incarceration, are to be imprisoned for one year only.—Bombay Gazette.

BRIGADIER GENERAL HOGG, the quartermaster general of the Bombay Army, will not return to India at the expiration of his present leave, we hear, on account of continued ill health. Lieut. Col. Colvin, who was officiating deputy quartermaster general, has gone to join his regiment at Bellary; and Major Adam, from Mhow, is to be transferred in Col. Colvin's place to Puna. Major Jopp would, as the senior, have been appointed, but General Hume has particularly desired that he may remain at Quetta.

CEYLON COMPANY.—The nineteenth annual general meeting was held on Tuesday, at the City Terminus Hotel. Mr. George Stuart Simpson presided, and, in moving the adoption of the report, stated that the coffee crop from Ceylon for 1880-81, which had recently been realised, turned out less in quantity than they hoped for, and the price on the average was 6s. per cwt. less than last year. Nevertheless, the profits were £17,214, mainly owing to economical management. The prospect of the coming crop of 1881-82 was rather uncertain, but they hoped it would be about 5,000 in excess of that of 1880-81. The crop of sugar from Mauritius in 1880-81 was short, but the prospect was better for the coming crop. They hoped the cultivation of cinchona would in future greatly assist the operations of the company. The crop of tea on their estates in the last season amounted to 82,275lb. Better prices were being obtained for it and new markets were being tried with success. Other products, such as cocoa, Liberian coffee, and indiarubber, were receiving their attention. He looked forward hopefully to the future of the company. The report was adopted.

LAND MORTGAGE BANK OF INDIA.—The eighteenth ordinary general meeting was held on Monday at the City Terminus Hotel. Mr. J. R. Boyson presided, and, in moving the adoption of the report, stated that the directors met the shareholders with even stronger feelings of disappointment and regret than when they met them last December, for although they knew, from the threatened failure in the tea crop and the depressed condition in the Indian market throughout the season, that the year's results must necessarily be very unsatisfactory, yet they did not anticipate that they would be as unsatisfactory as the closing of the year's accounts had unfortunately demonstrated. Their dis-appointments had altogether arisen from the unsatisfactory and unlooked for results in connection with tea. It was, therefore, some relief to them to find that the prospects of the future, as regarded tea, were decidedly brighter. There seemed yet every promise of their having a much larger crop this year than last, and a better tea, produced at somewhat lower cost, and coming to a greatly improved market. The year's progress in the bank's general business had been up to the average, both as to the discharge and reduction of current loans and the reduction of current debentures. They had also sold some of their properties, which realised in the aggregate Rs.21,927 more than they estimated them at, and their general manager, pursuant to his instructions, was doing his utmost, as far as he could judiciously, to effect further sales, and to dispose of the whole of their real assets as soon as possible. In reply to a question, the chairman said that their last debenture would be discharged in 1895. The report was adopted.

A RUSSIAN RAILWAY TO INDIA.

AN article in the Journal de St. Petersburg, of which we give a telegraphed summary elsewhere, takes up General Annenkoff's parable about the proposed railway-route from England to India, via Russia. The organ of the Russian Government points, with a satisfaction that is quite reasonable and fair, though perhaps the tongue is just a trifle too apparent in the cheek, to the fact that the views of the Cabinet of St. Petersburg on the Asiatic Question are "shared by several prominent British statesmen." The reference doubtless is to Mr. Gladstone's unfortunate Midlothian utterances; and then the reviewer goes on to show how delightful will be the friendship between the two Empires "when rapid and regular communication has been established by Russia from Europe to India." It appears that, if we are to trust Mr. Gladstone's admirers in St. Petersburg, immediately the Russian railway to India is completed "the Asiatic Question will be irrevocably solved, to the advantage of the two countries (Russia and England) and the benefit of civilisation and humanity."

Now, if this statement had appeared in a German or Austrian comic paper, put into the mouth of M. de Giers or Baron Jomini, to illustrate the stupidity and credulity supposed to characterise British diplomacy, we should have smiled in the sublime consciousness that our British withers were unwrung. But no; it is demurely set forth au grand sérieux in a Russian official paper, evidently designed and expected to catch the eye and the sympathy of the present British Ministry. The Journal de St. Petersburg would even seem to hope for converts in England among a party less facile and less masterly in their inactivity than the philo-Russian followers of Mr. Gladstone; for the observant reader will notice a confidential hint—Timeo Danaos, et dona ferentes—that Russia will offer no objection to England "completing her network over Kandahar and Herat," whilst Russia is merely continuing her railway from Krasnovodsk to some unknown and insignificant village called "Serax" (?). We know not who is responsible for the query that is printed after the word Serax in the telegraphic summary that we have been quoting, and that has appeared in all our London contemporaries as we have here copied it; judging from the childlike and bland innocence suggested by it, it may well have appeared in the original Russian article. The delicate humour that could affix a query to the name of the most important strategical position on the Russo-Afghan frontier—a position in regard to which even the Duke of Argyll may possibly feel "mervous," for it is thirty miles nearer to Herat than Merv itself—is worthy of the writer who is not afraid of being thought sarcastic when he talks of England "completing her network over Kandahar and Herat," just when we have scuttled out of the whole country bag and baggage. So far as we know, this is the first time that any hint has been given that Sarakhs—or, if the Russians prefer it, "Serax" (?)—is the objective of the Russian advance from Krasnovodsk; but the light and airy way in which it is here touched upon, as an unimportant matter only mentioned en passant, and one that the British Government cannot for a moment be supposed to object to, makes it appear very likely that the next Russian advance will leave Merv on the left and go on to Sarakhs. Of that place Sir Charles Macgregor, writing in 1879, said, "With regard to its strategical importance, I think a glance at the map will show that in the complications which must arise ere the Russo-Indian Question can be deemed settled its future is likely to be a stirring one." And again, Col. Macgregor said of it, "Placed at the junction of roads from Herat and Meshed, by the Heri Rood and Ab-i-Meshed Valleys respectively, and at the best entrance to Khorassan from the north, it cannot fail to exercise a very serious influence on the momentous issue of the above question. And if my feeble voice can effect a warning ere it is too late, let it here be raised in these words: If England does not use Sarakhs for defence, Russia will use it for offence." But the Journal de St. Petersburg now tells us that, as soon as the Russian railway is open from Krasnovodsk to Sarakhs, the Anglo-Russian millennium will begin. It is possible, however, that the opinions of Sir Charles Macgregor and those of the Russian official organ are not so divergent as they might seem at first blush, when the latter declares that by such a railway—absit omen—"the Asiatic Question will be irrevocably solved."

We are no Russophobes—if by that term is understood its literal meaning, "fearers of Russia." On the contrary, we are not afraid to confess that we are of those who think that England need fear no foe, provided that England prove only true to herself. But we do not think it argues any courage in the householder to pop his head under the bedclothes, and go to sleep in a fool's paradise, when he hears the burglar climbing in at his back windows. The Trans-Caspian Railway may, by a stretch of imagination, be supposed to have been commenced by Russia with a view to her own legitimate requirements in Central Asia; but when we learn that it is to be continued to the Afghan frontier, and are invited to familiarise ourselves with the idea of its being continued to the Indus, we can no longer listen with patience to those who would have us believe that all this is done "for the benefit of civilisation and humanity."

FORMATION OF A TEA ASSOCIATION.

A MEETING of representative members of a large number of Calcutta firms interested in the cultivation of tea was held at the Chamber of Commerce on the 18th ult. to consider the question of forming a tea association, with a view to consultation and united action in matters of common interest, such as notably the regulation of the bonus system, extension of sales of Indian tea in India, dealing with blight, improvement of communications, questions affecting the tenure of land, inland emigration, and the like. The following resolutions were adopted:—Proposed by J. H. Barry, Esq., and seconded by P. Playfair, Esq.—“That those present at this meeting form themselves into an association, to be called, provisionally, the Indian Tea Association.” Proposed by Leslie Worke, Esq., and seconded by A. Wilson, Esq.—“That the rules for the incorporation of the association, as submitted to the meeting, be generally approved of, and that a representative from each of the following firms be appointed a provisional committee for the purpose of revising the rules and drawing up a scheme for the working of the association, and to report to another meeting to be held within a fortnight.” Names of firms.—Messrs. Jardine, Skinner, and Co., Williamson, Magor, and Co., Macneill and Co., Schoene, Kilburn, and Co., Begg, Dunlop, and Co., Octavius, Steel, and Co., Barry and Co., Shaw, Finlayson, and Co., Finlay, Muir, and Co., Gillanders, Arbuthnot, and Co., Grindlay and Co.; Mr. Cruickshank secretary. Proposed by R. B. Magor, Esq., and seconded by W. L. Thomas, Esq.—“That the provisional committee now appointed be requested to submit revised rules for regulating the re-engagement of time-expired coolies in the tea districts, on the basis of the rules Nos. 1, 3, 4, 5, and 6, which have been circulated.” Proposed by H. J. C. Turner, Esq., seconded by D. F. Mackenzie, Esq.—“That the proceedings of this meeting be circulated, and agents not present be invited to join the association, as also to use their influence to induce their constituents to become members.”—Englishman.

INDIAN GOLD MINES COMPANY.—An extraordinary meeting was held in Glasgow on Tuesday—Sir William Cuninghame in the chair—when it was agreed to confirm the resolution previously passed to increase the capital of the company by £60,000. In the course of his speech the chairman said he regretted they had no further news as to the crushing in India since the last general meeting. They expected that the Indian letter describing the crushing which had been telegraphed would have arrived, but unfortunately the mail was late, they could not tell how. Immediately the letter arrived so much of it as described the crushing would be circulated among the shareholders. He also remarked that several suggestions had been made as to getting telegraphic reports, and he now wished to explain why no further telegrams had been asked for. The board had been at considerable expense for the telegrams from India, and it was found that there was almost always some mistake or misunderstanding caused by them. If the mine had been in regular working the actual results might of course be easily obtained by telegram, but as matters stood, to make the message useful as a means of forming a judgment as to the prospects, a great deal more would be required. It was thought that it was better to wait for further details by the post. He might add that even information by letter as complete as it could be made at present was of no very great practical value, the result of crushing small quantities not being by any means a sure indication of the general average result of future work when conducted on a large scale. The directors were fully persuaded that the ore crushed by Mr. Severn was as fair a sample as he could make of the reef, but gold was a very uncertain commodity, and they might find considerable quantities in a few score of the first tons tried, and little or none in the next lot, or the reverse might take place. In fact, nothing less than work of a considerable time would tell them the value of their property. It was afterwards, on the motion of Sir James Watson, agreed to telegraph to Mr. Severn, requesting him to report the amount of tons crushed till date, and also the result in gold arising from this crushing.

HOME NEWS.

BORELLI TEA COMPANY.—The directors, in their report, state that the accounts show a profit of £2,760, and a balance at credit of revenue of £6,980. They recommend a dividend of 4 per cent., leaving £3,853 to be carried forward.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—The tenders for Rs.40,00,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, Rs.14,00,000, at an average rate of 1s. 7'687d., and Bombay, Rs.50,000, at an average rate of 1s. 7'725d. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 7'11-16d. and above received in full. The Council fixed the minimum at 1s. 7'11-16d., and received it for bills to the amount of Rs.14,00,000 and Rs.20,000, while bills for Rs.30,000 were disposed of at 1s. 7'¾d. There is an unallotted balance of Rs.25,50,000, in addition to four lakhs which were not sold the previous week. The new arrangement, or rather return to the former practice, of fixing a minimum price seems to have worked in a fairly satisfactory manner, and the Indian Council deserve credit for making the change. To-morrow Rs.40,00,000 more are to be offered.

THE SILVER MARKET AND THE EASTERN EXCHANGES.—On Wednesday prices of bar silver and Mexican dollars were maintained, a small business being done in the former at 51 5-16d. and in the latter at 51d. per oz. Such advances as have been received from the East show no change whatever in either the India or China exchanges. Rupee paper in India is now the subject of a great deal of speculation, and quotations received from Bombay and Calcutta show some wide fluctuations. In London, however, the inquiry which has existed for some days seems to have subsided a little, although prices are maintained for the Four-and-a-Half and Four per Cents., at 91¾ to 92 and 85¾ to 86 respectively.—On Thursday the nearest quotation for bar silver was 51¾d. per ounce, which indicated a rise of 1-16d. per ounce, the market presenting a very steady appearance. Mexican dollars were quoted, as previously, at 51d., but at this figure no particular strength was apparent. An advance of ¼ in Rupee Four-and-a-Half per Cents., to 92¼ to 92¾, was noted. The Eastern exchanges were telegraphed at previous quotations. On Friday considerable animation was visible in the market, based on a rumour that the Bank of England intended to make large purchases of bars as authorised by the Bank Act of 1844, and issue notes against the uncoined metal. This caused a rise of ½ to 51½d. in bars, business being transacted at that figure. The demand for Rupee Four-and-a-Half per Cents. rallied in sympathy, to 93¼ to 93¾, Mexican dollars being unaltered.—On Saturday the market continued to be considerably excited by the proposal alleged to have been made by the Treasury to the Bank of England respecting the purchase of bars by the Issue Department, subject to arrangements taking effect with France and the United States in reference to the coinage of silver. The uncoined metal advanced ½, to 52d., and a proportionate improvement took place in Rupee Four-and-a-Half per Cents. of 1¾, to 95¼ to 95¾. Exchanges from India have recovered 1-16 to ¾, and the China rates are expected to show an early upward movement. In Mexican dollars the quotation is unaltered at 51d.

DISPUTED LIABILITY FOR A COLLISION AT SEA.—In the Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice on Wednesday the cross actions brought by the owners of the steamships Benin and the Duke of Buccleuch were heard before Sir R. J. Phillimore and Trinity Masters. The Duke of Buccleuch was 2,024 tons and the Benin 969 tons. The Duke of Buccleuch, belonging to the Eastern Steamship Company, with a crew of ninety-four men and a cargo of general goods, was on a voyage from London to Colombo, Point de Galle, Madras, and Calcutta, and on the afternoon of March 12 last she was in the English Channel, getting towards the Start, and making about 10½ knots an hour. According to her case the Benin was seen proceeding under sail and steam between two and three miles off and about four points on the port bow, and she appeared to be crossing the course of the Duke of Buccleuch so as to involve risk of collision. The Duke of Buccleuch, which was on the starboard side, kept on her course, expecting the Benin to keep out of her way; but the Benin approached at a great speed, and although the engines of the Duke of Buccleuch were stopped and reversed full speed and her helm put hard-a-port, the Benin, with her starboard side, struck the Duke of Buccleuch's stem and port bow and did her damage. The Benin sank shortly afterwards. The Benin was a screw steamship belonging to the African Steamship Company, and was on a voyage from Havre to Liverpool with a cargo of general merchandise and a crew of about forty men. According to her case she was in the English Channel, in latitude 49 53 N. and longitude 3 8 W., making about 8½ knots an hour, when the steamship Duke of Buccleuch was seen about five or six miles off, bearing about one point and a-half on the Benin's starboard quarter, and overtaking her. The Duke of Buccleuch, at great speed, continued to overhaul the Benin, and when a short distance off and on the Benin's starboard quarter, suddenly starboarded her helm and so caused the collision. Mr. Butt, Q.C., Mr. Clarkson, Q.C., and Mr. Myburgh appeared for the owners of the Benin; Mr. Gulley, Q.C., and Mr. Phillimore for the owners of the Duke of Buccleuch.

EASTERN EXTENSION, AUSTRALASIA, AND CHINA TELEGRAPH.—The directors have declared an interim dividend for the quarter ending March 31 last of 2s. 6d. per share, or at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, and payable on July 15.

EASTERN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The directors announce that, subject to the final audit, the accounts show, after placing £70,000 to the reserve fund, a balance available for dividend sufficient to pay the fixed 3s. per share, being at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum on the preference shares, and a final dividend of 2s. 6d. per share and a bonus of 1s. per share, free of income-tax, on the ordinary shares, making, with previous payments on account, a total dividend of 5½ per cent. on those shares for the year ending March 31 last, and carrying forward a balance of about £2,700.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY.—The thirty-fourth annual general meeting of the deferred annuity holders of the East Indian Railway Company was held on Friday at the Cannon-street Hotel, under the presidency of Mr. Robert Wigram Crawford, the chairman of the company. In moving the adoption of the report and statement of accounts the chairman said the directors had now the pleasure to submit the seventieth half-yearly report, and that they were able to enter upon another decennial period of their prosperous career. The report also enabled the shareholders for the first time to form an opinion of the great changes which took place in the relations between the company and the Government of India in 1879. But in the face of the report there was not so much difference from previous reports. On Jan. 4 the gross estimated receipts up to Dec. 31 were £1,852,583, though they actually did amount to £1,854,845, a closeness to the estimate which would do credit to the most accomplished Chancellor of the Exchequer. The working expenses, estimated at £648,853 came to £622,479. It was supposed that with these figures they would earn a dividend of about 15s.; instead of that they gave the shareholders a dividend of 17s. 6d. That, added to the 27s. paid out of the proceeds of the first half-year, added to the guaranteed 4 per cent., produced for the first year of the new working a dividend upon the deferred annuity capital of £6 4s. 6d. The Government of India obtained as their share, under the new arrangement, in round numbers, £605,000 as net revenue. The effect of the change upon the capital of this company had been to increase it, at present prices, by £4,962,352 above what it stood at the last moment of the "old dispensation." Turning to the past half-year he said the gross receipts had been £2,104,666, and net receipts £1,472,166. As last year they made a dividend of 27s. they might fairly look forward to something about that for this year, and it might possibly come to 30s. A competition was now springing up between the Bombay and Baroda Company for the traffic to Delhi, and it behoved this company to remedy any defects in its communications between Calcutta and Delhi. The people of Calcutta must, he said, however, render some assistance to this company if they wished to keep a part of the trade in their hands. He pointed out that there were certain local charges, heavy port dues, &c., in Calcutta, which it was absolutely necessary to reduce if this company was to be enabled to meet the present competition. After remarking upon the question of coal, which materially affected their interest, the provident fund, and other matters, he concluded by formally moving the adoption of the report. This was seconded by Mr. Charles Freshfield, M.P., and, after a very brief discussion, unanimously adopted. The retiring directors and officers of the company were duly re-elected, and the meeting terminated with the usual compliment to the chairman.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY, JUNE 27.

RECENT RUSSIAN CONQUESTS.

Viscount SANDON asked the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether he was now in a position to state the number of the population and the extent of the territory of the Tekke Turcomans recently annexed to the Russian Empire; whether he could give an approximate estimate of the distance of the new frontier of Russia from the boundaries of Afghanistan, and also from Herat; and whether he would obtain such information from her Majesty's Embassy at St. Petersburg as would enable him, before the end of the session, to place a map in the library of the House showing the extent of this important extension of the Russian Empire in Central Asia.

Sir C. DILKE: Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at St. Petersburg has been informed by the Russian Minister for Foreign Affairs that the territory annexed to Russia is the Tekke oasis, including Askabad, that the boundaries are not yet marked out, but that the delimitation is in course of execution. I am informed that the distance from Askabad to the Afghan frontier is about 190 miles, and from Askabad to Herat about 310 miles. Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at St. Petersburg will be instructed to send home any map that may be published in Russia showing the boundaries of the annexed territory, and a copy shall be placed in the library.

Viscount SANDON: Is Askabad the boundary of Russia?

Sir C. DILKE: We do not know; but Askabad is the furthest point that has any name on the map.

SUBSIDIES TO THE AMEER OF AFGHANISTAN.

Viscount SANDON, in the absence of Mr. Stanhope, asked the Secretary of State for India whether he would state the total amount of the subsidies in money, independently of gifts of arms, which had been granted to the Ameer Abdurrahman.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: So far as can be ascertained from the letters and telegrams from India, the total amount which has been paid to Abdurrahman is rather more than 39½ lakhs. Of this sum 9½ lakhs is money which was found in the Cabul Treasury when the city was occupied in October, 1879. In addition, the Ameer's governor at Kandahar is receiving a temporary subsidy of Rs. 50,000 a month. This arrangement, I understand, is at present intended to continue for six months.

Mr. MACFARLANE asked whether the money was a gift or a loan.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said it was a gift. In English money it would be about £390,000.

FLOGGING OF PRISONERS IN INDIA.

Mr. T. THOMPSON asked the Secretary of State for India whether prisoners in India ordered by the governors of prisons to be flogged had in all cases an opportunity of being heard in their defence before some person in authority independent of the prison executive.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: The powers of a superintendent of gaols as to the infliction of corporal punishment for prison offences are regulated by different Acts for the various presidencies, which acts are supplemented by rules made by the local authorities. Throughout the Bengal Presidency the superintendent is, by the Prisons Act 26, of 1870, empowered to order corporal punishment but in case of repeated offences against prison discipline he is directed to bring the matter to the cognisance of a magistrate, who is empowered to hold an inquiry upon oath, and it is only in these cases that the prisoner has an opportunity of being heard before an independent authority. No corporal punishment is to be inflicted in any of the presidencies except in the presence of the superintendent, and with the sanction of the medical officer. I have already stated, in answer to the hon. member for Dungarvan, that the large number of corporal punishments in the gaols of Bengal has attracted the attention of the Governments of Bengal and of India; that provisional orders have been issued which have already had the effect of greatly diminishing their number; and that further inquiries have been instituted with the view of substituting, in many cases, a less objectionable form of punishment. (Hear, hear.)

OPIUM IN BRITISH BURMA.

Sir W. LAWSON asked the Secretary of State for India whether the measures recommended by Mr. Aitchison, chief commissioner of British Burma, for prohibiting the traffic in opium, the consumption of which article he declared to be "affecting the very life of this young and otherwise prosperous province," had been carried out.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: The principal measures recommended by Mr. Aitchison, which are embodied in the draft orders of the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah (vide page 17 of Parliamentary Return) has been carried into effect. The number of shops for the retail sale of opium has been reduced from 68 to 27—with effect from April 1 last. From the same date also the rates at which opium is supplied by the collector to a farmer, licensed vendor, or medical practitioner, have been raised from 24 rupees to 28 rupees in Arakan, and to 32 rupees a seer in Pegu and Tenasserim. Three other recommendations were made by Mr. Aitchison in connection with this subject which do not appear to have been adopted. They are as follow:—1. That opium should only be consumed on the premises, and that the possession of opium in any quantity, however small, outside the shops, except under a pass from the collector, should be illegal. 2. That habitual opium smokers should be placed under restraint, and required to find security for their good behaviour. 3. That a Commissioner of Excise should be appointed for Burmah.

Sir W. LAWSON asked whether the parties had received compensation. (A laugh.)

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: I am not aware of it.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY, JUNE 28.

THE PROPOSED INDIAN LOAN.

Mr. K. CROSS asked the Secretary of State for India whether in order to obtain the highest subscription price for the proposed India loan of three crores of rupees, such arrangements could be made as would enable intending applicants to tender in England in sterling as well as in India in rupees.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: In all Acts of Parliament which have been granted since 1858 to enable the Secretary of State in Council to raise money in the United Kingdom on the credit of the revenues of India the whole amount to be charged on the revenues of India has been limited. The point involved in the question is whether the Secretary of State, acting as the agent of the Governor-General in Council, can, without the previous concurrence of Parliament, receive money in London for an Indian rupee loan. In 1858 a bill was introduced into Parliament containing a clause empowering the East India Company to receive subscriptions in the United Kingdom for loans opened by the Governor General in Council, the precise object suggested in the question; but, after considerable discussion, the clause was withdrawn. In 1859 the Secretary of State (Lord Stanley) was asked whether it were necessary for him to apply to Parliament every time he required a loan for money; and he replied that the Secretary of State might raise what money he required without the sanction of Parliament, but only by a circuitous process. The Government of India might, by its agent here, raise the money; but he added that such a course, although within the letter of law, would be contrary to its spirit. I do not think that under these circumstances it would be desirable to make such arrangements as are suggested in the question. (Hear, hear.)

THE GOVERNORSHIP OF MADRAS.

Mr. ARNOLD asked the Secretary of State for India whether, considering that the charge of the establishment of a Governor and two members of Council in the Presidency of Madras amounts to £38,000 a-year, and in view of the large financial saving which would accrue to India by the substitution of a Lieutenant Governor, as in Bengal, he intended to abstain from appointing a successor to the late Mr. Adam until a final decision had been arrived at on the subject. He desired to explain that the question was a repetition of a question put by Lord Camperdown in the House of Lords prior to the appointment of Mr. Adam, in reply to which it was stated on the part of the Government, by Lord Northbrook, that, though the appointment of Mr. Adam could not be delayed, the matter was well worthy of consideration, and that it would be discussed and decided by her Majesty's Government after taking the opinion of the Governor General in Council.

The SPEAKER said that the hon. member was out of order. He was quoting what had been said in the other House of Parliament during the present session.

Mr. ARNOLD said his object was merely to learn the decision of the Government, which he had no doubt would be satisfactory.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: I have no doubt my hon. friend is aware that the change he suggests could not be made without legislation. There is a great difference of opinion in India on the question, and in my opinion the policy of the suggested change is open to a very great deal of doubt. But in any case the necessary legislation to be obtained with the consent of Parliament would be a work of considerable time, and under the circumstances I think it would be quite impossible to contemplate the not filling up of this office until the decision of Parliament had been arrived at. I am quite aware that in another place it has been stated that the subject was well worthy of consideration, and that the attention of the Government of India was directed to it. The opinion of the Government of India has not been formally communicated to me, but I have been in communication with my noble friend the Governor General on the subject, and the result of these communications is that legislation on the question cannot, within a reasonable time, be initiated.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY, JULY 4.

THE STAFF CORPS.

Sir TREVOR LAWRENCE asked the Secretary of State for India whether it was a fact that service in a Queen's regiment out of India did not count for pension in the Staff Corps, and that several officers who had exchanged into or been transferred to the Staff Corps in ignorance of this condition had found themselves deprived of all the advantages of their former service, so far as pension was concerned. And whether any alteration of the pension and retirement regulations was contemplated, so as to give officers in the position described the benefit towards pension of the full period they may have served, whether in or out of India.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: The rule is that an officer's service for Indian pension counts from the date of his first landing in India, but he is only then entitled to pension after the fixed periods laid down for Indian retirements if not less than one half of the required period shall have been passed in the Staff Corps. There is no present intention of making such alteration in the Staff Corps pension rules as to admit as Indian service for the Indian pension service performed before an officer's arrival in India. All officers are fairly supposed before joining the service to have made themselves acquainted with the conditions under which they do so; but I will make inquiry whether they are subject in this respect to any disadvantages which require consideration.

EXCISE REVENUE OF BRITISH BURMA.

Mr. O'DONNELL asked the Secretary of State for India whether it was already known early in 1880 that the excise revenue of British Burma had largely increased, and that the most of this increase was due to an increase in the consumption of opium; whether the consumption of alcoholic drinks was spreading both in Burma and Bengal, and the revenue from the Excise Department on the sale of intoxicating liquor increased annually; whether the statement was accurate that in the single year 1879-80 the number of shops licensed by the Government to sell intoxicating spirits to the native population increased from 3,911 to 4,981; whether it was the case that instructions were issued to the administrative officials throughout the various collectorates and sub collectorates to ascertain in what districts Government drink shops would be opened with greatest profit to the revenue; and whether complaints had been repeatedly addressed to the authorities that these proceedings of the revenue authorities were steadily sapping and ruining the sober habits of the Indian community, and constantly creating circles of habitual drinkers in every district.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: In May, 1880, the Chief Commissioner of British Burma drew attention to the growth of excise revenue in that province, which it appeared was to a great extent due to an increase in the consumption of opium. The subject having been brought to the notice of Government, steps have been taken, as stated in the House last Monday in reply to the hon. member for Carlisle, to check the consumption of opium, which will, it is anticipated, involve a sacrifice of revenue of about £50,000 a year. The increased consumption of spirits in Bengal and British Burma is attributed in a great measure to a general advancement in prosperity; it is also to some extent due to the adoption of the out still system, whereby a weaker and less injurious spirit is provided in place of the stronger liquor produced at the Sudder distilleries. It is impossible to estimate to what extent there has been an increased consumption of spirits, as the increase in the number of out stills in Bengal is known to have checked illicit distillation, and the people now drink what has paid excise instead of illicit spirit; the out-still liquor has also in some measure displaced deleterious drugs. The commissioners of divisions generally concurred in opinion that there has been no increase in drunkenness in consequence of the out-still system, which system, while providing for the wants of the people in a legitimate manner, has been the means of bringing in an increase of revenue to the State. The number of shops in Bengal under the Sudder distillery system has decreased from 1,938 to 902, while those under the out-still system have risen from 3,911 to 4,981. There would, therefore, appear to have been a net increase in the number of shops of 34 in 1879-80, as compared with 1878-79. It is, however, not possible to make any accurate comparison of the number of shops in each of these two years as the out-still system was not introduced or extended uniformly, and the return from some districts accordingly shows shops which were only open for a part of either year. With regard to the concluding part of this question, there is no evidence of repeated complaints having been addressed to the authorities against the proceedings of the revenue authorities. The Rev. Thomas Evans, of Monghyr, in a letter of the 28th of June, 1880, drew the attention of the Governor General to what he considered to be the ill effects of the out-still system in encouraging drunkenness, but on investigation his statements were considered by the collector of Monghyr to have been "entirely unfounded." Complaints have also been made that the establishment of spirit shops in the vicinity of tea-gardens in Assam and Darjiling has led to increased drunkenness among the coolies employed. These have engaged the attention of Government, and the Government of India, in a recent letter on the subject, stated that while on the one hand they were far from wishing to encourage drinking for the sake of revenue, on the other hand they could not tolerate the illicit manufacture of spirit, and they were therefore constrained to provide for its legal sale wherever a demand was shown to have sprung up for it. Nothing is known of instructions having been issued to the administrative officials throughout the various collectorates and sub-collectorates to ascertain in what districts Government drink-shops can be opened with the greatest profit to the revenue, and it seems highly improbable that any such instructions should have been issued.

STATIONERY SUPPLIES IN INDIA.

Lord G. HAMILTON asked the Secretary of State for India if the attention of the India-office had been directed to the letter of the Calcutta Trades' Association of May 9, 1881, to the Viceroy of India, complaining of the recent withdrawal by the Secretary of State for India of the discretion given to the Government of India to obtain their stationery supplies in India, although "the system of resorting to the local market had, in fact, resulted in a confessed success; for not only had the Government secured better and more suitable supplies, but a considerable pecuniary saving to the State had also, it was believed, been effected;" and if he was able to contradict the above statements.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: The letter of the Calcutta Trades' Association of May 9, 1881, has not been communicated to me by the Government of India; but that Government has drawn my attention to certain recent supplies to which it refers. I am not satisfied that the system of resorting to the local market has resulted in a success, or that a considerable pecuniary saving to the State has been effected, as that statement is opposed to the information forwarded to me by the Store Department of the India-office. On that question I am in correspondence with the Government of India.

THE SILVER CONFERENCE IN PARIS.

Mr. MAGNIAC, who had a question on this subject, stated that at the request of the Prime Minister he would postpone putting it at present.

Mr. GLADSTONE said he was obliged to his hon. friend for postponing the question with regard to details, but he might state on the main matter that there never had been any intention on the part of the Government, or any proposition from them, to alter in any degree whatever the standard upon which our present system of currency depended. (Hear, hear.) The only question raised in the Indian correspondence going forward had been with regard to the particular provision in the Act of 1844 as to the holding of a certain portion of silver bullion against notes.

Mr. E. STANHOPE asked whether it would be possible to lay on the table a copy of the speech of Sir L. Mallet at the Silver Conference.

Mr. GLADSTONE said that the Treasury had not interfered with respect to the representation of the Indian Department.

COLONIAL HANDBOOKS, MAPS, &c.

NOW READY.

CANADA—including Ontario, North-West Territory, Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia, &c. With New Coloured Map. Crown 8vo., 288 pp. Cloth, 5s. Times.—Messrs. Silver and Co. have just published a new 'Handbook to Canada,' on the same plan as others of their well-known Colonial series, to which it belongs. The main purpose of the book is, of course, practical, though even as a guide to the visitor it will be found serviceable; its special utility, however, consists in the information it contains on the political, social, agricultural, and industrial condition of our great American colony—just such information as intending emigrants are likely to want. Ample, well arranged, and recent statistics are given on all points that can be so illustrated; information as to the value of land in the different districts, and of its various products, means of carriage, education, church, &c. The chapter on Manitoba, about which much has been written recently, is especially interesting, containing a brief, but clear and well-supported, statement as to its progress and present condition. The growth of this province during the last ten years in population and the development of its resources is quite wonderful, considering all the conditions. On the accompanying Map of British North America unusual care has evidently been bestowed.

Graphic, May 14, 1881.—"We are already acquainted with Messrs. Silver's Handbooks to Australasia and South Africa. They are concisely written, accurate in information, and full of practical details. The same praise may be accorded to the volume now before us, which (with the exception of Newfoundland, which has not joined the Dominion Confederation) comprises a survey of the whole of British North America. Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, and British Columbia are successively brought under review, the reader's researches being aided by an excellent map. To the intending emigrant the descriptions of Manitoba and British Columbia will be especially attractive. The former region is well known for its wheat-growing capabilities. The climate, though undeniably bitterly cold in the winter, is declared to be pleasant and wholesome. British Columbia possesses the merit—at all events in its coast districts—of a climate which, in its average temperature, and in its freedom from extremes of heat and cold, more resembles that of the mother-country than any other colony. It only needs to be better known to draw a large contingent of settlers from these overcrowded islands."

Are considered by all who have heard them to combine a greater amount and resonance of tone, consistent with adaptability of size, shape, and elegance of appearance than those of any other manufacturer.

KIRKMAN AND SON'S

OVERSTRUNG

GRAND AND COTTAGE PIANOS

It being considered by some competent judges that the German method of over or cross-stringing Pianos is attended with great advantage, Messrs. Kirkman and Son are now manufacturing both Grand and Cottage Pianos on this principle, the latter having the plain Sticker Action, which is not the case with Pianos of this class manufactured by other makers; in fact, the extreme simplicity of the action used by Messrs. Kirkman and Son in all their Pianos render them eminently suitable for exportation to the Colonies, where skilled workmen are few and far between. All useless checks and complications are carefully avoided, thus enabling any tuner, with however superficial a knowledge of the business, to regulate them or repair any damage they may sustain.

KIRKMAN AND SON

Have a reputation extending over nearly a Century and a Half.

There are now in the possession of the house Harpischords and Virginals dated 1758 and 1778, manufactured by Jacobus and Abraham Kirkman.

LAMPLOUGH'S EFFERVESCENT PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators, also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor.

THE PRICE OF SILVER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ENGLISHMAN."

SIR,—France and the United States—by closing their mints to the public against the coinage of silver—and India—by ceasing to borrow in England for her home charges, and by consequently increasing her Council drafts from six to thirteen (this year seventeen) millions a year—precipitated, far more than Germany, the fall in the price of silver. If it be possible for silver to rise again to its former price of 5s. an ounce, the result is at least not attainable without concerted action of these three countries. India would benefit greatly more than France and the United States from such an improvement of silver; yet these latter countries are inviting the nations to adopt bi-metallism, whilst India, like her proverbial timid Bengalee, is afraid to venture anything except the risk of being ruined by doing nothing. Her delegate at the international conference gave no better help to the cause than a superfluous assurance that India will continue to coin silver. The graceless impenitent made no confession of India's guilt, but was craftily silent about her reducing the amount, or ceasing the issue of Council bills; though it seems beyond question that bi-metallism would be revived if the international conference would reckon upon the cessation of those drafts for some years.

2. The drafts might be discontinued for nine years and more, by the Secretary of State meeting the disbursements of the Home Treasury from the proceeds of a new sterling loan to be raised yearly to the amount of £15,000,000. This would set free in India the 18½ crores of rupees now employed in meeting £15,000,000 sterling of Council drafts; and the liberated 18½ crores could be used for paying off rupee debt.

3. The terms of the new sterling loan might be as follow:—

I. The loan to be issued in India, but the gold subscriptions to be paid in to the Home Treasury, London.

II. Interest on the loan to be paid in to India or in England; if in England, the rate of interest to be 3 per cent., if in India, the rate to be 3¼ per cent., payable in this country at an exchange of 1s. 9½d. per rupee, rising hereafter, on sufficient notice, to 1s. 10½d., as the maximum.

III. Every subscriber to the new sterling loan, who may pay £100 into the Home Treasury, and bring Rs.1,000 of 4½ per cent. Rupee Paper to the general Treasury, Calcutta, for discharge, might receive (1st) the current market price for his Rs.1,000 of 4½ per cents., (2nd) £100 stock of the new sterling loan, with a guarantee that the stated rate of interest thereon will not be reduced for twenty years, and with the option of receiving that stock in parcels of £5, £10, £20, and so forth. Present holders of 4½ per cents., by tendering their paper, would realise profit by selling their allotment of guaranteed sterling paper, and in addition they would get full market price for their 4½ per cents. and somewhat more. Government could afford to give an enhanced price, inasmuch as for every crore of 4½ per cents. so paid off 17 per cent. would be saved in loss by exchange on an equivalent amount of consequently unissued Council bills.

4. A sterling loan, offering these advantages, would be taken up in Europe, where the holder of the stock would get £3 for his £100. If he sent out the stock to be held for him in India he would get as interest £3 15s., or 900 pence. This, converted into rupees at 22½ pence, would give Rs.41.86. By buying a bill on London, at an exchange of 1s. 8d., the holder would receive in Europe £3 9s. 9d. But with the cessation of Council drafts exchange would quickly rise to 1s. 10d. and higher. At 22 pence, the Rs.41.86 of interest on £100 would give £3 16s. 9d.; at 1s. 10½d., the interest returned to the European investor would be £3 18s. 6d. With these results it is certain that the stock would be taken up in Europe at par or at a premium. The initial rate of exchange of 1s. 9½d. for the payment of interest in India should not be raised for one year, nor, thereafter, by more than one-third the improvement in exchange above the rate of 1s. 8d.

The rupee debt of India on Sept. 30, 1880, amounted to 86 crores, of which 24 crores were 4½ per cents., and 60 crores were 4 per cents., the Government having the option of paying off the latter on three months' notice. The cessation of 15 millions a year of Council drafts would set free 18½ crores of rupees, of which 15 crores would be employed in paying off that amount of rupee debt, while the remaining 3½ crores could be accumulated in gold and remitted to England for investment there, until wanted for meeting the Home Treasury's disbursements for the fifth year, i.e., after discharge of 60 crores of four per cents. in the first four years.

By, however, the 3rd of the terms of the new sterling loan, as suggested in para. 3, the twenty-four crores of 4½ per cents. could be included in the operation, which thus might be spread over seven years; for the eighty-four crores of 4 and 4½ per cents., and twenty-five crores of saving of loss by exchange in seven years, besides compound interest on the saving, would provide a sufficient margin for a seven years' suspension of Council drafts. Adding 2½ millions a year of borrowing for public works extraordinary, during eight years, the operation could be spread over nine years. If the principle of these suggestions be accepted other liabilities besides the rupee debt are available for prolonging the suspension of Council drafts for a further period.

The mischief is in it if, with Council drafts suspended for ten years or more, the bi-metallic conference could not find a way for restoring the former price of silver. Accordingly, the Government of India might go one step further and, besides stopping Council drafts for a long period, join the bi-metallic union, by declaring gold as legal tender in India as a relative value to silver of 1 to 15½. On the cessation of Council drafts exchange would quickly rise to 1s. 10d. or higher, and with that improved exchange, gold, at the suggested valuation, would flow into the Indian mints, though only to be re-exported, possibly, for sending home the proceeds of imports; just as sovereigns are sent in boxes from the Bank of England to Scotland during the autumnal or other periodical drain, only to be sent back again in the same unopened boxes.

The admission of gold as legal tender, at a valuation of 1 to 15½ of silver, would prevent too great a rise of the rate of exchange from the cessation of Council drafts, even though France, Germany, and the United States might observe moderation, the first two in selling silver, and the United States in restricting, somewhat, the production of silver so long as surplus silver of the now existing stock remains for disposal. India, however, in joining the bi-metallic union, might allow the unrestricted coinage of silver in the Calcutta and Bombay mints. Further details will be considered in another letter.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ENGLISHMAN."

SIR,—The revenue in British India exceeds the expenditure in India by over fifteen millions sterling a year. This local surplus is employed in meeting Council bills, which the Secretary of State for India draws for paying his home charges. In my last letter I suggested that the local surplus should be employed in paying off rupee loans which bear interest at 4 and 4½ per cent., whilst the home disbursements might be met from yearly sterling loans bearing 3 or 3¼ per cent. interest, payable in India at the holder's option. The bankers who now provide fifteen millions sterling yearly on Council drafts, which do not bear any expressed rate of interest, would be equally forward with that money for stock bearing interest if it were readily saleable in India. In addition, the large class of investors in England who seek permanent investments would compete for the stock. Thus the yearly borrowing of fifteen millions sterling in Europe (an equivalent amount of rupee debt being paid off in India) would not injure the Government's credit. The examples of the United States and Hungary show that this funding operation for discharging liabilities contracted in an inferior currency (and consequently, for the most part, in a dear local market) by means of gold loans raised in the cheapest market, would improve the credit of British India. In this funding operation two main points must be kept in view:—

I. The money should be raised in gold, at the cheapest rate compatible with the issue of the new stock at par or at a premium, and with its retention, for the most part, on the Indian register of public debt for the payment of the interest in India. In the scheme this is provided for by the rate of 3 per cent. interest payable in England, with an alternative rate of 3¼ per cent., payable at a beneficial rate of exchange, if the stock be held in the Indian register for payment of the interest in India. Experts in the exchange banks might be able to advise other terms better suited to the purpose above stated; but if the terms here suggested be modified, perhaps the alteration might be confined to the rate of exchange for the payment of interest in India. A difference of ¼ per cent. in the rate of interest, in favour of those who elect to receive interest in India, seems expedient.

II. The second essential point is that English capitalists should have a strong inducement to send their new stock to India, and that, in response to their movement, there should be forthcoming, in this country, sufficient purchasers to buy the stock from the first hands. As the subscriptions to the new loan would be payable in gold, in London, the original subscribers would be in Europe, and they would include two classes, viz., those who seek a permanent investment, and the banks, which additionally seek a means of remittance to India. Of the permanent investors, the greater number would doubtless send their stock to this country for the advantage of the extra rate of interest, and that advantage would increase the number of those investors. On the whole, it seems probable that a large part of each yearly issue of the new stock would be taken up by permanent investors, leaving the residue only for transmission to India for sale. Hence, there would be no lack of buyers for this residue of much less than fifteen millions sterling, inasmuch as fifteen crores of rupee paper would be paid off yearly, and that amount of rupees would be thrown on the local market for reinvestment, practically, in the new stock, if the first holders do not prove too exacting in the price asked. It would be necessary to time the discharge of the fifteen crores of rupee paper and the issues of the new sterling stock, so that, on the one hand, the money set free by the discharge of the rupee paper shall be available for buying new stock from the first holders, and, on the other hand, those whose rupee paper has been paid off shall not be at a disadvantage in settling the price of their new purchases. It is evident, however, that with every endeavour on the part of the Government to hold the scales evenly between local and European investors, the latter will have the whip hand of the former ; in other words, the yearly loan would be readily taken in Europe at a favourable price, and would (nearly the whole of it) be transferred to the Indian register to be held in this country. Of the present rupee debt of eighty-five millions sterling, about twenty-four millions are held in England. These twenty-four millions would be paid off by the funding operation, whilst the twenty-four millions of new sterling paper which would replace that Enfacéd Rupee paper would, for the most part, be held in India. Thus, the funding operation, though it would start with the borrowing of gold in London, would end by transferring nearly the whole of the new sterling loan to the Indian register, with the final result that, of India's registered debt as raised in India, a very much smaller amount than at present will be held in England for the payment there of interest. Other important details must be considered in a subsequent letter.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ENGLISHMAN."

SIR,—I think I showed in my last two letters that, were the rupee debt of India to be paid off by means of gold loans to be raised for meeting the yearly disbursements of the Home Treasury, the Government, for ten years or more, would save nearly three and a-half millions sterling a-year in loss by exchange, while the gold loans would be issued under conditions and in circumstances which would ensure the transfer of nearly the whole of the new loans to the Indian register for the payment of interest in India. We shall now consider how the stoppage of Council bills for ten or more years would affect the means of providing remittances for the trade of India. I am sorry that, to this end, I must inflict on you a table of statistics :—

* Owing to the commercial crisis in 1866, the amount of Enfacéd Paper held in London increased from £7,657,480 in December, 1865, to £11,790,344 in January, 1866.

The following remarks are suggested by this table :—1. Were the disbursements of the Home Treasury to be met by yearly loans, Government stores would be provided without issuing bills on India; railway materials are similarly provided. Hence the net exports, which require settlement by bills and bullion, are those struck on imports, exclusive of Government stores and railway materials. The amount may be reckoned at 26 crores. Over three crores of export, export of securities, have lately been paid for through Council drafts, but this export would cease under the suggested funding operation, leaving 26 crores for settlement. I think I have seen somewhere a conjecture by competent authority that the amount of balance of trade settled by private bills ranges between four and six millions sterling, and this table supports the conjecture. We may assume the amount of such bills at five crores of rupees.

2. There remain, then, 21 crores for settlement. In what proportion would these be provided by (1stly) gold and silver; (2ndly) sale of the new gold loan paper in India? According to the table, it seems expedient that gold and silver enter more largely, and paper to a lesser extent than hitherto, in the yearly settlement. Thus the gross amounts for the groups of years, for which yearly averages are given in the table, show the following results. Crores and lakhs of rupees :—

The new coinage is in diminishing percentage to the total imports and exports. The disparity would be greater could the increase in quantities of imports and exports be compared, for which diminished prices, the increase in value implies a very much larger proportionate increase in quantities. The increased quantities, too, were drawn from or were exchanged over larger tracts of country, and both of these circumstances necessitated the use of amounts of coin larger both in tale and value. There is yet another indication that the metallic currency is being starved, whilst trade has greatly increased. In the first two groups of six and seven years, ended March 30, 1873, the net imports of gold and silver exceeded the coinage, but in the seven years ended 1879-80, the coinage exceeded the imports, denoting that old rupees and ornaments were melted and coined, and that the mints of native States must have melted Government rupees for their coinage. Thus, of late years, the currency has not only been starved by decrease of coinage, but it has been depleted by the melting down of coined rupees for ornaments and for the coinage of native States, also by war expenditure beyond India. The natural result is a fall in prices from a growing insufficiency of the metallic currency; and if this process of depletion be not checked prices must continue to fall, till, at length, the settlements of land revenue will break down.

3. India, therefore, could absorb larger quantities of silver into the currency than hitherto of late years, if the Secretary of State for India would only let her do so by stopping the sale of Council bills in such a way as to improve the rate of exchange. Twelve millions sterling, or 10 per cent. on the amount of her trade, would be a not immoderate sum for coin and ornaments, and for exports beyond India's frontier. This would leave nine millions of yearly settlement of the balance of trade to be provided by utilising the yearly issue of gold loans as a means of remittance to India. As fifteen crores of rupee paper would be paid off yearly, and the holders of the paid-off paper would be seeking new investments, at least nine millions of the new gold loan paper would find eager buyers in India.

4. Were India to absorb silver at the rate of twelve millions a year during years of the funding operation, the total absorption would be 120 millions. France has fifty millions sterling of silver in the Bank of France, and this represents doubtless the bulk of the extent of silver coinage which is not required for circulation in small transactions. Germany had twenty millions sterling of surplus silver to sell, and the yearly production of silver in the United States for the three years has averaged seven and a-half millions sterling, against nine one-fifth millions in 1887, and eight millions in 1876. If we assume the yearly production in the States for the next ten years at eighty millions, we shall have a total of 150 millions, of which India would absorb 120 millions, leaving only thirty, or three millions a-year, for absorption as coin and for ornaments in the countries of the bimetallic union which, as the result of the International Conference, may open their mints to the unrestricted coinage of silver. It would be well, however, for the United States to restrict the production of silver for a time below eight millions, in order to promote an early enhancement of the price of silver as an immediate effect of the funding operation, but the precise way in which that operation would ensure a rise of the price of silver must be the subject of my next letter. Here it suffices to remark that if my figures, or estimates, are fairly approximate to the truth, the bimetallic countries which may reopen their mints to the unrestricted coinage of silver will not incur any risk of depletion of their gold currencies. By India joining the union, the coinage value of gold in this country would be limited to the proportion of 1 to 15½, and with that limitation, bullion dealers, though ever so shrewd, would not readily find a large market for any extensive operation of buying gold with silver from the Western countries of the bimetallic union, and selling it in the East at a higher price than that which they will have paid, namely, 1 to 15½. I am afraid I have bored you ; but, after the manner of bores, I must call again.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ENGLISHMAN."

SIR,—In my last letter I estimated that for financing the trade of British India means are required for remitting the equivalent of twenty-six crores of rupees from other countries to India, and that, probably, this could be provided as follows, viz. :—Five crores by private bills ; twelve crores by net imports of gold and silver ; nine crores by European subscribers to the suggested yearly gold loan of fifteen millions, selling some nine millions worth of the stock in India. It may be asked, would not the price of silver be raised just as much by reducing Council bills from fifteen to nine millions, as by suspending their issues and providing the remittance of the reduced amount by stock of the new loans? Not at all. What would be the difference? Much every way. Since 1873 the increase of Council bills and the closure of Continental mints against the coinage of silver have perpetuated a condition of things in which the rivalry of Council bills and of the sellers of silver causes a steady progressive fall of the price of silver. The suggested funding operation would completely reverse this condition, and bring about an alliance between the sellers of silver and the issuers of the new gold loans, whereby the price of silver and the rate of exchange would continue to rise to their former level. Besides Council bills, silver has to contend also against the adverse influence in London of the enfaced rupee paper which, to the amount of twenty-two millions sterling, is held there for payment of interest in London by rupee drafts on India. It at any time the issue of Council bills is restricted, the rate of exchange and the price of silver should rise ; but those who would have bought Council bills can check this tendency to a rise by buying enfaced rupee paper, in the price of which the low exchange of the rupee with sterling is allowed for. Thus, the incubus of twenty-two crores of enfaced rupee paper in London weighs on the silver market just as banefully as the surplus silver of the French and German Governments.

By the funding operation these twenty-two crores of enfaced paper would be paid off, and, on the other hand, enfaced paper of the new sterling loan would be borne in India, on the Indian register, for payment of the higher rate of interest, at a beneficial exchange, which would be allowed in this country. The European holders of this enfaced paper of the gold loan would not ordinarily sell it in India, but if others who might import stock of the new paper for sale in India pressed for too low a rate of exchange, then, no doubt, the European holders would be tempted to sell and would offer a better rate of exchange.

4. At present, the issuers of Council bills come into direct dealing in exchange by their offer to pay in India, in rupees, the principal (sterling) amount of their bills, and the necessity under which they offer the bills obliges them to lower the rate of exchange in favour of the buyer. By the funding operation, the issuers of the gold loan would be extricated from this necessity. They would have nothing to do with any rate of exchange for the principal amount of their gold loans, nor with any but a fixed rate of exchange for the payment of interest in India to the holders in this country of enfaced paper of the new stock. The brunt of haggling about the rate of exchange would fall on those first holders of the new stock who may send it to India as a remittance. In selling their paper in India these importers would contend against rivalry or adverse influences which would all be enlisted in favour of a high rate of exchange, that is, of giving to the importers as few rupees as possible above the nominal par of exchange of 28. per rupee ; whereas, under the present arrangement, the Secretary of State for India sells his Council bills under adverse influences, which are all on the side of lowering the exchanges—that is, of getting from him as many rupees as possible for the sterling amount of his bills.

5. Those who would send the new stock to India as a remittance would be under an urgent necessity to sell ; but if this urgency were to be exceeded by the necessity to buy on the part of local investors in India who will have idle money on their hands through the yearly discharge of fifteen crores of rupee loans, then, in the haggling of the market, the rate of exchange might be low, in spite of the constant set in India against the importers of the new stock of adverse influences in favour of a rise of the exchange. It seven to nine millions sterling of the new loan be yearly imported into this country as a remittance against the annual discharge in India of fifteen crores of rupee paper, then the necessity of the local investors to buy may exceed that of the importers to sell ; in that case the rate of exchange would be low. But there would be safeguards against the exaction of excessive prices—i.e., of a low exchange—by the importers for sale of the new stock. We have seen (Par. 3) that the paper of the new stock which may be held in India for payment of a beneficial rate of interest in this country would supply one of these countervailing influences. In the first year possibly some seven millions only of the new paper may be so enfaced for payment of interest in India ; but the successive similar transfers of two more years would accumulate on the Indian register more than twenty millions of enfaced paper, which, though held as a permanent investment, would, when the exchange was falling low, be thrown on the market at a higher rate of exchange.

The twenty-two crores of enfaced rupee paper now held in London would also exert a countervailing influence. In at most the first three years of the funding operation, the portion of this paper, not paid off, would be drawn to India by the void, i.e., the exceptional demand on the local market for four per cent. rupee paper, which the yearly discharge of fifteen crores of that rupee paper would create. The persons whose four per cents. may be paid off would buy this enfaced paper on its retransfer to the Indian register if the importers of the new gold stock demanded for it too high a price, that is, a low rate of exchange. Other unexceptionable local investments would also be forthcoming (as may appear in the sequel as an alternative, if the importers of the new stock sought to lower the exchange. On the whole, a tendency to a rise of the exchange would be assured.

In like manner, a tendency to a rise of the price of silver in Europe may be assured. A bimetallic union of all the countries in Europe, except England and Germany, and of the United States, and India, could be easily formed. These countries would require simply to be protected against a depletion of their gold currencies through bullion dealers' purchases of their gold coins with silver. This protection would be needed against sale of gold thus obtained from the union to countries outside the union. Such sales are hardly possible in China, owing to the singular monetary system of that empire ; and danger from the only other quarter, viz., England and Germany, could be easily prevented. These countries have stated their willingness to give every possible help to a bimetallic union. It would only be necessary for them to close the London and German mints to the public against the coinage of gold. Such coinage, on the existing terms, would of course be continued in favour of the Banks of England and Prussia, but these banks might be restrained from receiving gold bullion or foreign gold coin, other than small sums, from any one except under a certificate from one or other of selected financial houses of the first repute in the capitals of European States, and in New York, that the gold was not being tendered in furtherance of a bullion operation of the kind above described. Anybody who, under cover of a certificate of this kind, effected the forbidden operation, might be boycotted by all the banks in Europe and in the United States.

The countries of the bimetallic union being thus effectually secured against depletion of their gold currencies, might open their mints without restriction to the coinage of silver. Thereby, European dealers in silver bullion would have the alternative of coining their bullion in any mint of the bimetallic union at a valuation of 15½ to 1, or of selling it at that or a better price for export to the East.

Thus, in the remittances between India and the West, influences tending to raise the rate of exchange in India and the price of silver in the West would be provided. To a great extent, the price of silver is determined, now, by the rate of exchange in London on Council drafts ; but by the funding operation it would be determined by the rate of exchange in India for selling stock of the new gold loan amid influences in India all tending to a rise of the exchange.

The result cannot be doubted ; and the best way of testing the soundness of the scheme here sketched, would be for the bimetallic union to ascertain whether the Bank of France, the Messrs. Rothschild, or a powerful syndicate, would not undertake the funding operation for the whole period it may last, on terms of the kind suggested in these letters, with a guarantee that they would raise the rate of exchange and the price of silver to their former level. I must ask your indulgence to continue this subject in another letter or two.

THURSDAY EVENING.

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson state that since the last mail the tone of business in the produce markets has continued quiet. The coffee market is quite unsettled, a portion only of the heavy supply of foreign at public sale finding buyers, and current qualities of Guatemala have given way 1s. to 2s. per cwt. Fine East India, including Mysor and colony plantation Ceylon, brought full valuations. Other descriptions sold at irregular quotations. A few rice cargoes have been reported at the recent decline. At the public sales of Indian, new teas went easier for common to medium grades. The spice markets exhibit more steadiness. By private contract only a fair amount has changed hands, prices ranging from 1s. to 2s. 1d. per lb., the chief demand being for the finer grades.

SUGAR remains without improvement. In the auctions the low sugars were all bought in excepting some Bengal, of which about 800 bags sold at 16s. 3d. for brown Dulleah.

COFFEE.—The market is unchanged. Prices are unsettled. COTTON.—The market is inanimate, and the sales reported are not worth particularising.

INDIGO.—Messrs. Layton and Co. state that the declarations for the July sale have closed with 9,200 chests, of which 3,550 chests are Madras and Kurpah. A few parcels of Kurpah have been sold ex catalogue at about last sale's rates.

MONDAY EVENING.

There are good prospects of raising the vessel. The Liburnian is an iron ship of 1,543 tons, owned by Messrs. J. Lidgett and Sons, of London, and classed 100 A1.

In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JULY 11, 1881.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, June 21; Madras and Allahabad, June 19; Calcutta, June 18.

The official reports on the state of the weather, the prospects of the crops, and the public health for the week ending June 7 state that rain has been general during the week, except in the Punjab, Sind, and Baroda, in some of the Rajputana and Central India States, and in a few districts of the North Western Provinces and Bengal. The fall was particularly heavy in Burma, the eastern districts of Bengal, the Nagpur District of the Central Provinces, and in Coorg. It is reported in some quarters that the monsoon rains have set in; but the indications are stronger on the Bengal side of India than on the western coast. The latest telegraphic reports—those of the 9th instant—show very general rain, the exceptions coinciding, to a considerable extent, with those noticeable in the weekly return. There is no material change in the public health, which is, on the whole, fair. Agricultural prospects, up to the present time, remain satisfactory.

MADRAS.—General prospects fair.

BOMBAY.—Rain in most parts of Presidency, very slight in Guzerat; preparations for monsoon crop in progress; cholera increasing in Surat; general health elsewhere good.

BENGAL.—Heavy rain in Eastern and Central Bengal and Orissa; lighter to the west; ploughing and sowing progressing; prospects generally good; prices easy; general health good.

N.W.P. AND OUDH.—Wind easterly. Rain has fallen more or less heavily throughout the provinces, but weather still hot and sultry. Prices stationary. General health good, but slight fever in Moradabad and Aligarh, and cholera continues in parts of Gorakhpur, Lucknow, Partabgarh, and Kumaun. Slight cattle disease continues in Kumaun, Lucknow, and Fyzabad.

PUNJAB.—Agricultural prospects on the whole favourable, and prices are steady.

CENTRAL PROVINCES.—Weather cloudy, with rain in most districts; showers in Wardha and Hoshangabad; land being prepared for kharif crops; cholera and small-pox decreasing; public health generally good; cattle disease abating; prices easy.

BRITISH BURMA.—With the exception of a little small-pox and cholera in places, general health good; cattle disease somewhat prevalent in Akyab, and slight in Pegu delta; rain has fallen freely; ploughing commenced in some parts.

ASSAM (GAUHATI).—Weather very hot, but rain expected; some deaths of horses at Gauhati, it is supposed from Manpur disease; fever and dysentery at Berpetta abating; agricultural prospects good: reaping of ahu rice commencing in places.

CENTRAL INDIA STATE (INDORE).—Monsoon apparently approaching, but no storms yet; health good.

RAJPUTANA (MARWAR).—About two weeks water in tanks; health good; heat moderate, winds sharp; prices fluctuating; clouds gather during day but disappear at night.

NEPAL (KATMANDU).—A fair spring crop throughout the hills; rain holding off in the western districts and much needed; at Katmandu the weather has been unusually hot, the thermometer in the shade in the house not unfrequently being as high as 85deg.

According to the Quetta correspondent of the Times, the Press Commissioner has issued a statement to the effect "that Ayub Khan, spurred into activity by the representations of his two lieutenants, Hashim and Muhamad Hasan, left Herat on June 25." The late Press Commissioner was forced to retire by Lord Ripon some months ago, with a view to the abolition of the office, so we suppose it must be his ghost that is making these revelations. However, under the régime of reticence and secrecy that now prevails at Simla we must be grateful for any information regarding events in Afghanistan, even if authenticated only by the shadow of a name.

The ghost is said to have got his news via Meshed. It is a significant commentary on the efficiency of Lord Ripon's Intelligence Department that the Viceroy is now dependent on Persia for information of military movements in Afghanistan. The Quetta correspondent says of this intelligence:—

"Although the news had not reached Kandahar at the date of our latest advices, the 3rd inst., it is doubtless true. Ayub's strength is not mentioned, but his whole force being only seven regiments he has, probably, not more than six with him, numbering from 2,500 to 3,000 men. Last year he had from 4,000 to 4,500 regular infantry. The Ameer has now about 4,000 regular infantry in Kandahar and on the Helmand, besides a number of Ghilzai irregulars. He has also a considerable force of regular cavalry, an arm in which Ayub is quite deficient. The artillery on each side is probably about equal. Ayub may be expected to have about 2,000 irregular cavalry, of which description of troops the Cabul party have only the Durani Horse, and the fidelity of these, though they have hitherto stood firm, is, to say the least, dubious. Ayub will, of course, be joined by numerous Durani tribesmen; but on the whole I am inclined to think that the Ameer's general will be the stronger, both in the number and quality of his troops. Reinforcements are on the way, and one regiment 600 strong, with some militia, arrived in Kandahar on the 1st inst. Last year Ayub left Herat on June 18, reached the frontier on July 9, and the Helmand on the 19th, the distance being over 300 miles. This year he is a week later, and it may, therefore, be expected that the fight will come off between the 15th inst. and the end of the month, according as the Ameer's general, Gholam Hyder, elects to fight on the frontier or on the Helmand."

But "prestige" is a word that is now out of fashion, and when the Calcutta correspondent says, "nor can we lightly regard the further injury" to our prestige, he ought to state whom he includes under the term "we."

The Quetta correspondent of the Times does not give a much more hopeful view of the situation in Kandahar. Telegraphing under date of July 10 he says:—

"The authorities of Kandahar continue to quarrel among themselves. The Ameer has been trying to stop them by writing minatory and persuasive letters, but without much effect. His latest step has been to give General Gholam Hyder full authority, civil as well as military, over the trans-Helmand districts, thus superseding General Muhamad, who has done him excellent service. In another letter the Ameer orders the Char-Aimak chiefs at Kandahar to be furnished with arms, money, and horses, and to be sent with 500 of the Kandahari Horse to Taiwarra to assist Anbia Khan in raiding the Herat Valley, and directs Gholam Hyder to move to the Herat frontier at once."

To one thing constant ever. As the Englishman leaves, the Russian marches in: so it always has been, and so (if we may dare say so and yet escape the charge of Russophobia) will it always be. We learn by a telegram to the Times that Sirdars Habibullah Khan and Nasrula, sons of the Ameer, together with the rest of his family, arrived in Cabul from Tashkend on June 18. They were accompanied by fifteen natives of Tashkend, six of Samarcand, and one of Daghestan. Some of these men say that they came to visit the Ameer, others to see Cabul, and others to obtain employment. Among them is Abdul Kerim, a confidential servant of the Shah Mardan Kul, attaché to General Kaufmann. The Daghestan man was formerly General Kaufmann's cook.

Of course we shall be told that cooks are neither diplomatic agents nor military officers; and that we cannot object if General Kaufmann chooses to send his cook to study new gastronomic triumphs among the pillars of Afghanistan.

Apropos, a Lahor paper says that there is now passing through the Punjab a man who describes himself sometimes as a Moslemised Russian and sometimes as a Georgian subject of Russia. He states that he was recently at Herat as a follower of Ayub, who converted him, and that he is now on a pilgrimage to Mecca. He carries a passport bearing Ayub's seal. He speaks Persian fluently, but his complexion and features seem to indicate that he is an Armenian.

An important telegram has been received by the Daily News from its special correspondent at Merv, dated June 28. It would be interesting to know the route by which this message has been forwarded. The extension of Russian territory to the Tejend, and the inclusion of the immediate neighbourhood of Meshed, has long been a foregone conclusion. Fervet opus. The "civilising mission" progresses apace. The following is the text of the telegram:—

"News from Derguez says that the Russians claim the extension of the new Attrek frontier eastward of Kuchan along the Keshet River, thus passing close to the northward of Meshed, leaving Derguez, Khelat, and Awlini Turcoman territory, and Russian up to the Tejend River. Makdumkuli Khan, the supreme chief of the surviving Akhal Tekkes, is still here. He refuses to accept the compromises offered by Russia. The Merv Tekkes have organised a central police of a thousand horsemen, who are actively engaged in the suppression of brigandage and retaking stolen cattle."

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times thus comments on the position of affairs in Afghanistan:—

"The situation in Afghanistan is so far changed that Ayub's prospects look more hopeful. It is now certain that he has left Herat with a considerable force, but it is doubtful whether he intends to repeat his tactics of last year by marching on Kandahar, or, avoiding that city altogether, to attempt a direct movement on Cabul and strike his first blow as near as possible to the capital. Meanwhile, the Ameer is pushing forward reinforcements towards the Helmand. The struggle between the rivals cannot be much longer delayed, and it is not unlikely that the anniversary of Maiwand may see Southern Afghanistan once more the theatre of stirring events. If any faith could be placed in the Afghans, it may safely be said that the chances are still in favour of Abdur Rahman; but, in view of the proverbial fickleness of that race and the possibility of a wholesale desertion of his adherents at a critical moment, it would be rash to try to foretell the result. Indeed, the Kandahar news has already begun to indicate the existence of dissension among the leading men there. Nor is there any doubt that the Ameer has been sending large quantities of money and arms to Afghan Turkestan, with the evident intention of making a stand there if he is forced to give up Cabul. It is very probable that he might be able to hold his own in that province, even if Ayub became master of the rest of the country, and as in that case Abdur Rahman could hardly fail to fall entirely under Russian influence and to become a perpetual source of uneasiness to India, it would seem that our interests in the coming struggle are identical with his. Nor can we lightly regard the farther injury which our already damaged prestige will suffer in Afghanistan should the sirdar, who last year inflicted a serious defeat on the British Army, now succeed in ousting the Prince who has been placed on the throne by British bayonets and supported with British money."

THE Mahsud Waziris have surrendered Mashak's son and promise to give up Mashak as soon as he returns from Cabul. They have also surrendered four important Nana-Khel chiefs, who are to be liable to imprisonment should Mashak not be brought in. We now hold about 100 of the leading men as hostages. It is hoped that a settlement will soon be made.

THE Bombay Gazette, writing on June 21, says that traders recently arrived in India from Cabul report that it is regarded as probable that Ayub may march direct on the capital instead of going round by Kandahar. They further state the general impression at Cabul to be that Abdur Rahman's power is seriously undermined, and that Ayub is working with Russian gold.

En revanche, the Government of India have sent a further supply of arms—500 carbines with ammunition—to the Ameer at Cabul. These will doubtless be sent on to Afghan Turkestan in due course.

THE Government of India have resolved to assist the Raja of Manipur, who was threatened recently by the Burmese, by sanctioning the formation of a regular Manipuri regiment under British officers, and by presenting him with a battery of mountain guns.

As announced by telegraph, the Government of India have decided, with the assent of her Majesty's Government, that his Highness the Gaekwar shall assume the administration of the Baroda State at the end of the present year, when his Highness will have attained the age of nearly nineteen years.

THE garrison in the Naga Hills has been supplied with provisions sufficient to last till Oct. 15, and the transport arrangements have been withdrawn, leaving the Kohima force shut off from the plains till after the monsoon. The attempt last year to keep open communications during the rains caused an enormous loss in men and transport animals.

Just before the departure of the mail was published a minute by the Viceroy bringing under the notice of the Secretary of State for India the names of officers under the Government of India who rendered valuable aid in the Afghan operations, together with a letter from Lord Hartington concurring in the commendation bestowed. We are glad to observe that justice has herein been done to the great services of Sir Richard Temple; his name appears first on the official roll of fame, and the invaluable nature of his work and his "indefatigable energy" are warmly acknowledged.

THE Supreme Government have sanctioned an order by the Commander in Chief prohibiting officers and soldiers serving with or accompanying a field force in any capacity from acting as correspondents to newspapers.

IN March last the Indian Press Commissionership was abolished by Lord Ripon, at the earnest request of the Pioneer; and the Press Commissioner was prematurely retired on the score of economy. The work was transferred to the Foreign-office; and it was stated, with the utmost official seriousness, that no extra charge for it was to be incurred in that most virtuous department. By the present mail we learn from the Bombay Gazette that the appointment of a junior under secretary in the Foreign Department has been revived; the salary of the appointment is to be Rs. 1,200 per mensem. Lieut. Col. Ridgeway, now on leave, who is assistant secretary in the Indian Foreign Department, will, it is said, be appointed to the post.

THE demi-official explanation demurely adds that this appointment was necessary owing to the great increase of work in the office during the last few years. An attaché is to be abolished to make up for a portion of the extra expense.

So perhaps, after all, the Indian Daily News is right in supposing that the Indian Foreign Secretary was made a K.C.B. because he induced Lord Ripon to carry out the Pioneer's wishes in this and other matters. Our contemporary says:—

"We take the following paragraph from the official journal:—'Rajputana worships the memory of Sir Alfred Lyall, and the news that he had been made a Knight Commander of the Bath was received with unfeigned and great satisfaction by the Rajput chiefs. His Highness the Raja of one of the States celebrated the occasion by a grand entertainment, with nautches and fireworks.' The official journal, which is fed and petted by the Foreign-office, and kept steadily a day or two in advance in such matters as telegrams from the frontier, or such places as Quetta, must, of course, do something in return for all that the Foreign Secretary has done for it. But the peculiarity of the Pioneer is that it is always either injudicious or in bad taste; that some of the Rajputana chiefs should have congratulated Sir A. C. Lyall, because he is Foreign Secretary, and why he is Foreign Secretary, is certainly not a matter for jubilation. It is one of those things which ought to have been expected, but to say that Rajputana worships the memory of Sir Alfred Lyall is to demand too much of human credulity. As a matter of fact, no Foreign Secretary, within the last twenty years, is so little admired, or even respected in Rajputana, as Sir A. C. Lyall. His reign has been in no way sympathetic or careful of the interests of the people; he is proud and cold, and opinionated; qualities which do not make a man a good Foreign Secretary to the Government of India at Jeypore, Jellaputtan, at Indore, at Kota, at Jolepore, and at Oodeypore. The Foreign Secretary is certainly not regarded as either a strong man, or as a man upon whom to lavish affection; he is not loved as was Sir Henry Durand; he is not respected as was Sir Charles Aitchison; and it is now a known fact that it is next to impossible to pass a petition through the Foreign-office in any reasonable time. Then, again, although Sir A. Lyall has doubtless worked hard at Afghan affairs, his services have not been of a kind to attract attention outside a very limited, if an influential, official circle. Such Foreign Secretaries as Beadon, Durand, Aitchison, Muir, and Temple were men known to the general public of India personally as well as by their work. But Sir A. Lyall is practically an unknown man to the public; his reputation is a purely office one; and, though we do not grudge him rewards, we do think that he has been somewhat overpaid. Going over his career, the only notable thing he has ever done to attract upon him the general attention of the public of India is the abolition of the Press Commissionership. To listen to the foolish raptures of the Pioneer one would think that that is why Sir A. Lyall has been made K.C.B."

THE haste about the army reforms in India has not resulted in good speed. It is now telegraphed from Calcutta that the question of substituting four army corps for the existing Presidency armies has been referred back by the Secretary of State to the Indian Government. Certain difficulties attending the proposed change are pointed out, and an explanation is demanded regarding the means of overcoming them.

ANOTHER failure of the principle of open competition is reported by the Calcutta correspondent of the Times. Telegraphing on June 10 he says that the Supreme Council is now considering a proposal for supplying the Indian Medical Service by allotting a certain number of nominations to the principal medical schools, instead of the present system of open competition. It is believed that this idea is approved by several members of the Council. The last competitions produced seven native to two European admissions, and it is thought that the status of the recent appointees will be found to interfere with the scheme for the unification of the British and Indian medical services. Moreover, the prospect of the Anglo-Indian community having to depend entirely on natives for medical attendance—a not improbable contingency if the present system is retained—is said to have alarmed the official body and to have attracted the attention of the Government.

FROM Indian sources we hear of serious disturbances in Arabia. It is reported from Muscat that Oman is generally disturbed by inter-tribal wars. Battles have occurred between the Benibuali and Benibuhassan tribes, in which about 150 men were killed.

A TELEGRAM from Calcutta to the Times, dated July 10, announces the accomplishment of an object for which many of our fellow-countrymen in Burma have struggled, and for which some have died. Many of our readers will regret with us the fact that Margary, Cooper, Shaw, and other pioneers of the overland route between Burma and China are now no longer alive to hear that the road between Bhamo and China, via Mattin, has been recently reopened, after being closed for twenty years. This road is said to be the easiest and most convenient for traders. A caravan of 800 animals is expected every fortnight at Bhamo.

THE final link of the Darjiling Steam Tramway was opened on Monday, July 4. Calcutta is now in direct communication with its sanatorium. At a banquet given on the occasion, Sir A. Eden congratulated Darjiling on being the first Himalayan station to connect itself with the railway system, and described the line as one of the most remarkable railways in the world.

THE answer to Mr. O'Donnell and those horror-mongers who endeavoured a fortnight ago to fix a charge of inhumanity on the gaol administration of Bengal is contained in the resolution of the Lieutenant Governor on that administration for 1880, which appeared in the last Calcutta Gazette, and of which the Calcutta correspondent of the Times sends a telegraphic summary. It is satisfactory to note that there is a great improvement in the health of the prisoners, although the gaol mortality is still very high. Sir A. Eden remarks that one of the chief causes of this mortality appears to be the employment of prisoners in building the new gaols, and directs that every effort should be made to finish these gaols by free labour. He adds that it is, however, impossible to trace the mortality in many gaols to any special cause.

THE Journal of the National Indian Association for July gives us some interesting information regarding the doings and movements of some of our Indian visitors in England:—

Mr. Mahomed Rafique and Mr. Golak Nath have passed the previous examination in the University of Cambridge, and both were in the 1st class in mathematics and 2nd class in classics.

Mr. Tamix Uddin has passed the B.Sc. examination in mental philosophy in the University of Glasgow. In the 2nd M.B. examination he obtained a certificate in physiology.

Mr. Syed Habeeb Ullah has passed the entrance examination of the Inns of Court.

Mr. S. Sathianadhan, of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, has obtained one of the prizes offered by the National Thrift Building Society for an essay on National Thrift.

Sir Salar Jung, accompanied by Moulvi Shaik Ahmed Hoosein, Dr. Mahomed Ismail, and Mr. Hormuzshaw Behramjee, from Hyderabad, on a visit to England. Mir Dawar Ali, from Hyderabad. Mrs. O. C. Mullick and four children, Mrs. W. C. Bonnerjee and four children, and Mr. A. Chowdhuri, M.A., all from Calcutta. Mr. Mohsin Budroodeen Tyabjee, son of Mr. Budroodeen Tyabjee, barrister at law, from Bombay, for the Indian Civil Service. Mr. S. B. Broacha, merchant, from Bombay. Messrs. P. M. Jejeebhoy, F. D. Petit, C. D. Limjee, N. N. Wadia, and D. N. Dadysett, from Bombay, on a visit to Europe. Mr. Shapurji C. Sanjana, for the Bar, Mr. H. B. Doctor and Mr. Menezes, for medical study, from Bombay. Mr. S. B. Chatterjee, from Calcutta, for the Indian Medical Service.

Departure.—Miss Sing, for Calcutta.

THE outbreak of cholera in Bombay is diminishing, but at Surat and one or two other places in the Guzerat district the disease is spreading. At Surat there were seventy-one deaths and at Chorasi eighty-one last week.

WE regret to learn that, just before the departure of the mail, there had been a serious outbreak of cholera amongst the men of the 8th (King's) Regiment at Mian Mir. A cholera camp has been formed at Chundamunga, forty miles from Lahore.

THE Times of India gives the following obituary of the week ending June 21:—Lieut. D'A. W. Thuillier (Governor-General's Body Guard); Surgeon Major K. Reed; Major G. C. Cooper (31st M.N.I.).

At a meeting of the Silver Conference at Paris on July 6 Signor Seismit Doda stated the willingness of Italy to enter into a league with the Latin Union and America for the limited coinage of silver for five years, on condition of Germany suspending her sales for that period, substituting silver for small gold coins and small notes, and making silver unlimited legal tender at a ratio of 15½, and on condition of England making silver legal tender to a higher amount; the minimum quota of mintage of each State to be proportionate to the population, with option of exceeding that minimum on certain conditions. Mr. Fremantle stated that the American Minister at London having suggested the possibility of an agreement if the Bank of England engaged to exercise the discretion allowed by the Act of 1844, Lord Granville wrote to the Bank Court, which declared its readiness to do so on condition of foreign mints reverting to the rule ensuring the exchange of gold for silver and silver for gold at a fixed rate. The Government, having learnt that Mr. Lowell's overture was not the result of instructions from his Government, did not communicate this reply to the Conference; but the Italian Ambassador having recently submitted a similar proposal, the Government had given it the respectful reception due to any representation from a Great Power, and it now accordingly communicated the Bank's reply. After explaining the Act of 1844, the letter remarked that "the reappearance of silver as an asset in the Issue Department depended entirely on the return of the mints of other countries to such rules as would ensure the certainty of the conversion of silver into gold and gold into silver. These rules need not be identical with those formerly in force. The ratio and the charge for mintage may either or both be varied, and yet leave unimpaired the facility of exchange indispensable to the resumption of silver purchases by the Bank of England, whose responsibilities are contracted in gold. Subject to these conditions the Bank Court are satisfied that the issue of their notes against silver within the limits of the Act would not infringe the obligation to receive gold in exchange for notes and pay notes for gold on demand. The Bank Court see no reason why their opinion should not be communicated to the Monetary Conference if the Government think it desirable, and the Bank of England will always be open to purchases of silver under the conditions above described." M. Pierson (Holland), construing this letter and the offer to maintain free mintage of silver in India as an admission that even a partial bimetallic league could make the price of silver steady, made a strong appeal to England not to incur the responsibility of a perilous failure by holding aloof from a league, and he exhorted her to crown her advocacy of free trade by perfecting the instruments of exchange. The Conference adjourned to Friday, when the president suggested it should fix a final sitting, to be followed either by an adjournment or a dissolution.

THE Times of July 7 had the following remarks on the prospects of the Conference:—"There is still a good deal of speculation as to the possible result of the Paris Conference, the general feeling to-day, even among those who hoped that some agreement would be come to, being much less sanguine. It is reported, however, that a variation from the proposal to coin silver freely, originally made by the American Government, to the effect that they would coin freely up to the limit of their own annual production, as they are now practically permitted to do by the Bland Bill, has been looked on with more favour by France and the other countries of the Latin Convention than was at first the case, and that on this understanding as regards America, coupled with the undertakings by Germany, India, and the Bank of England, which have been so frequently described, France and the other countries of the Latin Convention, and probably Holland, will undertake to be bimetallic. Such a proposal by the United States Government is at any rate, we believe, before the Conference, or rather before the chief Powers interested, who are negotiating directly behind the Conference. Whether anything is to be done or not we have again to urge what we urged yesterday—that a decision should be come to at once. For this purpose the chief Powers concerned have no real need of a conference. The Conference may be useful to them as a means of recording their decisions, but a decision should be taken independently. The present suspense is becoming most injurious to exchange business with the East."

ADJOURNMENT OF THE SILVER CONFERENCE.

THE final meeting of the present session of the Paris Monetary Conference was held on July 8. Mr. Evarts read the following declaration of the French and American delegates in the name of their respective Governments:—

"1. The depreciation and great fluctuations in the value of silver relatively to gold which of late years have shown themselves, and which continue to exist, have been and are injurious to commerce and to the general prosperity, and the establishment and maintenance of a fixed relation of value between silver and gold would produce most important benefits to the commerce of the world. 2. A convention entered into by an important group of States, by which they should agree to open their mints to free and unlimited coinage of both silver and gold at a fixed proportion of weight between the gold and silver contained in the monetary unit of each metal, and with full legal-tender faculty to the money thus issued, would cause and maintain a stability in the relative value of the two metals suitable to the interests and requirements of the commerce of the world. 3. Any ratio now or of late in use by any commercial nation, if adopted by such important group of States, could be maintained, but the adoption of the ratio of $15\frac{1}{2}$ to 1 would accomplish the principal object with less disturbance in the monetary systems to be affected by it than any other ratio. 4. Without considering the effect which might be produced towards the desired object by a lesser combination of States, a combination which should include England, France, Germany, and the United States, with the concurrence of other States, both in Europe and on the American continent, which this combination would ensure, would be adequate to produce and maintain throughout the commercial world the relation between the two metals that such combination should adopt."

The President having invited the Conference to discuss the propriety of an adjournment, which had been privately advocated by a number of delegates, Dr. Forsell (Sweden) contended that, as delegates could not, without consulting their Governments, pledge the latter, the reservations which must necessarily be tendered would render the nominal adjournment a real separation. He urged that every information and the most explicit official declarations were already on record; that Mr. Thurman's speech had dispelled all idea of the bimetallic league confined to France and America, which M. Cernuschi considered practical; that England and Germany were unlikely to change their attitude; and that, instead of adjourning on a mere hope of something turning up, the Conference should confess to the failure of the universal bimetallic project, which alone could be entertained. The Conference should conclude by reiterating the resolution of 1878, deprecating a sudden demonetisation of silver. The sitting was then suspended in order that the French and American delegates might draw up a resolution stating the grounds of an adjournment, and they accordingly submitted the following resolution:—

"The Conference—considering that in the course of its two sessions it has heard the speeches, declarations, and observations of the delegates of Germany, Austria-Hungary, Belgium, Denmark, Spain, the United States, France, England, British India, Canada, Greece, Italy, the Netherlands, Portugal, Sweden and Norway, and Switzerland; considering that the declarations made by several delegates were in the name of their Governments; that those declarations all acknowledge the expediency of taking in concert various measures, under the reservation of the entire freedom of action of the different Governments; that there is reason for believing that an understanding might be established between the States which have taken part in the Conference; that it is expedient to suspend the sittings; that the monetary situation of several States may call for the intervention of legislation and may give rise to diplomatic negotiations—adjourns to Wednesday, the 12th of April, 1882."

M. Denormandie, Governor of the Bank of France, in explaining this resolution, dwelt on the unanimous admission that something ought to be done, on the light which has been thrown on the question, and on the undesirability of abandoning a problem which must eventually be solved. M. Pirmez (Belgium) agreed to the adjournment as advantageous, free from inconvenience, and as not prejudging the acceptance of any particular system. Lord Reay also supported the motion, and urged Russia and Austria to co-operate in the rehabilitation of silver. Count Kufstein promised that Austria would take advantage of the interval to study the question. Dr. Broch (Norway), as a member of all the Monetary Conferences since 1867, testified to the pre-eminence of the present in the collection of data and the discussion of principles. The resolution was then unanimously adopted, subject to Dr. Forsell's reservation, and the proceedings concluded with compliments to M. Magnin, Minister of Finance, for presiding; to M. Vrolik, the vice president, detained in Holland by indisposition; and to MM. Lavollée and Bruwaert, the secretaries, for their copious and accurate minutes.

Subjoined is the text of the letter of the Bank of England read at the previous sitting:—

"The Bank Charter Act permits the issue of notes upon silver, but limits that issue to one-fourth of the gold held by the Bank in the Issue Department. The purchase of gold bullion is obligatory and unlimited; the purchase of silver bullion is discretionary and limited, the distinction being enforced by the necessity of paying all notes in gold on demand. The re-appearance of silver bullion as an asset in the Issue Department of the Bank of England would, as is understood by the Foreign-office letter, depend entirely on the return of the mints of other countries to such rules as would ensure the certainty of the conversion of gold into silver and silver into gold. The rules need not be identical with those formerly in force; the ratio between silver and gold and the charge for mintage may both, or either of them, be varied, and yet leave unimpaired the facility of exchange, which would be indispensable to the resumption of silver purchases by a bank of issue whose responsibilities are contracted in gold. Subject to these considerations, the Bank Court are satisfied that the issue of their notes against silver within the letter of the Act would not involve a risk of infringing that principle of it which imposes a positive obligation on the Bank to receive gold in exchange for notes and to pay notes in gold on demand. The Bank Court see no reason why an assurance should not be conveyed to the Monetary Conference at Paris, if their lordships think it desirable, that the Bank of England, agreeably with the Act of 1844, will be always open to the purchase of silver under the conditions above described."

THE DASAHARA FESTIVAL.—The bathing festival, known as the Dasahara, when orthodox Hindus take a plunge into the holy Gunga, was unusually propitious this year. The Bhagiratha Yoga, as it is called, which takes place at distant intervals, occurred this year. Pilgrims from the most distant places came for a plunge. At Nobodip we hear there was a collection of some sixty thousand pilgrims, and at all great Ganges bordering towns there were similar collections. In Calcutta about a lakh of pilgrims collected—Kalighat was equally thronged. It speaks volumes in favour of the orderly disposition of the people of Bengal that not a single case of breach of the peace was reported from all these gatherings.—Hindoo Patriot.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE LAND DIFFICULTY IN INDIA.*

CAPT. TROTTER is a well known and industrious writer on Indian topics, and some of his works on Indian history have both deserved and achieved success. It is therefore to be regretted that his name should be found appended to an article in the new number of the British Quarterly Review, which professes to deal with "The Land Difficulty in India," but which has no better direct remedy to propose than an extension of the Bengal perpetual settlement to the other provinces. Some of Capt. Trotter's indirect remedies are of very questionable utility—such as a large extension of "cheap and accessible courts of justice," a doubtful boon to an impoverished and litigious population. Others, again, are undeniably valuable in the abstract, the only question being in regard to the manner of their application and the limits under which they should be applied. Of this latter class are "economy and retrenchment" on the part of the Government, the "increased employment of natives" in the Civil Service, larger contribution to the Imperial expenditure from the native States, and abstention from "any thought of conquest or aggression beyond India's natural frontier." To anyone who is at all acquainted with the fact that on such a question as the extended employment of natives, for instance, tons of minutes, memoranda, notes, opinions, have been recorded by the various members of the Government of India from the earliest times to the present day, it is almost exasperating to be told, amid the roar of the big guns of a Quarterly Review article, that this is one of India's needs, and not to get one hint as to how it is to be done. Under these circumstances one is not surprised to observe that Capt. Trotter talks about "the tribute which India pays to England in the shape of home charges"—a question-begging appellative of the most pernicious kind as being applied to a thing about which most English readers are profoundly ignorant. Reduce the home charges by all means when it is economical to do so—i.e., where it is possible to substitute for them smaller payments for the same value, or equal payments for greater value. But do not call that a "tribute" which is, to a large extent, payment for far greater value than could anywhere else be obtained—e.g., the payments made for use of money in various ways, which India has obtained at a ridiculously low rate solely on account of her connection with India.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In your paper of the 5th inst. you have published four letters from "R. H. H." on the silver question. The Government is not likely to adopt complicated proposals to reform our present system of finance. The simple question for India is, How can the value of the rupee be kept above rs. 8d.? and the simple answer is, by the Indian Council discontinuing to draw on India when it cannot get rs. 8d. for the rupee. Of course the members of the Indian Council will urge that they must have money, and that they must draw 185 millions of rupees every year from India. But this plea is untenable when it is considered that Government has had this year the opportunity of reducing the Council drafts to the extent of nearly three millions sterling by borrowing gold in London; it has preferred to borrow thirty millions of rupees in India, which rupees it cannot spend there, but must remit home to London to the great advantage of the jobbers. Thus we see that the exchange value of the rupee is year after year forced downwards by the Government itself.—Your obedient servant,

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—You will doubtless in your next issue notice the arrival home of Mrs. Smith, wife of the bandmaster of H.M. 94th Regiment, who behaved with such conspicuous bravery at Brunter's Spruit, where her husband was shot. Though wounded herself, this noble woman went about, under fire, visiting the wounded and bandaging their injuries with strips torn from her own garments. We have opened a subscription for her and have much pleasure in heading the list with twenty guineas. We believe there are many who will be glad to show their admiration for the splendid intrepidity of this courageous woman, and we shall be glad to acknowledge through your columns any sums which may be sent us. We trust to your kindness to give this letter space in your valuable journal, and beg to remain, Sir, your obedient servants,

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

PROPOSED REORGANISATION OF THE P.W.D.

As there appear to be many rumours afloat about the proposed changes in the Public Works Department it may be worth while to give some particulars of the actual proposals of reform that have been made to the Secretary of State by the Government of India. The first and greatest change in the organisation of the department that has been suggested consists in the introduction of a class of sub-engineers intermediate between the present engineer and upper subordinates to be called clerks of work. The new class, according to the present proposal, will be in five grades, besides one of apprentices, on salaries ranging from 100 to 600 rupees. It will be raised exclusively in this country and, as far as possible, from natives trained in the various Civil Engineering Colleges of the country. It has been pointed out also to the Secretary of State that the problem of facilitating promotion and otherwise improving the status of members of the department does not under its present constitution appear capable of solution without a large increase of expenditure. The need of some means of accelerating promotion has been strongly insisted on, and it has been shown that the strength of establishment at the end of 1883 is estimated at 80 in excess of the existing members, and that if no change is effected supernumeraries will have raised the roll of officers, below the grade of executive engineers, from 476, the present sanctioned strength, to more than 600. A strong opinion has been expressed that no assistant engineer should be over thirty-two years of age, whereas, under the present arrangements, assistants entering in 1881-82-83 will have to wait, in the ordinary course of things, nearly twenty years for promotion to the grade of executive engineer. Two methods, whereby some relief may be afforded, have been brought to the notice of the Secretary of State: firstly, the augmentation of the strength of the staff. Under this head grounds are given for believing that some augmentation will be required, inasmuch as the close of the war will now allow more attention and expenditure being devoted to the development of the country. The second measure of relief is a suggestion that some scheme to enforce or induce retirement should be considered and introduced, not indeed immediately, but at some future date. For the present it is strongly recommended that the fifty-five years' rule should be extended and made applicable to civil engineers, as it is to royal engineers in the department. It is shown that no possible expansion of the staff of the department will alone suffice to bring about a sufficient flow of promotion. Another proposal to influence this result is the limitation of the number of admissions into the department from England. It is to be noted that the new class of sub-engineers is not to be created until the present excess of engineers is absorbed, when it is proposed that there should be a reservation of one-fourth of the annual vacancies for the new branch. It is also suggested that any augmentation of staff in view of increased expenditure on public works should be as far as feasible in this branch. The idea in all these proposals and suggestions, apart from the greater questions of improving the efficiency of the department and increasing the native element in it, is to reduce the ratio of assistant to executive engineers from, as at present, four to three, to two to three, an arrangement which would give the average assistant promotion to the grade of executive engineer within eight years.—Englishman.

THE FOREIGN TRADE OF CALCUTTA.

AN examination of the distribution of the foreign trade of Calcutta during the past year brings out some interesting facts. It is well known that the manufacture of cotton piece goods in America has of late undergone an enormous development, and apprehensions have been freely expressed lest she should prove a formidable rival to Manchester in the trade. Whatever the ultimate result may be—and we see no reason why America, with her mechanical skill and the raw material at her doors, should be unable to compete successfully with England in this respect—there is nothing in the Calcutta figures to indicate that such a competition is imminent. As we noted yesterday only 8½ lakhs worth out of a total of between fourteen and fifteen crores worth of cotton goods received into this port during the year come from countries other than England. As American goods are imported largely via Liverpool, this fact in itself would not be conclusive. The actual fact, however, is that the total value of the imports of cotton goods from America, direct and indirect, was only a little over a lakh and a-half, or less than a nine-hundredth part of the total imports, the goods being, moreover, confined almost exclusively to drills, destined chiefly, no doubt, for European use. In the vast piece goods trade of the country, in short, America has as yet no share. The aggregate trade with the United States fell off to the extent of 21 per cent. from the somewhat large figures of the previous year, though it still showed a fair advance on that of previous years, the largest decreases occurring in the exports of indigo, raw jute, hides, and linseed. Jute bags and cloths and lac, however, showed large increases. In the trade with Australia the only noteworthy fact is the large increase in the exports of tea, due to the efforts of the syndicate, and destined, no doubt, to progress in future years. One of the most noteworthy features in the foreign trade of the year is the sudden springing up of a considerable trade with Holland in wheat and linseed. Of the former article the country in question took no less than 365,079 cwt., and of the latter 44,657 cwt., though the trade in both cases is quite new. The trade with Italy increased from a little over seventy-seven lakhs to upwards of a crore and twelve lakhs, or 46 per cent., and that with Austria from forty-four lakhs to over sixty-three and a-half lakhs, 44½ per cent. Among the shipments to Italy was raw silk to the value of a lakh and a-half, while those of raw cotton, indigo, hides, and jute all showed comparatively large increases. The exports of indigo to Austria also showed a very large increase—from 20¼ to over 30¼ lakhs—raw cotton and jute, too, showing important increases. The position of the Indian sugar trade, as illustrated by the figures in the report before us, is remarkable. From 637,090 cwt. in 1876-77, the exports have dwindled away steadily to the nominal quantity of 9,460 cwt. in the year under review, 6,393 cwt. of the latter quantity being taken by the neighbouring island of Ceylon, and the exports to the United Kingdom alone having dropped down from 487,068 cwt. to 696 cwt. But this is not all. During the same period Calcutta actually imported, independently of small quantities of special qualities, 42,904 cwt. of this article for Indian consumption. Unless the local manufacture of sugar has largely fallen off, which we see no reason to suppose, the conclusion would seem to be that, owing to increased prosperity or some other cause, the consumption has greatly increased. Statistics to show what the course of the local manufacture during the past few years has been are probably not available; but the subject is one that well deserves inquiry. Another noteworthy circumstance to be gathered from the report is that the trade in grain is rapidly passing away from Calcutta to Bombay, the shipments from the former port having fallen off from 1,42,462 cwt. to 49,822 cwt., while those from the latter have increased from 19,553 cwt. to 91,792 cwt. How far this may have been due to deficient crops on this side, as compared with Bombay, and how far to some more permanent cause, we cannot say.—Englishman.

THE NATIVE PRESS ON THE FORTUNE BAY AWARD.

ENGLAND, as usual, when it indulges in a quarrel about money with the United States, has lost the Fortune Bay case and will have to pay up £15,000. Briefly, the facts of the case, as stated some short while ago by an English paper, are these. By the Treaty of Washington certain fishing rights enjoyed by British subjects on the coast of Newfoundland were also conferred on American subjects; these rights were to be held in common. The right of the British subject, however, had always been limited by divers restrictions of the Newfoundland municipal law; these restrictions being obviously needed for the preservation of the fisheries. They were openly disregarded by the Massachusetts fishermen, who fished wherever they thought proper. The Britishers interfered, and by force or threats made the American fishers leave off; and for the loss thereby sustained by its subjects the United States Government demanded damages. The Marquis of Salisbury refused to admit the claim; but Mr. Gladstone's Ministry took another view of the matter. After a good deal of correspondence Earl Granville proposed that the matter should be referred to Mr. Blaine, the American Secretary of State, and Sir Edward Thornton. If they disagreed they were to name a referee, whose decision was to be final. The incoming mail will probably throw further light on the matter; but this much is clear, that the English Government has again to pay up.—Amrita Bazar Patrika.

THE NATIVE PRESS ON CENTRAL ASIA.

THE result of the operations of General Scobeleff's expeditionary force has been to place Russia on a point of considerable advantage in Central Asia. It has brought the Great Power of the North into immediate contact with the undisputed territory of Persia under direct Persian rule; and, as was to have been expected under the circumstances, the hostile Turcoman tribes have withdrawn themselves from the reach of Russian attack for the time, and left the Russian forces such absolute masters of an entire district of Turcoman territory that their lines of communication with the Caspian Sea are almost completely safe, so far as these particular tribes are concerned. Though the expedition has been carried to an increased distance from its base, this disadvantage has been more than counterbalanced by the greater nearness of the new source of supply which has been opened in the North Eastern provinces of Persia. The severe defeat of the Turcomans at Geok Tepe seems to have been followed almost immediately by the implicit and open submission of Persia to Russian predominance. So complete is the subservience shown by the Government at Teheran that orders have been issued to the authorities on the borders to refuse shelter to Turcoman fugitives on Persian soil, and to send to the Russian camp such as may have taken part in the defence of Geok Tepe. . . . Lord Dufferin adds:—"General Scobeleff's return is generally regarded as an indication that the campaign in the Tekke Turcoman country is concluded." In our opinion these arrangements are mere blinds to conceal the further designs of Russian diplomacy in the East. The command over Persia, which the late operations of General Scobeleff have secured for Russia, is likely to prove a thorn on the side of British Empire in India, and it seems to us that the British Government should not shut its eyes to the probability that Russian intrigues, through Persia, may not, in Russian interests, be keeping up disturbances among the wild tribes on our borders, and consequently help in draining the resources of the Empire, by compelling it to maintain an attitude of incessant vigilance and preparedness for aggression from the direction of Central Asia.—Indian Mirror.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

PUNJAB UNIVERSITY COLLEGE.—A notification has been issued by the registrar of the Punjab University College, drawing attention to the considerable number of valuable fellowships and translatorships that will shortly become vacant in that college. These endowments have been founded by the enlightened chiefs and raises of the Punjab, and are in the gift of the senate of the University College. The notification runs thus:—"The following fellowships and translatorship will soon become vacant. Candidates should apply forthwith to the Registrar, Punjab University College, giving full particulars of their qualifications and enclosing copies of their testimonials. M'Leod-Kashmir Sanskrit Fellowship.—This fellowship, of the value of Rs.103 per mensem, is tenable for two years, and is given for distinguished attainments in Sanskrit. The duties of the fellowship-holder are to superintend the edition and compilation of Sanskrit books published under the directions of the Senate, and to lecture in the Oriental College. It is now held in connection with the office of Head Pandit, Oriental College, Lahore. 2. Jullundhar Medical Fellowship.—This fellowship is awarded by competition to the best assistant surgeon. The successful candidate is styled the "Patiala Alfred Scholar," and receives a salary of Rs.66 per mensem. The holder is also required to teach in the Oriental College.—G. W. LEITNER, LL.D., Registrar, Punjab University College."

SPORT IN CENTRAL INDIA.—The Central India Horse-shikar party, consisting of Lieut. Col. Gerald, Lord A. Compton, Lieut. Greenwood, 10th Hussars, and Baron de Kund, a sporting Austrian, broke up near Seepree on June 1. Their bag for the two months consisted of 18 tigers and 1 cub caught alive, 5 panthers, and 9 bears, besides 23 head of cheetul, deer, &c.—Bombay Gazette.

THE SIBPUR ENGINEERING.—The "mutineers" of the Sibpur Engineering College have so far come to their senses that they have apologised and petitioned to be permitted to continue their studies.—Englishman.

MAULED BY A BEAR.—We regret to hear that Mr. J. W. H. Hughes, of the Geological Survey, has been rather badly mauled in an encounter with a bear near Rewah.—Pioneer.

THE CALCUTTA MINT.—Capt. R. V. Riddell, R.E., of the Topographical Survey Department, is to be appointed to officiate as mint master of Calcutta, vice Col. J. F. Tennant, R.E., proceeding on three months' leave.—Ibid.

POSTAL APPOINTMENTS.—Consequent on the death of Mr. Maurice Le Breton, late deputy postmaster general of Rajputana, the Director General of the Post-office of India has been pleased to order the following immediate changes to be effected:—Mr. Barwise, Deputy Postmaster General of Oudh, to be Deputy Postmaster General of Rajputana; and Mr. Rose, Deputy Postmaster General of Eastern Bengal, to be Deputy Postmaster General of Oudh.—Ibid.

TRAVELLING ALLOWANCES.—The following notification appears in the Gazette of India:—"The Governor General in Council, having had under consideration the subject of allowances to public officers travelling on duty by steam tramways, has decided that the rules regarding the allowances to such officers for journeys by railway shall apply to journeys by steam tramways, save that officers who, under such rules, are entitled to travelling allowance at mileage rates shall be permitted to draw in lieu thereof the allowances shown below:—"In lieu of mileage of three annas—double first-class fare. In lieu of mileage of one-and-a-half annas—double second-class fare."—Ibid.

THE WEATHER.—General remarks for Monday, 13th ult.:—During the last day or two the wind has fallen light on the coasts of Bengal and also at Bombay, the directions being, however, those characteristic of the monsoon. Nevertheless, except in the Punjab and Sind, the weather remains cloudy; and rain, though for the most part not very heavy, is still very general. There has been a small rise of the barometer in the Peninsula and in Western India, and a somewhat greater rise in the Nerbudda Valley, while it has fallen at Ajmere. The following is a summary of the rainfall reported to-day and also that reported for yesterday, but too late to appear in the day's bulletin—Cuttack, Masulipatam, Goa, and Cochin from 2 to 3 in.; Akyab, Sibsagar, Darjeeling, and Dhubri from 1 to 2 in.; Silchar and Lucknow $\frac{1}{2}$ to 1 in.; Dacca, Patna, Bareilly, Aligarh, Umballa, Ajmere, and Jubbulpore $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ in. Several other stations report smaller quantities.—Ibid.

TELEGRAPH TARIFF.—Some important changes in the telegraph tariff for inland messages are announced. The charge for each word beyond the established minimum unit of one rupee for six words is to be two annas a word.—Times of India.

DAUD SHAH.—One of our old Afghan friends has suddenly become famous for epigrams. Daud Shah, who, in his exile figures in the local Directory as "late Commander in Chief of the Afghan Army," has been giving his opinion upon British policy. He is reported to have said:—"The British are a great nation; they say you are renowned for your zae, zor, and insaf (gold, power, and justice). Good; how did you use them in Afghanistan? We know how your gold went in Cabul; you scattered it with both hands. As for your power, you vested it in the Wali at Kandahar, and all men saw what followed; while your justice—you placed it in the hands of Hyat Khan." Not bad for a barbarian. Again, "David," as we used to call him in Sherpur, was curious as to the terms Whig and Tory, and in his innocence he perpetrated the horrible pun that as the Queen-Empress was above both parties in the State she was called "Whig Toria."—Pioneer.

THE INDIAN TURF.—The Asian states that the Calcutta Turf Club propose to make the following alterations in the rules of racing:—I. That Note 1 to Rule 14 be altered so as to read "6st. is the lowest weight allowed under any circumstances." &c. II. That the top weight for all classes be 9st. 3lbs. III. That the allowance of 7lbs. by English to colonial horses be abolished, and Clause 2 consequently rescinded. IV. That weight for age is, for English and Australian horses, the foregoing tables reduced 4lbs.; for Capes the foregoing tables raised 10lbs.; for country-breds raised 1st. 10lb.; and for Arabs raised 2st. 10lb. V. That Clause 4 of Rule 14 be rescinded. VI. That Rule III. be altered to—"A country-bred horse is one got, foaled, and kept in India up till the time he first starts for a race." VII. That Rule IX., Lottery Rules (p. 89), be altered as follows:—Line 7, one-quarter share altered to one-half share." VIII. That certificates of age and measurement by the Calcutta Turf Club be accepted wherever races are run under the Calcutta Turf Club rules.—Ibid.

THE CANTONMENT HOSPITAL SYSTEM.—An important change is about to be made in the cantonment hospital system as applied to British troops. Hitherto each arm of the service has had its separate hospital establishment; and in large cantonments the expense of maintaining three or four staffs has been exceedingly heavy. Now central station hospitals are to be created wherever this is possible without the necessity of erecting new buildings. In future British soldiers, when sick, will be removed not to the regimental hospital, but to that which will do duty for the whole station. The number of apothecaries will be greatly reduced, the surgical appliances, instruments, drugs, &c., will be returned into store as regimental hospitals are closed, and probably fewer surgeons will be required. The saving expected to be carried out by these means will be considerable, but we do not understand what arrangements have been made to meet the demands of regiments when ordered on service.—Ibid.

AN AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT FOR BURMA.—The Chief Commissioner of British Burma has submitted a scheme for the institution of an Agricultural Department in his province. Although Burma depends for its prosperity almost entirely upon agriculture, the Chief Commissioner points out that, with the exception of rice, Burmese cultivation is in a very backward state. Enough is known of the suitability of the soil and climate for tobacco, sugarcane, and cotton to warrant any attempt to extend and improve their cultivation. Next in importance to these, coffee, tea, and cinchona are products which will all grow well, and which might well occupy the attention of an Agricultural Department. The establishment as proposed by the Chief Commissioner would consist of a director, and a consulting engineer chosen from among the engineers of the province. The latter officer would receive pay of Rs.200 a month for his extra duties.—Ibid.

THE FAILURE OF MESSRS. COLVIN, COWIE, AND CO.—In the Calcutta Insolvency Court on the 14th ult., Mr. Geddes appeared for Messrs. David and John Cowie, who came up for their personal discharges. There was no opposition. The matter was fully heard on July 2 last by his lordship Mr. Justice Wilson, who postponed insolvents' discharge for one year, with protection. We might mention that out of some 500 and odd creditors there was only one who took steps to oppose. His lordship granted the application. Mr. Geddes also applied for a rule nisi for insolvents' final discharge. The application was granted.—Ibid.

THE HITCH IN THE CALCUTTA WATER SUPPLY.—It may be amusing to readers to learn that the recent deficient pressure in the supply of water to the town was due to the humorous doings of a gay municipal tindal attached to the Wellington-square pumping engines. We are informed that some time in May last Mr. Fenwick, the superintendent of the waterworks, on visiting the pumping station and examining the engines at work there found that they required cleaning, and ordered the superintendent in charge, a man who has since left the service of the corporation, to clean out the cylinders and pistons. This man, following a well-known rule, ordered his assistant to perform the work, who, in his turn, observed the same rule, and ordered two native tindals to see the work performed. The piston of one of the engines was duly taken off, and while one of the men was engaged in cleaning the upper sides of the cylinder with a piece of tow from the outside the other man got inside the cylinder and was engaged in scraping the inside and bottom with a steel scraper. Evidently wishing to combine practical joking with hard work, the man outside, it appears, set the piece of tow he had in his hands on fire, and dropped it on the back of the other man who was engaged in scraping. This man gave a wild yell, finding his back scorching, jumped out of the cylinder, and in the hurry of the moment left the scraper he was using behind, and made for the practical joker. What transpired after this is not known, but everything was reported as having been finished, and the piston was fitted on to the cylinder and steam got up. The piston worked up and down, but it was soon evident that something was wrong, as there was an escape of steam from a cause which was not then known. Mr. Fenwick was telegraphed for from Barrackpore, and on arrival ordered the cylinder to be taken to pieces again. This was done, and the cause of the mischief at once found out. It appears that the weight of the piston had driven the scraper right through the bottom of the cylinder. The damage was of so serious a nature that it has necessitated the corporation ordering a new cylinder to be made by Messrs. Burn and Co. at a cost of about Rs.1,000.—Englishman.

CALCUTTA FREIGHTS.—At date of departure of mail the unfixed tonnage stood at 5,418 tons. London via Suez Canal: Dead-weight, 58s. 9d. to 61s. 3d.; market closing firm. London via Cape: ditto, 53s. 3d.; linseed, 60s.; rapeseed, 61s. 3d.; market strong. Liverpool via Cape: Wheat, 52s. 6d.; linseed, 53s. 9d. to 56s. 3d.; oil, 60s.—Englishman.

THE INDIGO CROP.—From Messrs. William Moran and Co.'s Market Report:—Our advices from Lower Bengal are generally indifferent. In most of the Zillahs, with the exception of Bhagulpore and Purneah there has been too much rain. Manufacture has commenced at some places, but the yield from the plant so far has been but poor. In Behar, there have been further good and general falls of rain, and with few exceptions the accounts continue favourable. Mahai is now just commencing, and will be general in another week. There is nothing new to report from Benares or the North West Provinces. From Messrs. J. Thomas and Co.'s Price Current.—We regret to note an unfavourable change in the weather in Lower Bengal. For the past ten days almost continuous rain has fallen, more particular in Jessore and Kishnagur. This has retarded the growth both of the October and early spring sowings, whilst the very small plants requires some days of sunshine to recover from the excessive moisture. In Purneah scarcely sufficient rain has fallen, but there in Bhagulpore and Kishnagur manufacture has commenced on a small scale. From Behar we have reports of general rain and prospects continue good; here and there some few factories are at work, and by the 20th manufactures will be general. Our advices from Benares and the North West Provinces continue satisfactory.—Englishman.

TEA CROPS AND MARKETS.—From Messrs. William Moran and Co.'s Market Report:—At the auctions held on the 9th inst. the demand continued firm for all kinds, and slight advance may be quoted on common sorts, and the few Cachar invoices offering. On the 16th there was a strong demand, the bidding for all kinds was keen, and prices may be quoted from one to one and a-half annas per lb. higher, the greatest rise being on good mediums. Offered during the fortnight, 5,806 packages, sold 5,656 packages. Reports from all the districts are more satisfactory, and in most parts of Assam manufacturing returns compare well with those of corresponding weeks last year. From Messrs. J. Thomas and Co.'s Price Current.—During the past fortnight two public auctions have been held, amounting to about 5,782 packages—viz., 2,581 on the 9th inst. and 3,201 on the 16th. The sales passed off extremely well, some invoices of fine quality realising extreme rates. Medium and good descriptions were in strong demand, and at the last series of sales were fully half to one anna dearer. Common sorts also met with more support at an advance of nearly one anna per pound. Reuter's telegrams report a better market in London, and, as the early reports of the quality of the China crop are unfavourable, we may possibly expect a continuation of good prices for desirable parcels. Manufacturing reports from Assam and Darjiling continue favourable, but blight is said to be unusually prevalent in Cachar.—Ibid.

MADRAS.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC BISHOP.—Advices have been received from Rome elevating the Very Rev. J. Colgan, vicar general of Madras, to the episcopate, and nominating him to fill the vicariate vacant by the lamented death of Dr. Stephen Fennelly. The Rev. T. Mayer, of Mill Hill College, has been appointed coadjutor bishop.—Madras Times.

THE CONSULTING ARCHITECT.—Mr. R. F. Chisholm, the consulting architect of the Madras Government, proceeds shortly on three months' privilege leave to England, and will be succeeded by Major A. J. Fraser, R.E., executive engineer, Chingleput District.—Madras Mail.

MADRAS HARBOUR.—The block-making in connection with the Madras Harbour Works was brought to an end on Wednesday last, and a large number of hands were paid off, as their services will not be required after the 15th inst.—Pioneer.

MYSOR.—It is said that the Mysor Government contemplate creating a new appointment for the offices under the Dewan, the incumbent of the post being styled Financial Secretary, on a monthly salary of Rs.500.—Ibid.

DR. WYNDOWE.—Surgeon Major Wyndowe, M.D., residency surgeon and superintendent of the Nizam's Medical School, Hyderabad, retires from the service; being succeeded by Surgeon Major Baumont, M.D., from Indore. The arrangement made to supply Dr. Wyndowe's place reflects credit on those who have advised it. At the same time, it will be long before the blank caused at Hyderabad by the present residency surgeon's retirement is filled. Professional skill and devoted attention to duty are qualities neither rare, nor in any danger of growing so, among British medical officers. But with all this Surgeon Major Wyndowe is a man of mark alike in his profession, in the Madras Medical Department, and at Hyderabad. The medical school there is an institution of first-class importance. With its earlier history was associated a long spell of service on the part of Dr. Maclean—then of the Madras Army—now one of the best known of the Netley professors. The diplomas granted by it, both in medicine and surgery, are given only after searching examinations; and we are assured that, looking merely to this branch of his duties, the services rendered by the retiring residency surgeon are such as will not soon be forgotten.—Pioneer.

BOMBAY.

MILITARY SECRETARY TO THE C. IN C.—Major D. F. Gatacre has been appointed military secretary to the Commander in Chief of Bombay.—Times of India.

THE VOLUNTEERS.—Capt. Walker, 13th Bombay N.I., has been appointed inspector and adjutant of the two local railway volunteer corps, in place of Capt. Hume, who vacates on promotion to the rank of major.—Ibid.

WORK AT A RAJKUMAR COLLEGE.—The Sumher Bahadur is informed that the pupils of the Rajkumar College at Rajkot are being overworked. The first bell rings at 4 a. m., when the pupils turn out of bed. Up to 8 they have to study. The next two hours are granted for bathing, breakfast, &c. School opens regularly at 10 and closes at 4 p. m.; sometimes at 6. After an hour or two for physical exercise and supper, the last bell again calls them for study, at which they have to grind away till midnight.—Pioneer.

Net excess exports of total trade ...	8,613,679	20,062,399	16,423,199	13,896,567

The year was remarkable for a very great expansion of both imports and exports of merchandise, the former being greater by ten-and-a-half and the latter by over seven millions sterling. The net imports of treasure were over seven-and-a-half millions sterling. The following fluctuations were the most noteworthy:—In imports of cotton manufactures there was a very marked advance, as shown below. Twist and yarn:—1878-79, £2,779,772; 1879-80, £2,745,306; 1880-81, £3,669,500. Piece goods:—1878-79, £13,937,511; 1879-80, £16,723,352; 1880-81, £22,637,428. Silk manufactures also showed satisfactory improvement:—1878-79, £924,048; 1879-80, £837,890; 1880-81, £1,350,384. There was a decrease of salt imported:—1878-79, £593,612; 1879-80, £762,532; 1880-81, £665,517. The increases were satisfactory under the principal heads of the export trade; jute being the only large item in which there was a falling off. Wheat advanced by upwards of two millions sterling. Refined sugar showed a decrease, and unrefined an increase. The results are briefly summarised in the following table:—

Cotton, raw...	£7,913,046	£11,145,453	£13,241,734
Oil seeds	4,675,038	4,685,893	6,344,978
Jute, raw	3,800,428	4,370,032	3,934,030
Rice, clean	8,810,121	8,341,685	8,971,661
Wheat	513,779	1,121,015	3,278,004
Sugar, refined	69,679	59,165	32,456
Do. unrefined	134,681	146,706	279,295

The value of tea exports was about the same as in the preceding year—viz., a little over £3,050,000. Tobacco may be separately shown, the fluctuations in quantity and in value not being at all proportioned to each other:—

1879-80	11,412,095lb.	129,810
1880-81	13,673,141lb.	140,831

Under woollen manufactures it is interesting to observe a recovery in the shawl trade from £88,838 to £150,179.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY, JULY 7.

THE FOREST DEPARTMENT IN INDIA.

Mr. ROUND asked the Secretary of State for India whether admissions to the Forest Department under the Government of India are by competition, or whether there are any recent cases on record in which officers have been appointed either by the English or Indian authorities without undergoing any previous examination.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: Candidates in this country for nomination to junior appointments in the Forest Department in India are required to pass an examination, and from among those who attain the required standard a selection is made of such as are deemed best adapted to the service. No recent appointments have been made by the authorities in this country without previous examination. Under the rules for the selection of candidates in India no previous examination is required if applicants can produce satisfactory certificates of their acquirements. Candidates selected in this country undergo a special training at the Forest School at Nancy before receiving their appointments; and those selected in India are required to pass two years' training in the forests attached to the Government Forest School, or to serve as probationers for the same length of time before their appointments are confirmed.

THE SILVER CONFERENCE IN PARIS.

Mr. MAGNIAC asked the First Lord of the Treasury whether any engagement had been made by the Government, or any authority conferred on the British representative at the Silver Conference in Paris which went beyond the use of silver as at present permitted by law for purposes of currency; whether the Treasury had made any communication to the directors of the Bank of England requiring or requesting them to hold in silver any part of their reserve for the due payment of notes, and, if so, what; whether the Government had authorised or concurred in any engagement by the Secretary of State for India by which the free action of the Government of India in dealing with silver for currency purposes would be restrained; whether he would state if there was any intention on the part of the Government to alter in any degree whatever the standard upon which our present system of currency depended; whether, having regard to the fact that speculation in silver, by which much temporary disarrangement would be imported into operations of trade, was likely to arise during the sitting of the Conference, he would instruct the British Commissioner to hasten the decision as much as possible, so as to put an end to the intermediate state of uncertainty; and whether he could lay upon the table any papers bearing upon the question.

Mr. GLADSTONE: No engagement has been made by the Government, and no authority conferred on the British representative at the Paris Conference, to alter the limits now imposed by law upon the use of silver as currency. The Government were informed that an agreement might be possible between the silver-using Powers if, among other matters, the Bank of England would hold in the Issue Department part of its reserve in silver, and they communicated their information to the Bank, inviting the Bank Court to state its opinion upon such an exercise of the discretion entrusted to the Bank by the Act of 1844. The court replied that it saw no reason why an assurance should not be conveyed to the Monetary Conference, if the Treasury thought it desirable, that the Bank, agreeably with the Act of 1844, will be always open to the purchase of silver, provided that the mints of other countries return to such rules as would ensure the conversion of gold into silver and silver into gold. The Treasury, noting the statement of the Bank that it saw no danger to the principle of the Act of 1844 in such an assurance, caused the delegate of the United Kingdom at the Conference to be instructed to convey the assurance to the Conference. Mr. Fremantle informed the Conference accordingly at its meeting of yesterday. 3. The Secretary of State for India will state whether he has authorised the delegate of India to convey any assurance to the Conference. 4. There is no intention on the part of the Government to alter the present currency law. 5. The Government could not undertake to make representations to the Conference as to its course of proceeding. 6. If the hon. member will move for papers I will have such of them as explain the action of the Government presented.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: The only engagement which the representatives of the Government of India at the Monetary Conference have been authorised to make on behalf of that Government is that for a definite term of years it will undertake not to depart in any direction calculated to lower the value of silver from the existing practice of coining silver freely in the Indian mints as legal tender throughout the Indian dominions of her Majesty. Such a declaration must, however, be conditional on the acceptance by a number of the principal States of an agreement binding them, in some manner or other, to open their mints for a similar term to the coinage of silver as full legal tender in the proportion of 15½ of silver to 1 of gold, and the engagement on the part of India would be obligatory only so long as that agreement remained in force.

CHINA TEA.—Never has the first arrival of new season's tea met with such a bad reception as those of the Glencoe throughout the week, and a very despondent feeling is expressed for the future. It is no doubt owing to the poorness of the crop, and the dealers are holding off in the hope that the later shipments will prove much better in quality; but we are afraid disappointment will be experienced, if one can judge by the samples, ex Loudoun Castle, to hand. Fine teas are scarce and command very full prices, but there seem to be no good medium kinds, and prices descend at once from 18. 8d. to 18. 1d., to 11d. to 18. 2d., while common grades out of the Loudoun Castle were knocked down at auction from 8½d. to 9d. per lb. The Oonfaas are the only good teas, while the Ningchows are dull and pointless. Sales have been held every day, the total of the new season's amounting to 13,500 packages. Monday's sales were the largest, and, being all the same grade of tea, prices fell 2d. per lb. on opening rates, and since then another ½d. per lb. drop must be quoted.—Grocer.

THE VICTORIA (PHILOSOPHICAL) INSTITUTE.—The annual meeting of this society took place at the house of the Society of Arts on Thursday, June 30—the Right Hon. the Earl of Shaftesbury, K.G., in the chair. The meeting was very fully attended. Prior to the delivery of the address, "On the Credibility of the Supernatural," by the Right Hon. the Lord O'Neill, the honorary secretary, Capt. F. Petrie, read the report, from which it appeared that the total number of members was now upwards of 900, a greater number than usual, especially of colonial supporters, having joined in the past year, during which papers and short communications written in furtherance of the society's objects—namely, the investigation of philosophical and scientific questions, especially those said to militate against the truth of revelation—had been contributed by several leading men of science, including his Grace the Duke of Argyll, K.G., F.R.S., Sir J. Fayer, F.R.S., Professors Stokes, F.R.S., Boyd Dawkins, F.R.S., J. W. Dawson, F.R.S., Nicholson, F.R.S.E., Balfour Stewart, F.R.S., Mr. J. Bateman, F.R.S., and other fellows of the Royal Society, besides Professor Hughes, Dr. Rassam, and others. The report closed with a special tribute to the newspaper press. The treasurer's report showed that a considerable advance had been made by the institute. Amongst the speakers were Sir H. Barkly, K.C.B., F.R.S., Sir J. Fayer, K.C.S.I., F.R.S., who strongly urged that the society's mode of fully and impartially investigating scientific questions was of special importance; the Christian philosopher need never fear for the results of investigations so conducted, for the Books of Nature and Revelation had the same author, and if the former were fairly and impartially inquired into the result would not clash with the latter. Mr. J. Bateman, F.R.S., Mr. J. E. Howard, F.R.S., Dr. Irons, and others, having spoken, the meeting adjourned to the museum, where refreshments were served.

THE RAILWAY SYSTEM OF NORTH WEST INDIA.

MR. ANDREW, in his eloquent speech on June 30, at the meeting of the shareholders of the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi Railway, aptly described his line as par excellence the political railway of India. Forming the line of communication between the great frontier fortresses and cantonments of the Punjab, it has most important and onerous duties of military transport even in piping times of peace. Holding in subsidiary alliance the great State lines of Rajputana, the Northern Punjab, and the Indus Valley, it stretches one arm far away southward towards Bombay, others south west and west to Karachi and on roads heretofore traversed by the armed kafilas of the Povindahs, and yet another northward to the land of Taxila and the country of Alexander's campaigns. The line is excellently managed, as was fully shown in the striking statistics so well marshalled by Mr. Andrew the other day; and as might be inferred from the fact that the two chief officers of the company in India have both been decorated by her Majesty. As a commercial enterprise it is fairly and steadily progressive. As an exemplification of the poetical side of railway enterprise in India, it is of unrivalled interest; for it has stations on the battlefields of nearly every great Indian conqueror, from the days of Alexander to those of John Nicholson, and its rails follow in places the track of nearly every famous invader. One looks from its carriages on the routes traversed by the Macedonian phalanx of the great Sikandar, and by the Turki and Afghan hosts of Sultan Mahmud, by Timur and by Babar, by Nadir and his Persians, by Ahmad Shah and his Durrani; one halts at the storied halting-places of Akbar, Jahangir, and Shah Jahan. And thus in various ways the traveller on this line is reminded of the fact that the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi Railway forms, with its ramifications, the line of communication between the points that are the most important in India from a military and political point of view.

It is obviously of the highest importance to the State that such a line should be maintained in the best possible state of efficiency. The statistics quoted by Mr. Andrew justify him in claiming for the company of which he is the chairman, and has long been the mainspring and chief director, the credit of performing its important national duties in a manner that leaves little or nothing to be desired; and the working of the line is evidently carried on in such a way as to entitle the company and its officers to the utmost consideration from the Government of India. We cannot doubt that before very long the adjoining Indus Valley line, belonging to and worked by the State, will be put more entirely under the control and at the disposal of a management which has shown itself so thoroughly capable and trustworthy. Such an arrangement would serve to show that the Government is not ignorant of the great public value of labours like those of Mr. Andrew and the officers who have loyally carried out his views; and we have no doubt that it would ensure the efficient and economical working of the whole of our Indian frontier system of railways.

THE CLOSE OF THE SILVER CONFERENCE.

THE Paris Monetary Conference has adjourned to April 12, 1882. We give elsewhere a full report of its final sitting; and it is worth while to glance for a moment at the position attained. That the motion for an adjournment was carried, in preference to a dissolution, shows that at any rate the majority of the members of the Conference believe there is fair ground to hope for tangible results from their deliberations. The joint declaration made at the last meeting by the American and French delegates in the name of their respective Governments was, it may at once be confessed, disappointing. It does little more than reaffirm in broad terms the general principles of bimetallism, which have already been battled over usque ad nauseam; and gives no promise of that partially independent action of the great silver States from which so much has been hoped of late. On the contrary, the important fourth paragraph of the declaration refuses to "consider the effect which might be produced towards the desired object by a lesser combination of States" than one which should include England and Germany as well as France and the United States; and everyone knows that, for the present at any rate, it is hopeless to expect that either England or Germany will join a bimetallic league. The disappointment of this "declaration" that declares nothing, had been foreshadowed and almost discounted by Mr. Thurman's former statement, from which it was clear that America, at any rate, is not prepared to go as far in the direction of action partially independent of England and Germany as M. Cernuschi had apparently expected. Still, we believe there was, up to the last, a lingering hope that the slight concessions made by the latter States, and the fair and reasonable offer made by the Government of India, might have induced the Government of the United States to put its half-convictions to the test of an experiment.

The resolution drawn up by the French and American delegates, and finally adopted by the Conference, is—as might be expected under the circumstances—even more colourless than the "declaration." The bimetallics may derive hope, as we have already noticed, from the fact of an adjournment being preferred to a dissolution; and still more from the statement, to which all the delegates have assented, that "there is reason for believing that an understanding might be established between the States which have taken part in the Conference." Count Kufstein's promise that Austria "will take advantage of the interval to study the question," is about as vague and as discreetly reserved as any diplomatic preparation for hedging could possibly be.

The Conference, then, closes its present session with no practical result. In their attitude towards the question at issue France and America stand where they did before. It may be said that the discussion has advanced an important stage by the concessions—whatever may be the opinion held of the value of those concessions—made by England, by Germany, and by India. Whether the next session will be more fruitful will, we believe, depend on the effect produced in America and France by those concessions in the meantime. That England will go further than she has already done is very unlikely. M. Cernuschi himself confesses that it will take another four or five years to convert England to bimetallism; so that, even from the point of view of the most enthusiastic supporters of that theory, there is little prospect of any material advance on the part of England by April of next year, when the delegates will again meet. If bimetallism is to have an early trial as a result of the recent movement it must be on the initiation and by the partially independent action of the countries most deeply interested in the rehabilitation of silver. If America and France and the countries that move with them are willing to make the trial, England has promised to do a little towards improving the general tone of the silver market by the Bank of England holding a portion of its reserves in silver. That the concession is a very small one is doubtless true; still it is a concession, and a much larger one than the extreme opponents of bimetallism are willing to approve of. If the silver States feel themselves sufficiently encouraged by it to make any experiments, the session of the Monetary Conference of 1882 will be an interesting and valuable one; otherwise, the present adjournment might as well have been a dissolution.

HOME NEWS.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—The tenders for Rs.40,00,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, Rs.3,00,000, at an average rate of 1s. 7⁸/₁₂d.; and Madras, Rs.2,00,000, at an average rate of 1s. 7⁸/₄d. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 7¹³/₁₆d. and above received in full. For Wednesday the market is to be offered another Rs.40,00,000.

THE SILVER MARKET AND THE EASTERN EXCHANGES.—On Wednesday the silver market was completely disorganised on account of the expected failure of the Paris Conference. Holders vainly solicited orders even at a marked reduction in price. It was impossible at the last to obtain a good quotation, while the feeling of uncertainty increased on its being known that the India Council had allotted only a small portion of the drafts offered. There was no appreciable change in the Indian exchanges, but a weak tendency existed, and the China rates relapsed about ¹/₄d., to 3s. 9³/₄d. in Hong Kong and 5s. 2³/₄d. in Shanghai. Rupee Paper likewise shared in the downward movement, the Four-and-a-Half per Cents. being quoted at 92³/₄ to 92³/₈.—On Thursday the position of the market was without change, the business was so completely at a standstill that actual quotations were not heard of in any quarter. The Eastern exchanges were dull, the Indian telegraphic transfer rates being 1s. 7³/₈d. In Shanghai and Hong Kong the respective rates were 5s. 2³/₄d. and 3s. 9³/₄d., showing a relapse in each case. Rupee Paper was steadier, the Four-and-a-Half per Cents. being quoted at 92³/₄ to 92³/₈, and the Four per Cents. 87.—On Friday business was done in bar silver at 51¹/₂d. per oz., showing a drop of almost 1d. from the extreme price touched rather less than a week ago. The Indian exchanges were a shade steadier at 1s. 7¹¹/₁₆d. for telegraphic transfers, but no further advices have been received from China. Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Rupee Paper was dull at 92³/₄ to 92³/₈, and the Four per Cents. at 86³/₄ to 87.—On Saturday bar silver showed symptoms of further weakness, the quotation being 51¹/₂d. to 51¹/₄d. per ounce, but no business whatever was reported. The price of Mexican dollars was also flat at 50³/₄d. A fresh arrival of these coins is awaited before the market can be properly tested.

DUTCH INDIAN RAILWAYS.—Messrs. Samuel Montagu and Co. notify that the coupons of the Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Loan of 1869, falling due on the 15th inst., detached from bonds bearing their signature, will be paid at their offices. Coupons must be left four clear days for examination, and are neither received nor paid on Saturdays.

SWEDENBORG SOCIETY.—The seventy-first annual meeting of this society was held at 36, Bloomsbury-street, London, W.C., on Tuesday, June 21—the Rev. Dr. Bayley in the chair. The report of the committee states that 1,500 volumes have been printed during the year, and that 3,017 volumes of the English translations have been disposed of against 2,575 last year. The "Reflections" of Mr. Panduring, of Bombay, has been translated into the Marathi language for circulation in India. The last resolution pointed to the remarkable religious upheaval now going on in India, and viewed with satisfaction the publication of Mr. Panduring's "Reflections on the Writings of Swedenborg" in the Marathi language for circulation in India, and pressed upon the committee the importance of increasing, by all possible means, missionary efforts in this direction.

PALESTINE EXPLORATION.—The July number of the society's Quarterly Statement, which will be sent to all the members of the society, contains full particulars of the very remarkable discoveries which have been made in the last few months. First in interest, perhaps, comes Professor Sayce's commentary on the newly-found inscription at the Pool of Siloam. A text which dates (if the learned professor be correct) from the time of Solomon is indeed a rare monument. There is next a discovery made by Lieut. Conder, which may prove of even greater interest. He has found, close to the spot where he places the site of the Crucifixion, which is still called the Place of Stoning, a Jewish tomb of Herodian period, standing alone, cut in the rock. "Can this be" he asks, "the 'new Sepulchre in the Garden?'" A drawing and plan of the tomb have been made for the society. Another drawing has been made of the real mouth of Jacob's well, recently uncovered by the Rev. C. L. Bardsley. The well mouth is much worn by the friction of ropes. It was formerly covered over by a Christian Church, and if, as is possible, this church dates back to the second or third century, the stone should be no other than the very stone on which our Lord conversed with the woman of Samaria. Another discovery, only indirectly connected with the Bible, is that of the ancient Hittite City of Kadesh, on the Orontes. Not the least surprising thing about this are the facts that Lieutenant Conder found it from an Egyptian record written 3,000 years ago, and that the old name, though it has disappeared from history since the 13th century before Christ, is still attached to it.

THE INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—The awards made by the council of this society for original communications read at the ordinary meetings during the session 1880-81 or printed in the "minutes of proceedings" without being publicly read and discussed have just been announced. Fourteen papers were read and twenty-three others have found or will find a place in the volumes, and in respect of these thirty-seven articles fourteen awards have been made; while, in accordance with custom, a contribution from a member of council, Sir W. Thomson, F.R.S., on "Tide Instruments," was not considered in the adjudication of premiums. Among other rewards, we observe that a "Telford Premium" was bestowed on Mr. J. R. Bell for a paper on "The Empress Bridge over the Sutlej."

THE COLLISION BETWEEN THE "BENIN" AND THE "DUKE OF BUCCLEUCH."—In the Wreck Commissioner's Court on Thursday judgment was given in this important inquiry, the hearing of which had occupied rather more than two days. Particulars have already been published in these columns. The Commissioner, in giving judgment, stated that no blame whatever was attributable to the master or any officer of the Benin. It was the duty of those in charge of the Benin to keep her on her course without altering it, and to keep the vessel at full speed; and that duty had been strictly adhered to. The whole responsibility for the collision was upon the second mate of the Duke of Buccleuch, who was the officer in charge at the time the vessels approached each other. It was the duty of the Duke of Buccleuch, as being the overtaking ship, to have kept out of the way of the Benin, and the whole casualty was due to the second mate's insisting, from some spirit of bravado, in trying to make the other vessel give way, and continuing a course which could not fail to result in the two vessels coming into collision. The master of the Duke of Buccleuch was not to blame in any way. He was not on deck at the time, and in the circumstances he was quite justified in having retired to his room to take some rest. The judgment of the court was that the certificate of the second mate should be suspended for a year. Mr. Myburgh, on behalf of the owners and master of the Benin, asked that the owners of the Duke of Buccleuch might be ordered to pay the costs of the owners and master of the Benin in attending the inquiry, on the ground that the master of the Duke of Buccleuch had charged the Benin with having brought about the collision. The court declined to make the order, on the ground that the casualty had been found due to the misconduct of the second mate alone, and that neither the master nor the owners of the Duke of Buccleuch were in any way responsible for it.

EASTERN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—According to the report for the six months ending March 31 the total revenue was £302,158 and the net balance £201,186. This, added to the sum brought forward, makes a total of £229,616, out of which debenture and preference interest has been paid, and £70,000 placed to reserve, raising it to £356,608. In addition to the interim quarterly dividend of 1¹/₄ per cent. on the ordinary shares the directors declare a final dividend of 2s. 6d. per share, with a bonus of 1s., making 5¹/₂ per cent. for the year, carrying forward £2,723. The revenue includes £19,500 dividend and bonus for the half-year upon the company's shares in the Eastern and South African Company, the dividend being at the rate of 6 per cent., with a bonus at the rate of 4 per cent.

GREAT SOUTHERN MYSOR GOLD MINING COMPANY.—In the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice, on Friday, an application was made by the above company under Section 35 of the Companies Act, 1862, to rectify its register by cancelling allotments of shares to the number of 25,000. The application was rendered necessary in order to get over the difficulty of the allotment of these shares, which the concessionaires had agreed to accept as fully paid up instead of cash, payable to them under an agreement of December 7, 1880, and contained in the company's prospectus; and also because the articles of association contained no power to the directors to cancel shares. The concessionaires consented to the application. The Vice-Chancellor made an order to amend the register of members by striking out the names and allotments according to the schedule contained in the notice of motion.

OBITUARY.—General Sir Richard Waddy, K.C.B., colonel of the 63rd Regiment of Foot, died last night at his residence, Royal-terrace, Kingstown. In 1832 he obtained an ensigncy in the 50th Queen's Own Regiment of Foot, and served as adjutant of the regiment until his promotion to a company in 1841. In that year he went to India and received the bronze star for his services. In 1852 he became major, and was specially promoted to be lieutenant colonel to proceed in command of the regiment to the East. In 1854 he landed in the Crimea, and was present at the battles of Alma and Inkerman and the siege of Sebastopol. He was honourably mentioned in all the despatches, and Lord Raglan specially acknowledged his distinguished conduct in command of the trenches. He was wounded on the night of October 13 when the enemy made a sortie in force. For his services in the Crimea he received the following orders and decorations:—Companion of the Bath, Knight of the Legion of Honour, Imperial Order of the Medjidie, fifth class, Crimean medal and three clasps, Sardinian medal, and Turkish medal. From 1863 to 1865 he was on active service in New Zealand, first as a colonel on the staff and then as a brigadier general. He commanded the force in front of Paterangi Pah which had the hard skirmish with the enemy at Waiari in February, 1864. He also commanded the forces under Sir Duncan Cameron in the action of Nukamaree, in January, 1865, for which service he was specially mentioned in despatches and received the New Zealand medal. On the withdrawal of the troops from New Zealand he served in command of the troops and the 50th Regiment in New South Wales until his promotion to be major general (1868); he became general in 1879. In recognition of his services he was granted £100 a year in 1863, was made a Knight Commander of the Bath in 1877, and appointed colonel to the 63rd Regiment in 1877. He was born in 1814.

ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.—At the meeting on Monday, July 4—Sir E. Colebrooke, Bart., M.P., president, in the chair.—Mr. W. Trevor-Roper was elected a resident, and General Salma di Cesnola a non-resident, member. A large number of presents to the society's library were announced, the most important being Dr. W. W. Hunter's "Gazetteer of India," vols. 1-6. A paper was read by M. V. Portman Esq. (who had lived for a long time in the jungle with the natives, is, indeed, the only European who has done so), on "The Andaman Islands and the Andamanese," in which he gave an able account of the geographical position of the islands, of the strange savage people inhabiting them, with valuable details as to their social position, referring, at the same time, to what we already know from the visits of earlier officers or civilians who had been employed there. Mr. Portman illustrated his paper by the exhibition of a large number of objects he had collected there, including bows, arrows, personal ornaments, skulls, &c.

SCINDE, PUNJAUB, AND DELHI RAILWAY.

The twenty-sixth annual meeting of the above company was held on Thursday, June 30, at the offices of the company, Gresham House, Old Broad-street; Mr. W. P. ANDREW in the chair.

A summary of the report of the directors has already been published in our columns.

The SECRETARY (Mr. J. H. Norman) having read the notice convening the meeting,

The CHAIRMAN said: It must be of interest to the shareholders of the company to know that the number of proprietors now amounts to 8,838, so that although we have a small number present we have a very large constituency. The smaller the number the greater the compliment to the board, which we think equivalent to a vote of confidence. (Hear, hear.) When we had the pleasure of meeting you on the last occasion I told you the number of troops we had conveyed to and from the seat of the Afghanistan war. I think it of public interest now to supplement that statement by telling you the exact numbers we conveyed since, and I will give you the whole number we have actually conveyed. This railway has been of the greatest importance in ministering to the success of our arms in succouring our troops and conveying them to and from Afghanistan to our own territory. This we have been enabled to do without one single accident of any importance. That, I think, is a state of things most creditable to those entrusted with the management of your arrangements in India. (Applause.) This statement represents that during the war in Afghanistan the gross military traffic conveyed under Government warrants to Dec. 31 last was as follows:—Troops and followers 471,970; for their use we also conveyed 105,656 horses, ponies, and mules; 15,408 bullocks, 8,645 camels; 479 guns, artillery and engineers' carriages; 140,570 tons of commissariat; ordnance, and military stores, and 78,405 tons of material for frontier railways. This transport required an estimated number of 2,620 trains; 652 of which were special troop, live stock, and material trains. Now I think the conveyance of such vast numbers of men, animals, and mass of materials without a single accident of moment is a most creditable state of matters. The result of the success of these arrangements is that our trusty traffic manager, Mr. Ross, has had conferred upon him the Order of Companionship of the Empire of India. It is very gratifying to us to think we have in India two officers on whom the Queen has been pleased to confer this honourable decoration. No doubt other companies, although they have not participated in the defence of British territory, would have done so if they had had the same opportunities that our people had to distinguish themselves. Our line being a frontier system is the line which, in all cases of political emergency in India, by which stores and troops will have to be conveyed. It is, in fact, the great political system of India, and therefore, when I say our company is the only one that has two officers who have been decorated for distinguished services, I do not in any way wish to decry the officers of other companies—quite the reverse, because our people have had opportunities of distinguishing themselves, whilst the other gentlemen have not. In referring to the traffic manager, I would also allude to the chief engineer. Mr. Stone and his brothers all went out together about twenty years ago. Three of these brothers have fallen victims to the climate, another died when home on leave, while Mr. Stone himself is now our chief engineer and the only survivor of the four brothers. He has served us with great fidelity and distinction under very great difficulties, for, I regret to say, he is now suffering from ill health in consequence of the severe labours and exertion he has been subjected to in our service. You will, I trust, agree with me in hoping he may be restored to health and enabled to resume his duties in the course of another year. (Applause.) You will have noticed that there is some considerable falling off in the traffic, but this is to be easily accounted for—in the first place, from the termination of the war, and, secondly, from the flotilla having ceased to work except at a very severe loss, the flotilla having been originally started as a makeshift. At the time when the flotilla was organised the Government would not allow a railway to be constructed to connect the Scinde province with the Punjab, and at that time I thought the best thing I could do was to suggest the flotilla to connect the two lines, and for many years it has performed most valuable service. It is only of late years that it has been subjected to the severe competition of the Indus Valley State line running parallel to it, and it has necessarily been working at a loss. In consequence of this state of things we obtained the sanction of the Government to discontinue the through service of the flotilla, and we are taking steps to dispose to the best advantage of the vessels and the property we possess on shore. A few vessels will be reserved for ferry purposes and other local wants, besides which I am anxious that in case of a break in the continuity of the Indus Valley State line there should be an efficient steamer at our disposal and the disposal of the authorities in order to keep up a continuous communication. I have, of course, a few words to say with regard to the Indus Valley State line, which we projected and surveyed I don't know how many years ago. The negotiations which began two years ago with respect to the holding of it, I regret to say are still under consideration. We agreed to everything with the Secretary of State; still the confirmation of the arrangement now appears to have been referred to the Viceroy, and is now under consideration in India. I regret this very much, not only on your account, but also on account of the mercantile community. We are receiving remonstrances which I trust will also be addressed to those in authority. The remonstrances from the commercial community state that the delays, the risks, and expenses of this dual management are perfect hindrances to trade and most objectionable. It is needless to say that in this statement I entirely concur, and I have repeatedly pointed out their unavoidable recurrence. I trust, therefore, the Government may be induced by the wants of the country and also by their own requirements to remember the justice which is due to this company. We can have no great success until we have the line in our own hands, but when it will be placed in our own hands, I am sorry to say, I can give you no assurance. Railways are made now in various districts in a way that is becoming more important and interesting. The Delhi Railway meets the East Indian Railway within the walls of Delhi, and the Rajpootana line meets these two systems also within the walls. An arrangement is being carried out to work these railways in as much harmony as possible. The Delhi also meets the Indian Railway at Ghuzipoor, and the Punjab meets the Northern State Railway at Lahore. The Government are pushing on the Northern State Railway from Lahore to Peshawur with great rapidity. They have made up their minds to bridge the Indus at Attock and also to bridge the Sukkor. At Sukkor the State line requires a bridge because it can only pass at present from bank to bank 100 loaded wagons a day, but with a bridge any number of wagons and other vehicles can be passed over rapidly. When the too-long-delayed lines to the Bolan and Khyber are finished the prosperity of our system will be promoted and the safety of India secured. Had these lines been finished years ago amicable relations with the Afghans would have been established, and, if the war had not been prevented, the facility of communication would have rendered the war of short duration. There are several projects for connecting the Punjab with Simla and Kangra, and other hill stations. But there is one remote from our system of peculiar interest, which is to place the important city of Patna in railway communication with the secluded and little known kingdom of Nepal. The princes of India are alive to the importance of railways. The Nizam, the Gaekwar, and Holkar have lines in operation, and Scindiah's line from Agra to Gwalior was opened for traffic in May last, while the Begum of Bhopal has proved her anxiety to connect her well-governed State with the railway system of India. Public attention is much directed at this moment to the mineral resources of India, and the Viceroy in Council has wisely directed an eminent geologist to report on all the mineral resources of India for the information of the public. I do not know that I have anything more to say with reference to any other points, but I shall be happy to answer any questions, to the best of my ability, which may be put to me. I have mentioned the name of Mr. Ross, the traffic manager, and I think it would be unjust if I did not also mention the labours of Mr. Ross in connection with education. That gentleman has taken the greatest interest in the establishment of schools in the hills, for which he has received the thanks of the Government. (Hear, hear.) We contended, and it was admitted by the Government, that it was to us a matter of great moment to have the children educated and trained in a healthy climate, because we may look forward to employing some of them beneficially in our railways, besides discharging a really essential duty to those children. I shall have to move a resolution, and I wish to do my best to commend it to you, for assisting us in establishing the basis of a provident fund for our servants. They are so strongly impressed with the importance of it that they are already subscribing money to establish such a fund. Now the Government has said to us over and over again, "You give so much and we will give as much as you do"—and we naturally ask what are we to give it out of—are we to give it out of the gross revenue of the year? The Government's reply is, "You are to give it out of the surplus earnings." There being none, it is equivalent to saying, "Put your hands into your own pockets and do it." In a letter which I addressed to Lord Hartington (of which anybody can have a copy) I commented upon the hardship of putting our people in such a position as that. The Government has given us the most important line, as I have already explained, in India to construct, and they have given to us the most important bridges perhaps in the world to construct and protect. We have had every sort of difficulty and cost to encounter, but our railway, notwithstanding its unquestionable military and political importance, does not, speaking commercially, pay. If our people are to be treated in a worse manner than those who have constructed railways in a level country full of people and traffic having no physical difficulties of any kind to contend with, and where a railway would pay even if conducted by men with scarcely any brains—if our people who have overcome great difficulties, and elicited the praise and commendation of our Government, are to be remunerated on an inferior scale to those who have had no difficulties to encounter, I think the matter requires readjustment. I have endeavoured with the best of my ability to bring these facts forward, but hitherto without much benefit. If any of you gentlemen would like to see what I have written to Lord Harrington upon the subject you can have a copy of the letter. Gentlemen, I have now much pleasure in moving "That the report and accounts as submitted to you be received and adopted."

Mr. EDWARD THORNTON, C.B., begged leave to second the resolution. It gave him an opportunity of expressing his entire concurrence with their chairman in all that he had said on the several subjects on which he had touched, and as regarded the meritorious services of their officers, especially of Mr. Stone. Mrs. Ross's laudable efforts in the cause of education also had their very high approbation and their earnest desire that she might be successful. The Attock bridge was, in his mind, a matter of as much value as their chairman had attributed to it, as he said an interruption was very much more important than a break of gauge. The completion of that bridge would be a great step towards success. He believed the chairman would bring forward a proposal regarding the creation of a provident fund and he would say nothing further at that moment.

The Rev. ANSELL JONES referred to his appointment as chaplain to the Scinde Railway at Lahore. He impressed upon the meeting the necessity for the establishment of a provident fund, referring to a case in which a widow and eight children had been left entirely destitute.

Captain CARPENTER said that the matter of there being no surplus dividend had been fully explained. He was not one to advocate the shutting up of every particle of money, nor of providing too much, while there was proper provisions to be made for the efficiency of the line. One of the greatest objections in railway management in this country was that there was no reserve. So long as their chairman was at their head he had no fear of their falling into any serious mistakes. He came into the company as a flotilla holder, and he knew more about that than about railway management. He knew that the flotilla had been a great service to that company in its early history, and he would be sorry to see it totally parted with, for he thought there was still work for it. There was a vast deal of merchandise traffic which might be carried by the flotilla which no railway could carry, providing they had communication at short distances, and plenty of barges which they could leave at the different places and take up as they came down. He thought it would be wise not to dispose of the whole of the flotilla until they saw whether they were of no use, as they were much easier to part with than to get again. With regard to the provident fund, he was afraid they were out of order in trying to set apart any particular sum out of the funds of the company except with the consent of the body of the proprietors.

The CHAIRMAN then put the resolution to the meeting, when it was carried unanimously.

The CHAIRMAN had much pleasure in proposing that his esteemed friend and colleague, Mr. Edward Thornton, C.B., be re-elected a director of that company. Mr. Thornton was an old friend of that company. He was good enough to favour him (the chairman) with his recent knowledge when he returned from India. He was also good enough to accept the office of auditor, and then he, at his request, accepted the office of director. He need not say that in Mr. Thornton they had a most valuable director, and that they on that side of the table had a very highly-esteemed and valuable colleague. (Applause.)

Mr. ALFRED WATERHOUSE seconded the resolution, which was carried.

Mr. THORNTON had to thank them for reappointing him, and the chairman for the too favourable terms in which he had spoken of him.

The CHAIRMAN had also to move—"That Sir T. Douglas Forsyth, K.C.S.I., C.B., be re-elected a director of this company." Sir Douglas's connection with the company was also a long one before he was good enough to join the board. When he was one of the commissioners in Scinde he was of great use to the company in his official capacity. He had therefore great pleasure in recommending them to re-elect him, and he could assure them that he was very much valued by himself and all who were around that table as a colleague. (Applause.)

Mr. CHARLES TREWER seconded the resolution, which was agreed to.

Sir DOUGLAS FORSYTH begged to return his thanks for their kindness in re-electing him. He could assure them it had always given him the greatest pleasure to be associated with their worthy chairman, a man whose energy and tact in administering the affairs of this company had always excited his admiration. He was exceedingly obliged to them for giving him the opportunity of continuing to serve with them and to protect their interests to the best of his power. (Applause.)

Captain CARPENTER proposed the re-election of Mr. Robert Minton as auditor, which was duly seconded and carried.

The CHAIRMAN congratulated Mr. Minton upon his election as successor to their late esteemed friend, Mr. James Macdonald.

Mr. MINTON returned thanks, and bore testimony to the excellent manner in which the books and accounts of the company had been kept.

The CHAIRMAN also bore testimony to the manner in which the books had been kept, and said much of the credit was due to Mr. Bailey, the accountant, whose department was exceedingly well conducted. He could assure them that since Mr. Norman's appointment his (the speaker's) labours had been reduced to most minute limits. In Mr. Norman he had such a coadjutor that his labours were much more agreeable than before. The Chairman then moved;—"That a sum of £1,196 3s. 6d., being the moiety of the surplus profits resulting from the working of the half-year ending June, 1880, be, and is hereby, given to assist in the formation of a provident fund for the company's employees in India." This could not take place unless the Secretary of State agreed to give a similar sum, and he recommended the resolution as a wise and proper one.

Captain CARPENTER seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously.

A vote of thanks was given to the chairman for his conduct in the chair, and the meeting separated.

INDIAN ZOEDONE COMPANY.

The first or statutory meeting of this company was held at the offices, Abchurch-lane, on Monday; Mr. H. ROGERS in the chair.

The notice calling the meeting having been read by the SECRETARY,

The CHAIRMAN stated that this was only a statutory meeting, which was held in accordance with the Companies' Acts, and there was no business to transact. The first point to which he would refer was the resignation of Sir George Kelner, the chairman of the company, and that was the reason he (Mr. Rogers) so unworthily held the position that day. There was not much to report with respect to the business of the company in India, it having been so recently established. The shareholders were told in the prospectus that it was the intention of the directors to establish factories in India in order to manufacture on the spot and sell there. This had not at present been carried out, for the reason that, being a new company which had been started for the sale of a new beverage like zoedone, it was deemed advisable that they should, in the first place, establish the fact whether the demand was such as to warrant the erection of factories, and the incurring of a large expenditure. This conclusion had not been arrived at without much consideration on the part of the directors. It was consequently decided to ship a quantity of the zoedone from this country to test the question of the probable demand, and they had obtained supplies of the beverage from Messrs. Barrett and Co., as agents for the Zoedone Company at Wrexham, who supplied all that was patent in the liquor. The difficult question to be decided was as to the amount likely to be sold at various places. They consequently made shipments to Bombay, Calcutta, Madras, Aden, Kurrachee, Colombo, and Rangoon, and a small amount to Calicut, the first shipment being made to Kurrachee on April 27. The quantity sent out was to Bombay 1,000 cases of one dozen each, to Calcutta 700, to Madras 600, to Aden 150, to Kurrachee 200, to Colombo 400, to Calicut 25, and also to Rangoon. They had been informed by telegraph that the sales had only just commenced, and that up to Thursday last they amounted at Calcutta to 123, at Bombay to 57, and at Madras to 19 cases. They had not received any information as to the sales at other places. Messrs. Wallis and Rodwell were the company's agents in London, and they had appointed sub agents at all the places named. The directors hoped, as the liquor became better known, that it would find an increased sale. With regard to the carte prejudice of the natives of India, that would be overcome when it was understood that zoedone contained nothing of a character to interfere with their prejudices. It had been discovered that certain Europeans had been already forwarding zoedone to India, and it was being used there before the company's supplies arrived out, viz.—at Lucknow in the Bengal Presidency, and Colombo. This company having, however, purchased the sole right of sale in India from the English company, they had sent out instructions to their agents which would no doubt have the desired effect of stopping the sales by other parties. If not, the company would have to take other steps to prevent their right being infringed. It also appeared that a spurious article—well, he would not say spurious, but what was represented as zoedone—was being sold. The directors had telegraphed for samples to be sent home, and if it was found that they contained anything that was an infringement of the company's right they would, of course, take legal proceedings for their protection. With regard to a Stock Exchange quotation for the company's shares, they had not as yet applied for the same, a sufficient number not having been taken up in this country. It was the desire of the directors that the balance should be taken up in India, as they believed the company would be greatly benefited by Indian influence. Should the shares, however, not be taken up in India the board had guarantees that they would be subscribed for in this country, when an application would be made to the Stock Exchange Committee for an official quotation, and this would, he had no doubt, be granted. The present company had in the meantime not called up the amount due to them, and it was the desire of the directors of the company not to make calls upon the shareholders before the question of the erection of factories in India had been settled. As to the price at which the zoedone could be sold in India to produce a profit to the company, it was found that it had been sold by other parties at eight annas per bottle, or six rupees a dozen, and the company had decided upon selling at six annas, or 7½d. per bottle, which, at the par rate of exchange, would be 9d. This was only a tentative measure, as it was hoped eventually that it could be sold at a lower price and thereby largely increase the sales. He had nothing more to say, but would be happy to answer any questions.

A SHAREHOLDER remarked that it appeared that what they were paying £25,000 to the English company for had no value at all if they did not carry out the erection of the factories in India. He wished to know what had been already paid to the English company.

The CHAIRMAN said that about one-half only had been paid; the English Zoedone Company was not pressing for payment for the balance. The directors had not in any way abandoned the idea of erecting factories in India, but they desired to see their way clear before expending the money of the shareholders.

Some discussion ensued, amongst the questions raised being that of the company purchasing the zoedone from Messrs. Barrett instead of, as stated, direct from the English company's works at Wrexham; whilst other shareholders desired information as to the causes which had led to the resignation of the late chairman, Sir George Kelner. The absence of any circular calling the meeting was also complained of; whilst another shareholder was desirous of ascertaining if the £12,500 paid to the English company would be returned in the event of the company not erecting factories in India; whilst another speaker suggested the winding up of the company before any further money was expended.

The CHAIRMAN, in reply, stated that under the present arrangement the company could purchase and ship the zoedone cheaper than if they obtained it from the works at Wrexham. The reason of Sir George Kellner's resignation, according to a letter received, was that he could not on account of his health give proper attention to the affairs of the company, and that he saw difficulties ahead on which he did not consider himself competent to advise. The difficulties referred to by (the chairman) understood only referred to the quotation of the shares on the Stock Exchange, which had not been applied for pending the placing of the balance of the shares in India. As to the return of the £12,500 by the present company, that depended on circumstances. The English company could at any time call up the balance of the purchase money, but they had not exercised that right. The meeting had been called in accordance with the requirement of the Act of Parliament, having been duly advertised, and there being no business to transact no circular had been forwarded to the shareholders, who numbered 710.

A resolution was proposed for the adjournment of the meeting to the 18th inst. in order that further information might be furnished to the shareholders, a circular to be issued to each shareholder informing him of the adjournment.

The CHAIRMAN stated that he could not see any object that was to be gained by the adjournment of the meeting, no business could be done at this meeting, and they would be in the same position on the day of the adjournment. Personally he had, however, no objection to the adjournment if it could be legally done.

The SOLICITOR to the company having explained that there was no legal obstacle to the adjournment of the meeting, the resolution adjourning the same to the 18th inst. was agreed to and the proceedings terminated.

THIRD REGIMENT BENGAL NATIVE INFANTRY.

GENERAL E. HUME, C.B., inspected this regiment at Dinapore in 1880, and, when ordered to take the command in Southern Afghanistan, expressed a desire that it should be sent under his command there. The result has more than justified the favourable opinion which both he and Brigadier General Walker have lost no opportunity in expressing to Colonel Gurden and the officers of the regiment. The 3rd, immediately on arrival at Sibi, sent the right half battalion, under Major Skinner, on an expedition against the Murrees, which resulted in the acknowledgments of Sir R. Sandeman, K.C.S.I. A fortnight later found part of the left half battalion on escort duty with Colonel Reynolds, Political Officer at Khelat, allaying the panic caused by the desertion of the Khan's Pathan troops and pacifying the whole of his dominions, the other half having joined General Baker's column against the Arumbi people at Kandahar; the 3rd were entrusted with the bazaar and gates of the city and citadel, taking the place of the 13th Sikhs, when General Sir D. Stewart was commanding and reduced the Ghazi attack, to a lower number than was ever previously known. Since the withdrawal from Kandahar the opinion of the capacity of the regiment may be judged by its disposition. The front fort of Chumrim is commanded by Colonel W. Gurden with the right half battalion of the 3rd N.I., one company of Sappers, two guns R.A. Mountain Artillery, and a squadron of the 7th B.C., with Lieut. Austen of the regiment, who has passed in Persian, acting as Political Officer. The next fort of Killa Abdulla has two companies of the left half battalion under Captain Burr, who is also entrusted with the field force treasury; and at Gulistan, which is generally regarded as the key of the position in Pishin, Major D. I. Stewart of the regiment commands the troops, including two companies of the 3rd, a division of 5-8 R.A., a squadron of 2nd Sind Horse, two companies of the 63rd Regiment under Major Supportes; and Lieut. J. Noble, of the 3rd N.I., is acting here as commissariat officer. After nearly a year's service in the field the rate of mortality either amongst combatants or camp followers has been very little in excess of what would have taken place in India, and the only officer that marched up with the regiment, and is not now with it, is Brigadier General R. Blair, appointed from the regiment to that position.

COLONIAL HANDBOOKS, MAPS, &c.

NOW READY.

CANADA—including Ontario, North-West Territory, Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia, &c. With New Coloured Map. Crown 8vo., 288 pp. Cloth, 5s.

Times.—Messrs. Silver and Co. have just published a new 'Handbook to Canada,' on the same plan as others of their well known Colonial series, to which it belongs. The main purpose of the book is, of course, practical, though even as a guide to the visitor it will be found serviceable; its special utility, however, consists in the information it contains on the political, social, agricultural, and industrial condition of our great American colony—just such information as intending emigrants are likely to want. Ample, well arranged, and recent statistics are given on all points that can be so illustrated; information as to the value of land in the different districts, and of its various products, means of carriage, education, church, &c. The chapter on Manitoba, about which much has been written recently, is especially interesting, containing a brief, but clear and well-supported, statement as to its progress and present condition. The growth of this province during the last ten years in population and the development of its resources is quite wonderful, considering all the conditions. On the accompanying Map of British North America unusual care has evidently been bestowed.

GRAPHIC, MAY 14, 1881.—"We are already acquainted with Messrs. Silver's Handbooks to Australasia and South Africa. They are concisely written, accurate in information, and full of practical details. The same praise may be accorded to the volume now before us, which (with the exception of Newfoundland, which has not joined the Dominion Confederation) comprises a survey of the whole of British North America. Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, and British Columbia are successively brought under review, the reader's researches being aided by an excellent map. To the intending emigrant the descriptions of Manitoba and British Columbia will be especially attractive. The former region is well known for its wheat-growing capabilities. The climate, though undeniably bitterly cold in the winter, is declared to be pleasant and wholesome. British Columbia possesses the merit—at all events in its coast districts—of a climate which, in its average temperature, and in its freedom from extremes of heat and cold, more resembles that of the mother-country than any other colony. It only needs to be better known to draw a large contingent of settlers from these overcrowded islands."

THE "PISTON" FREEZING MACHINE (ASH'S PATENT).

The "Piston" Freezing Machine Freezing and Moulding Dessert Ices, Icing Wines, and making Block Ice.

Ash's "PISTON" FREEZING MACHINE is the most effective and economical method of freezing known. It is rapidly becoming a part of the "cuisine" in the establishments of the aristocracy of this country; it has received the highest patronage, and is used in all parts of the world. By this process Ice Creams are frozen in shapes ready for table—an operation never before accomplished—entirely superseding the use of ice pots and moulds; it also forms a Wine Cooler and produces Blocks of Ice. When not used with the usual ice and salt mixture, as on board ships, in the Tropics, &c., Ash's Freezing Powders are most effective, and guaranteed to succeed.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE,

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—Beware of Piracy and Imitations. Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was, undoubtedly, the inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say had been sworn to.—See Times, 18th July, 1864. Sold in bottles at 1s., 1d., 2s., 3d., 4s., 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanied each bottle.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, JULY 19, 1881.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, June 28; Madras and Allahabad, June 26; Calcutta, June 25.

THE following are the reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending June 14, 1881:—"With the exceptions of Sind and Guzerat, rain has fallen in all the reporting districts and States, and it seems clear that the rainy season has now generally set in. The fall has been especially heavy in Burma, Assam, Eastern Bengal, and the Central Provinces. In a few districts of the two provinces last named, the weather has, to some extent, retarded sowings; but preparations for the autumn crop are now in active progress in most parts of the country. Agricultural prospects continue good. No information has been received from Mysor and Coorg, or from Rajputana."

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times furnishes us with a brief further report up to July 17. He says:—"The weather and crop reports are favourable for all parts of India, except Mysor. The prospects of that province looked gloomy a fortnight ago, but now they show some improvement."

WITH reference to the health of Calcutta, the Friend of India says:—"Our city will bear comparison with any city in the world in point of health. The report of the health officer for the week ending June 18 gives the number of deaths as 143, giving a death ratio of only 17.3 per thousand per annum, and we know of no city of similar size which comes near this."

A TELEGRAM to the Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department, from Bagdad, June 4, states:—"Favourable reports plague continue; disease expected shortly to cease."

THE crisis in Afghanistan cannot now be delayed many days. Ayub Khan, falsifying all the official vaticinations of his weakness, has at last appeared in force on the Helmand, and any moment may bring us news of an important, if not a decisive, battle. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs under date of July 17:—

"The news reached India last night of the arrival of Ayub Khan at Hyderabad, on the bank of the Helmand, the point where he crossed last year. It is still uncertain whether he intends to move on Girishk and Kandahar or to march direct to Cabul, via Ghazni. Meanwhile the Ameer is showing considerable energy in pushing forward his troops towards Kandahar and thence to Girishk. It does not appear whether he has himself left Cabul, nor is there any sign of his having ordered a counter movement on Herat from Turkestan, where he has a large and well equipped force under Ishak Khan. It is believed that Herat is now absolutely denuded of troops, so that an attack on that place by way of Balkh and Maimana could hardly fail to succeed, and would seriously embarrass, if not actually ruin, Ayub Khan's prospects. It is difficult to understand how a man of Abdur Rahman's ability could have let slip so obvious a chance of striking a blow at a weak and vital point, unless on the supposition that he feels bound to keep Turkestan in strength, so as to secure his retreat in the event of being driven from Cabul. It may, however, be that Ishak Khan has actually marched for Herat, although no intelligence to that effect has been received here, and certainly the recent conduct of the Ameer in bringing his family to Cabul would seem to indicate that he feels no apprehension as to his position there. I am told that Daoud Shah, now a State prisoner at Simla, expresses the belief that, if Ayub once gets past Ghazni, the whole country will rise in his favour, and, if he is victorious in the first regular engagement, the Ameer's troops will desert to his standard as a man, and the Zamindawar people will join him en masse; but this view, although far from improbable, must be taken for what it is worth, seeing that it comes from an old adherent of the Shere Ali and Yakub faction. It will be easier to foretell the result after the first battle, the news of which may arrive at any moment; and it is not unlikely that the fate of Afghanistan may be decided this week."

We are not told by what route this most important information has reached Calcutta. It appears not to have been derived from any of the official sources of information on the frontier, for on July 17 nothing was known of it at Quetta. Masterly inactivity must already glory in being beyond the reach of all the noise and worry of what is going on in Afghanistan; and doubtless Lord Ripon sleeps the more soundly by reason of the absence of any exciting telegrams or other troublesome communications from behind the veil.

THIS is the telegram despatched from Quetta on the day following that on which the above announcement was made in Calcutta:—

"There is little news from Kandahar beyond the despatch of reinforcements to the Helmand and the arrival of Ayub Khan at Farrah early in the month. Hashim Khan and Muhammad Hasan Khan are at Dilaram, just inside the Herat border, collecting supplies. The Ameer's generals appear to intend awaiting Ayub's attack on the Helmand, hardly a politic proceeding, as it will give him an opportunity of raising the Zamindawar tribes. Up to the present they have shown no symptom of disloyalty to the Ameer. Ayub's most prominent partisan among them has recently sent to ask pardon, and Taj Muhammad Khan, one of his generals, who has been attempting to excite disturbances in Tezin, has been seized by the Durani chiefs of the district and sent a prisoner to Kandahar."

MEANWHILE, the official telegrams tell us about Ayub's arrival at Farrah early this month, and babble pleasantly about the reinforcements going forward to maintain the Ameer's authority. The following telegram from the Viceroy to the Secretary of State, dated Simla, July 16, has been received at the India-office:—

"Following from Quetta, dated 16th:—Sirdar Shamsuddin Khan writes from Kandahar on 10th and 11th that all is well. He has heard of Ayub's arrival in Farrah. Two regiments of infantry, with twelve guns, had just left Kandahar for Pusht-i-kud; three regiments of infantry, six troops cavalry, and 800 Khasadars are on their way from Cabul. One regiment has already arrived at Kelat, and the rest are between that place and Ghazni."

LORD RIPON was hardly likely to lose such a grand opportunity for another British "withdrawal" as that afforded by Ayub's arrival once more at the point on the Helmand whence last year he pounced upon us at Miiwand. Accordingly, the Quetta telegram of July 17—the day after the receipt in Calcutta of the news about Ayub—shows that the Viceroy is equal to the occasion, if the reports current there are to be trusted; and the telegram shows, in any case, that another of our brilliant "strategic movements to the rear" is generally believed to be imminent. The telegram is as follows:—

"Reports reach us from India that the abandonment of not Pishin only, but even of Quetta, is being seriously discussed. This seems hardly probable, for it cannot be denied that our occupation, which has now lasted for four years, has given to the wild border country from the sea to Dera Ghazi Khan a tranquillity and prosperity never enjoyed before. The tribes have not yet had time to forget their old habits, and our retirement to the former frontier would be the signal for a widespread anarchy, of which the first and inevitable result would be the entire stoppage of trade and the expulsion of the Khan of Kelat from his throne by his Brahui vassals. The cession of Pishin to the monarch of reunited Afghanistan, whenever it is settled that there is to be such a potentate and who is he to be, stands upon different grounds, though if we remain in Quetta it is difficult to see what object is to be gained in giving up a neighbouring district which is ours by treaty, which no one grudges us, whose inhabitants have not the smallest wish to be parted from their present masters, and which forms a convenient neutral zone between Afghan and Beloochee."

BUT Lord Ripon doubtless thinks that Ayub's presence in Southern Afghanistan might cause us a good deal of bother if we remained in Pishin or even at Quetta, and possibly might even compromise the masterly character of our inactivity. Whereas, if we retire with sufficient speed, we can thank God we are rid of a kuave.

Crimine ab uno. The Times Sunday telegram from Calcutta admirably illustrates the valuable nature of the information that we get from across the frontier, whether that frontier be North East or North West:—

"The report of a raid by the Sama Nagas on the Latha section of the same tribe turns out to be absolutely untrue. It shows how little we know of what passes beyond the frontiers from the fact that this report, which gave most circumstantial details as to the numbers of the heads carried off by the raiders, was accepted by the Government as true and passed uncontradicted for a fortnight."

And when we have carried out all possible "withdrawals" on the side of Afghanistan, and have got our head well within the nightcap of Mr. Gladstone's "natural" frontier, we shall have the comforting certainty that all our knowledge of Afghan and Central Asian affairs must be of about the same value as the above, and therefore need not disquiet us.

At the date of the departure of the mail the monsoon rains had been unusually light throughout Western India, and had hardly reached as far northward as Gujerat. There was a moderate fall of rain in the southern and eastern portions of the Bombay Presidency, in Berar, and in the Central Provinces during the last two or three days of May and the first week of June. About the 7th June the rain began to fall heavily in these districts, at the same time extending northward, some distance beyond Bombay, and into Nasik and Khandesh. This heavy burst continued with but little interruption until the 12th, when the skies began to clear. At Deesa there was a heavy fall of over two inches on the 16th, but this appears to have been somewhat local, for it did not affect either Rajkot or Surat. During the week ending with Thursday, June 23, the weather was fine generally, and, with the exception of a shower of less than half an inch at Surat, the rainfall throughout Western India was insignificant. During the period of heavy rainfall from the 7th to the 12th June the barometer at Bombay was low, but except on the 10th and 11th it was not lower than usual for the time of year. On every day of the week of fine weather ending with the 23rd it read much higher than the average. On Tuesday, the 21st, it reached its highest point of 15 inch above the normal, since which time its general tendency had been downwards, until it was at departure of mail again almost as low as the average of the season, and was still falling. With this downward movement of the barometer there was rain all along the coast, from Cochin to Bombay, on the 24th and 25th, and another heavy burst was daily expected. Bengal, on the other hand, was complaining of too much rain, the indigo, sugarcane, and paddy crops in several districts having been damaged through excessive rainfall.

At such a time as this, when the masterly inactivity policy is just about to begin to show what it can do for the Empire—when the curtain is rung up and the protagonists in the coming business have just stepped up to the footlights—there is something almost comical in the announcement, telegraphed from Calcutta on Sunday, that the Viceroy is understood to have ordered what is "practically equivalent" to the concealment of all official information from the public and the Press of India. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs:—

"It is reported that the Press Commissionership is about to be attached to the Home office instead of the Foreign office, as heretofore. This will be practically equivalent to abolishing the office, the usefulness of which has already been seriously curtailed by the recent changes in its constitution, which were carried out in contemptuous defiance of the almost unanimous views of the Indian Press."

PROBABLY the most liberal measure that has ever been recorded in the history of India was the establishment of the Press Commissionership by Lord Lytton; whereby a Government that is subject to no interpellations in Parliament, whose deliberations are carried on in camera, and whose actions are wrapped in a traditional shroud of the closest mystery, voluntarily consented to forego all these questionable privileges, and to take the public into its confidence by a machinery that commanded the enthusiastic adhesion of the whole Indian Press. It is true that the hands of a Government that dares thus spontaneously to reveal itself must be very clean; its motives must be frank and clear as daylight; it must have the fullest certainty of the sincerity, the wisdom, and the benevolence of its actions. Lord Lytton's Government felt that certainty, and had the courage of its convictions. It bade the Press Commissioner interpret to the public, freely and frankly, all its measures and all its motives. It further bade him supply the public, as freely and frankly, with all possible information, so that the public might themselves judge how far the interpretation officially given was a just and true one. In March last, Lord Ripon abolished the Press Commissioner, and put the "Press Commissioner's Office" under the immediate control of that most "diplomatic" of diplomats, the present Foreign Secretary. Now, we are told that it is to be "practically" abolished: which means, we may without unfairness presume, that it is to be abolished in fact, whilst a pretence of maintaining it will still be kept up for a short time—perhaps until the close of the present session of Parliament, when no unpleasant questions can be asked in either House. And in the meantime, perhaps the addition of the Press Commissioners Office to the House Office will necessitate the creation of another under secretaryship there, as it formerly did in the Foreign Office.

THE Calcutta Press has been especially vehement in its condemnation of this return to a system of official mystery and secrecy. It is now announced (in the Times Calcutta telegram of last Sunday) that "the Viceroy will visit Agra in November or December, and will probably hold a durbar there, after which it seems to be likely that he will go on a tour for six weeks or two months."

THE Government has fixed the toll tariff for the Khyber which will be levied at Jamrud on all caravans availing themselves of our protection. Under the new arrangements the rates vary according to the animals and nature of the loads, from five annas for a loaded bullock to two rupees for each camel carrying the more valuable articles of trade.

THE Mandalay Government is once more at its old pranks. The Rangoon correspondent of the Times, telegraphing on the 16th inst., announces that that Government has sold the monopoly of the cotton trade. They are preparing to sell the monopoly of the cutch trade. Business is much disturbed in consequence, and the Chinese dealers are closing their Mandalay branches.

KING THEEBAW has, however, other affairs on hand. The Times of India says that the Queen has made an attempt to poison her lord. "She sent him some sweets, which she said she had herself prepared; but, instead of eating them, the King sent for his mother-in-law, and gave them to her." Shrewd king! "The result was the speedy death of the old lady." It is also reported that her Majesty "has managed to construct a little box with two peep holes behind the King's throne, and that she thus keeps the strictest watch upon all the King does."

THE telegraphic communication between England and her Eastern dependencies is most seriously imperilled—the whole of it at the present moment literally hanging on one wire. The following notification is to-day issued by the Indo-European Telegraph Company (Limited):—

"Both the cables of the Eastern Telegraph Company between Aden and Bombay are broken down on the Bombay coast and cannot at present, in spite of every effort, be got at for repairs owing to the monsoon being in fully activity. Of the cables belonging to the Indo-European Government Department in the Persian Gulf, and forming part of the Indo-European Telegraph via Teheran, one of the two cables between Bushire and Jask is interrupted, and the cable off the Beloochistan coast is also broken down. This reduces the communication between Bushire and Karachi, and consequently that between Europe and India, to only one wire, instead of the four wires and two duplicated routes which are usually at the disposal of the public. In reference to the notice from the Turkish Ambassador that messages may be transmitted by way of Bagdad and Bushire, such a course would be very inadvisable, because the present special direct wires of the Indo-European Telegraph Company to Teheran and thence to Bushire are working without any delay whatever, the delay lying between Bushire and Karachi. At the time of writing, however, noon of Monday, the delay from India has been reduced to two hours fourteen minutes, and telegrams from China and Australia are arriving in from four to five hours. The Indo-European Government Department have ordered their cable repairing ship Patrick Stewart to proceed at once to Bushire to set right the Bushire-Jask section, and the repair of this section will greatly improve the working. As soon as this object is accomplished she will be ordered to repair the cable along the Beloochistan coast, thus restoring the duplicate wires of the Indo-European route via Teheran, when all delay will cease, as either of the duplicated lines of the Indo-European or of the Eastern route is easily capable of doing all the work when they are in their usual order."

THE earnings of the East Indian Railway for the week ending June 18 were Rs.7,44,682-14-6, against Rs.7,45,541-8-5 for the corresponding period of 1880, or Rs.494-1-1, and Rs.494-10-2 per mile respectively. The earnings from Jan. 1 to June 18, 1881, and 1880, were Rs.2,15,01,763-5-8 and Rs.2,14,33,561-13-3. Mileage in both years 1,507½.

THE earnings of Indian railways for the week ending June 4 were as follow per mile:—Great Indian Peninsula, Rs.464-6-1; Rajputana State, Rs.243-0-4; Bombay, Baroda, and Central India, Rs.567-15-9; Eastern Bengal, Rs.378-7-7; H. and N.S., Rs.154-15-7; East India, Rs.572-9-0; Scindia, Rs.85-6-3; Oudh and Rohilkund, Rs.169-3-7.

THE earnings of the Eastern Bengal Railway for the week ending June 11 were Rs.74,950 against Rs.50,065 for the corresponding week of last year, or Rs.426-7-4 and Rs.291-9-11 per mile for the two periods respectively. The earnings from January till June 11, 1881 and 1880, were Rs.15,43,406 and Rs.15,81,569, mileage in both years 175½.

EFFORTS are being made to introduce a new industry into Bengal on the model of the coffee planting experiments made in the Chittagong district, which are said to have been very successful, especially those with the Liberian variety, and a further trial is about to be made on a larger scale.

IN Major Baring's Budget statement there was a great flourish of trumpets about the "private enterprise" that was to be attracted to India under the new régime, and to redeem the country from many of its financial difficulties, thanks to the saving grace of a Gladstone Government with a Baring as finance member. The usual mouse has now appeared. It has taken the shape of a railway for the exploitation of the country on the fringe of the Sundarbans—very nice and convenient for the Jessore station, for one or two planters at Khulna, and for the "dipties" or assistants at Bongong, and certainly passing through a thickly-populated district—but about as likely to tap the moon as to take any very great share of the cheaply-carried "river-borne traffic" of which so much is made in the prospectus. And a good deal of Major Baring's "private enterprise" turns out to be "Messrs. Baring Brothers and Co." And the conditions which Major Baring, on behalf of the State, has made with Messrs. Baring Brothers and Co., on behalf of "private enterprise," do not seem to involve those alarming sacrifices on the part of the latter or that sublime confidence in "the future of private enterprise in India" that might have been expected. The announcement of the little negotiation that has appeared in the Times makes no mention of the terms on which the necessary land has been acquired by the company, nor of the method by which the revenues of India are to be recouped the amount of interest advanced between now and the 30th June, 1886. The announcement is as follows:—

Messrs. Baring Brothers and Co. and Messrs. N. M. Rothschild and Sons invite applications for 100,000 shares of £10 each, the capital of the Bengal Central Railway Company (Limited), for which a concession has been granted by the Secretary of State for India in Council. The primary object of the company is stated to be to carry into effect a contract with the Secretary of State for India in Council for the construction and working of a single-track railway on the standard 5 ft. 6 in. gauge from Calcutta to Bongong, Jessore, and Koolna, with a branch from Bongong to Ranaghat on the Eastern Bengal Railway—a total length, exclusive of sidings, of about 130 miles. Statistics are appended showing the up-stream river-borne traffic passing Koolna in 1877 to have amounted to 273,909 tons, and the down-stream traffic in the same year to have amounted to 537,418 tons. Under the contract with the Secretary of State the capital of the company, as raised, will be paid into the Bank of England to his account, to be afterwards drawn upon, with his sanction, for the purposes of the company. Until June 30, 1886, or the sooner opening of the line for traffic throughout, the Secretary of State will pay to the company out of the revenue of India half-yearly, on January 1 and July 1, interest at 4 per cent. per annum on all sums not exceeding in the whole £1,250,000 which shall have been so paid to his account."

THE Indian trade and navigation returns for May have been published in Calcutta this week. The telegraphed account of them shows a decided increase in the imports of private merchandise over the corresponding months of 1879-1880, but a decrease in the exports of India produce as compared with last year. An official paper just issued calls attention to the rapidly developing trade with China in Bombay yarn, raw cotton, and piece goods. The quantity of Bombay yarn exported to Hong Kong has been trebled since 1877, and there has also been a large increase in the export of raw cotton thither from Bengal and Burma. The Government express a hope that this advancing trade may eventually enable it to curtail the opium trade. Another recently published paper gives figures showing a steady increase in the tea cultivation in India. There were working in 1880 274 tea gardens, against 257 in the previous year, and the number of acres under tea cultivation had increased from 36,668 in 1879 to 38,805 in 1880. The great danger now threatening this industry is that of the supply outrunning the demand, and the India tea planters are wisely directing all their energies to lowering the cost of production and the opening of new markets.

BABU NISHIKANT CHATTERJI, a Bengali gentleman long employed as Sanskrit Professor in the University of St. Petersburg, has just published in Calcutta an account of his impressions among the Russians, which has created some sensation there. The Indian Mirror, the well-known daily organ of the Brahmo Somaj in Calcutta, says:—

"While Secretaries and Under Secretaries of State are making public exhibitions of their utter ignorance of the movements of Russia before the House of Commons in London, it has so happened that a member of that slighted race whom witless Anglo-Indian journalists are pleased to describe under the generic title of 'Babudom' has sent forth from the distant walls of Zurich a most impressive warning to his countrymen in India to 'beware of the bear,' and to be true to the British Crown, to which they owe fealty and allegiance. This warning is not a mere effusion of sentiment, but is the outcome of a strong conviction, formed on rational grounds. So far from sharing with Mr. Gladstone and his party in their confidence in the good faith and friendliness of Russia, Babu Nishikant Chatterji, whose position at the Russian metropolis gave him singularly exceptional opportunities for feeling the pulse of Russian circles of society on most political questions, declares it as his opinion that the worst suspicions of the late Lord Beaconsfield and his party fell very far short of the mark."

THE following gentlemen have been appointed Fellows of the Calcutta University:—Hon. W. Tyrrell, C. P. Carmichael, B. W. Colvin, C. Robertson, the Venerable J. Baly, Surgeon Major J. M. Coates, the Very Rev. Father D. Vanimpe, Babu Hem Chunder Banerjee, Muhammad Yusuf, W. D. Bruce, W. T. Webb, J. S. Slater, J. S. Wilson, Babu Radhika Prasad Mookerjee, L. Schwendler, Babu Lal Madhab Mookerjee.

THE Government of India has forwarded a despatch to the Secretary of State requesting his sanction to proceed with legislation for raising the Punjab College to the status of a university.

THE number of visitors to the Indian Collection at the South Kensington Museum for the month of June was 23,448; total from the opening on May 15, 1880, 219,080.

MESSRS. CARRITT AND Co.'s last fortnightly report on the Calcutta tea market notices two public sales, those of June 16 and June 23. It says:—

"These have comprised 6,543 chests, of which 6,330 sold under the hammer, with good competition for all descriptions at firmer rates. We quote an advance of ¼d. per lb. for teas costing under 1s. 1d., and of 1½d. to 2d. for teas over that price. Fine and finest teas continue in strong demand, and command very full values. Manufacture is progressing satisfactorily in most of the producing districts, although in Cachar many gardens are suffering from blight."

THE Times of India gives the following obituary of the week ending June 28:—Captain G. Brehon, Bengal Staff Corps; Mr. Jamsetjee Cursetjee Batliboi; Mr. K. Mackay.

INDIAN GOLD MINES.

WE have just received a concise statement from Mr. Seymour, C.E., the engineer, appointed "to supervise from London the Alpha property," which gives a hopeful view of the real state of affairs in India. He states, and his remarks appear to be deserving of the careful consideration of investors in this description of property:—

"Although, in the first instance, I interpreted the telegram sent by Mr. Severn as meaning 20z. per ton for each of the nineteen tons crushed, I am not surprised at the results actually obtained, even if only 20z. in the whole have been obtained from the nineteen tons. It must be borne in mind that the crushings are purely experimental, and low returns must be frequently expected in such cases. It should also be remembered that, as shown by Mr. Harman's letter and Mr. Severn's telegram, the tailings have not been treated, and that Mr. Severn expected these to yield over 10z. per ton. Judging from the character of the Indian gold, and Mr. Severn's remarks, it appears to me probable that the bulk of the gold will be found in the tailings. The present experimental crushings are trials only, conducted with temporary and wholly inadequate appliances, and can furnish no safe criterion as to the prospects and value of the goldfields of the Wynaad or of this particular property. In view of this fact it is as unreasonable to be unduly elated because extraordinary results of one crushing are reported as it would be to be depressed because further experiments give results entirely different. I repeat what I have often said, that, until the mining operations are in full and regular working order, we shall have no reliable data to go upon. Meanwhile, my own favourable opinion as to the probable value of the goldfields, based upon personal and careful inspection, remains unchanged."

The directors of the Devála Moyar and Rhodes Reef Gold Mining Companies have received advice of Mr. Brough Smyth's return from Australia, with a staff consisting of a gold mining manager (Mr. Gitchell) and two miners. Mr. Brough Smyth writes:—"The aspect of all the reefs is cheering, and it is indeed gratifying to find that Mr. Gitchell, one of the most experienced miners to be found in Australia, entirely concurs in my views." The first complete equipment of machinery is on the spot, and the second was in course of transit from the port to the mines. Every effort is being made to push forward operations, the monsoon notwithstanding.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE SCIENTIFIC STUDY OF THE HINDU LAW.* A LITTLE work entitled "A View of the Hindu Law as Administered by the High Court of Judicature at Madras," which was published in 1877, attracted a good deal of attention at the time among Indian civilians and lawyers. Its author was Mr. Nelson, C.S., a barrister, formerly a Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, and now a District Judge in the Madras Presidency. Its avowed object was to point out "the grievous errors and disastrous results" that have ensued from "the divorce of Orientalism from the study of the Hindu law;" and it presented a somewhat startling indictment of the present law as administered to the non-Mahammadan peoples of Southern India. The work now before us, "A Prospectus of the Scientific Study of the Hindu Law," is a bold development of the author's earlier strictures. It is obvious that in this place we can do no more than offer the barest possible description of a controversial treatise, dealing with a subject of such extent and such vital importance as the very fundamental theories of the whole Hindu law of Madras, and attacking the very foundations of that law with the most searching and damaging criticism. Mr. Nelson's inquiries and arguments bear on their face the evidence of deep research, of original and powerful thought, of anxious and conscientious deliberation. Where they fail to produce conviction they will undoubtedly command respect; and it is impossible to doubt that the publication of this work will stimulate, in a very remarkable manner, the investigations of those who are interested in the vast questions at issue, both in India and at home. And it will be observed that, while Mr. Nelson's striking observations are chiefly confined to the Hindu law of Madras, which alone has been the object of his personal study and experience, they are undoubtedly suggestive of similar attacks being successfully made on the whole system of our Indian laws as administered in every province and for every section of the population. Speaking broadly, Mr. Nelson's contention, supported by very learned, clear, and powerful arguments, is (1), that we have established a general system of so-called "Hindu" law for an infinite number of totally distinct communities who never had, and never ought to have, any "general" system at all; (2), that we have set up, as universal authorities, systems that are in any case of doubtful authority, and that certainly were never intended to be applicable to any but comparatively insignificant sections of the vast populations now subject to their operation. His method of argument is to set down a large number of queries bearing on these points; and, whilst indicating under each inquiry the line which he considers the investigation should take, he allows the reader to infer the conclusions to which he has been driven by his own researches. Perhaps the most interesting and striking part of the work is that which deals with the "Law of Manu;" and the radical nature of Mr. Nelson's treatment of his subject may perhaps best be illustrated by quoting the series of questions, numbered as the fourth series, with which he heads this section. He says:—"Who were the 'Manavas,' whose Dharmasastra is known as the 'Code of Menu?' Where did they live? When did they become extinct? What sect, if any, now represents them? Were they very numerous, or powerful, or notable, or was there anything special about them that induced other sects to govern themselves by their teaching? And, in particular, did their influence reach down to the South of India?" These questions are sufficiently suggestive of the tenor of Mr. Nelson's book; and from them our readers will judge that he has contrived to make an apparently dry inquiry very little other than sensational.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE LATE COL. OLIPHANT, R.E.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—As an old friend of Col. Oliphant, would you allow me space for a few words? This gallant and esteemed officer closed, lately, his long and honourable career at Woolington Hall, Cambridgeshire, and was followed to his last resting place, in the village cemetery by his many sons and H.H. Maharaja Dhuleep Singh as chief mourners. Col. James Oliphant, who was of an old Perthshire family, entered the Madras army, as an engineer, early in life, and soon earned distinction as a brave as well as a scientific officer. The engineering works suggested by him and carried out under his supervision in the Nizam's dominions caused his name to be held in honoured and grateful remembrance by the native community in that part of India. On his retirement from the service of the East India Company, Col. Oliphant was elected soon after a director of that important and powerful corporation, and filled, in due course, the distinguished position of chairman, with much credit to himself and advantage to the public service, with a genial urbanity rare in those days among the old magnates of Leadenhall-street. Subsequently, Col. Oliphant became connected, officially, with the Maharaja Dhuleep Singh, and accompanied his Highness on his visits to Court, and aided him generally in the management of his affairs. Colonel Oliphant was a courteous Christian gentleman, and earned for himself cordial esteem and appreciation in the highest quarters. In the exercise of his patronage while a director in the East India Company he was discriminating and generous, and many a gallant officer will read this humble tribute with dimmed eyes and a swelling heart that so brave, so good, and so kindly a spirit has passed away.—I am, yours, &c., Bryanston-square, July 16. W. P. ANDREW.

THE PUNJAB FRONTIER FORCE.

OUR recent article upon the probable transfer of the Punjab Frontier Force to the Commander in Chief has, we are glad to say, met with much approval among officers on the frontier. We are assured that such a transfer would be hailed with satisfaction, provided the troops composing the Punjab Frontier Force are allowed to take their tour of service in stations which are now under the Commander in Chief. At present the force has to garrison the following places on the border:—Abbottabad (headquarters), Kohat, Bannu, Dera Ismail Khan, (Tank border), Dera Ghazi Khan, Rajanpur, Murdan. The last-named place belongs exclusively to the Corps of Guides. With the exception of Abbottabad, none of these stations can be called "desirable." The expense of living in them, miles away from the railway, is 20 per cent. higher than in ordinary cantonments; the cost of travelling in reaching and leaving them is very great; and yet the pay is exactly the same (the Guides excepted) as in native regiments under the direct orders of the Commander in Chief. A correspondent writes:—"There are many Piffer officers who would gladly serve in stations like Umballa for Rs. 100 less pay. The outpost duty to be done is so constant that the men of a regiment are never together; and the duties of the commandant, adjutant, and other officers are proportionately heavy. The promotion of those who have joined the regiment is very slow; officers of fourteen years' standing being still only wing officers. Witness Major Bruce, 6th Punjab Infantry, who joined the regiment in 1863; Major Hastings, 2nd Sikhs, joined in 1862; Major Mosley, 3rd Punjab Infantry; and Major Ramsden, 3rd Sikhs. Unless the five years' rule be brought in, there will be little chance of promotion for many officers, as most of the commandants are comparatively young men, and are not likely to leave. Subaltern officers will not join the force now that passing in Pashtu has been made compulsory and the chances of promotion reduced to nil. Regiments were sent back during the late war because the Pathan element in them was considered dangerous by the military authorities: why then keep such regiments always on the frontier? They would be greatly improved by being quartered with British troops in cantonments; and the ideas of officers would be enlarged and be kept from growing rusty if association in wider circles were allowed. There is said to be an idea of retaining the local formation of the force, even when it comes under the chief; but this would be a mistake. Either leave it all one or give regiments composing it a chance of being quartered in other stations equally with the ordinary native army.—Pioneer.

THE MADRAS GOVERNORSHIP.

THE delay which has attended the appointment of a successor to the late Governor of Madras, the contradiction of the rumour that the post had been offered to and accepted by Lord Camperdown, and the known proclivities of the statesman who is at the present moment only less influential than the Secretary of State himself in directing the course of Indian politics, encourage the hope that a reform, as to the necessity of which for the last dozen years all the best authorities have been agreed, may be at any rate under contemplation. Two years ago Lord Northbrook informed his brother peers that it was "desirable to examine and see whether the expenses of the Governorship of Madras and Bombay might not be reduced. The Governorships of Madras and Bombay were much more expensive than the Governments of Bengal, the North Western Provinces, and the Punjab, which were not inferior in responsibility and importance at the present time, when communication was much more rapid than formerly." Last summer the same question was again raised, curiously enough, by the very person on whom public rumour lately conferred the post, Lord Camperdown. The question, we may therefore fairly assume, is under consideration, and when once it has reached this stage its merits are so clear that the achievement of reform must, notwithstanding the natural reluctance of the English Government to surrender a fine piece of patronage, be a mere matter of time. The present anomalous distribution of power, or rather of pay and dignity, among the several Governments is, as everyone knows, purely accidental. It has resulted from the fact that, by the "Regulating Act" of George III. in 1773, and Mr. Pitt's famous measure in 1784, the Governor General of Bengal was vested with powers of supervision over the other presidencies which make him practically Governor General of India, a title which was not actually conferred on him till 1813. On the renewal of the charter, on this occasion, India was divided for administrative purposes into four great divisions. Fort William, Agra, Madras, and Bombay, with a governor in each, the governor general still retaining the governorship of Bengal. Meanwhile objections were raised to the proposed governorship of Agra, and it never was actually created. Lord William Bentinck, and, afterwards, Lord Metcalfe, insisted on the evils arising from two such important offices being united in the same person, and in 1853 the power to appoint a Lieutenant Governor of Bengal was conceded. Thus has come about the anomaly to which Col. Chesney many years ago directed attention, that the largest, richest, and infinitely most advanced province should be on a lower footing in the scale of administration than the other and less important provinces. Bengal, with its huge area of 200,000 square miles, its vast population of seventy or eighty millions, its infinite variety of race, and religion, its vast commercial interests, its large European element, its serious demands in the way of ceremony and hospitality on the local representative of the Crown, must surely require at least as independent, as costly, as authoritative a Government as the two provinces of Madras and Bombay, the combined populations of which are scarcely two-thirds of that of Bengal, and the political importance of which is infinitely less. Why, in the name of common sense, should the Queen's representative in Madras get Rs. 32,000 per annum more salary than the corresponding official in Bengal? Why should his staff and household cost Rs. 92,000 more, his council Rs. 7,22,000 more, his military secretary, an officer who is not to be found in Bengal, Rs. 65,000? The case against the Governor of Bombay is still stronger; his pay, his staff, his household and his tours costing the Empire no less than Rs. 4,30,000 per annum, and all for a population scarcely a fifth of that of Bengal.

The really important question is not, however, one of economy. If it were merely that the two Governors drew a somewhat better salary and had a somewhat more splendid establishment, we might acquiesce contentedly enough in an accidental inequality which did no one any harm and which it was scarcely worth while to attack. But the fact is that the Governorships do, we maintain, exercise a practically prejudicial effect on the general administration of the country. Their independence is, of course, a sham. They cannot write a line to the Secretary of State without sending a copy to the Government of India, and their correspondence is confined to local and unimportant topics. They cannot spend a rupee without the same sanction as a Lieutenant Governor requires; in fact, from the enlightened alacrity with which the present Lieutenant Governor of Bengal has carried out the scheme of decentralisation, he enjoys far greater financial independence than either of the Governors. The military independence of the Governorships is purely ornamental, and disappears at the first symptom of any real business being on hand. None the less the two minor Presidencies enjoy a traditional, prescriptive right of occasional insubordination and chronic irregularity. Madras is, we believe, so invariably behindhand with its correspondence that there is a standing order that business is not to be delayed for want of a reply from that Government. At any moment of difficulty this slumbering sort of insubordination may be aroused into dangerous activity. "Hence," as a recent author has observed, "arise constant friction, latent animosity, suspicion that an encroachment on their rights is intended, jealousy of external interferences, an esprit de corps which is apt to override every consideration of public utility." Useful reforms are postponed because some local magnate has a hobby or a prejudice; delays are occasioned when delay often means the final loss of a favourable opportunity, tempers are embittered, contagion is encouraged, all the machinery of the State is clogged; necessary improvements are postponed till a more favourable opportunity. The rival officials come to regard one another almost as opponents instead of colleagues; in the place of frank and cordial co-operation there may be found too often "reticence, secrecy, struggles to carry out an independent opinion at all hazards, cullen resistance to all attempts on the part of the superior authority to enforce obedience; and consequent upon this, there will always be the possibility of a more or less serious breakdown."

The strongest of all objections to the system of Governorship is that it results in the appointments being given not to the flower of the Indian Civil Service but to English politicians too obscure to aspire to office, or too troublesome to be admitted to a cabinet. It is almost an insult to suggest a comparison between the present Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, ripe in an official experience of twenty years of Indian service, of proved ability and statesmanship, of admirable tact and business ability, with a man like Lord Camperdown, whose utmost political achievement is to hazard a few remarks or ask an unimportant question in Parliament; with men like Hobart, whose tastes were those of a literary recluse, or like the Duke of Buckingham, notorious for their unbusiness like habits, and troublesome self opinionated obstinacy. The Duke of Buckingham, as is well known, spent the last few precious weeks before the late famine, not in completing his arrangements for the dire struggle that was at hand, but in cruising about the Bay of Bengal in search of a cyclone and in broaching absurd railway projects to the Governor of Ceylon. The consequence was that many parts of Madras were presently in a state of disorder and demoralisation from which no subsequent efforts were sufficient to rescue them. Similar acts of imprudence and ignorance might be culled from the biographies of too many of the local Governors. The fact is, strange it may seem to the English public, the Government of an Indian Province of twenty or thirty millions of people, requires for its head various important qualities which it is almost impossible that a second or third rate English politician should possess. He has innumerable important questions to decide, he must be a good judge of character, he must be of indefatigable industry and a rapid worker, or he will be overwhelmed, and he must know with more than mere superficial acquaintance the facts of the numerous problems with which he will be occupied. It is no disrespect to brilliant diplomatists like Lord Napier, or to the amiable and deservedly beloved gentleman whom Madras is now deploring, to say that they had not the opportunity of learning what a really efficient ruler of an Indian province must know, or of becoming what he ought to be. If it should happen that the Madras Presidency were fortunate enough to be ruled over by the administrator to whose wisdom and energy the prosperity of Bengal is so largely owing, even Madras conservatism would, we think, be convinced that a civilian of tried capacity and varied experience would do more for the real wellbeing of the province than the fictitious splendours of an independent régime administered by gentlemen whom the chances of English politics have wafted, irrespective of experience or talent, to a comfortable berth in a province so remote that blunders may pass unobserved and inefficiency produce only local inconvenience.—Englishman.

THE EVACUATION OF GILGIT.

It would be as well if the Government allowed the public to have some inkling of the reasons which have led to the withdrawal of the political agency from Gilgit. We wonder if they were of the same character as the reason put forward for the withdrawal from Chaman. Of late, the Government must have had a surfeit of withdrawals. It has withdrawn from Cabul, from Kandahar, from the Mahsud country, from Gilgit, and it has sought reasons for withdrawing from Pishin. We do not know from what other point of the frontier it could withdraw, unless it be from Ladakh, and we would suggest that this movement be taken into consideration. The policy of withdrawal would then have been completed, and with it the opinion of the public on the wisdom of the present administration.—Indian Daily News.

SIMLA FINE ARTS SOCIETY.—The Simla Fine Arts Society intend to open the fourteenth annual exhibition on Sept. 17 next. Col. F. C. Maisey is honorary secretary.—Ibid.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

POPULATION OF THE N. W. P. AND OUDH.—The preliminary statement of the population of the tahsils of the North-West Provinces and Oudh is published in the last Gazette of those provinces, and this statement makes the number of inhabitants to be 44,107,118.

A PRACTICAL STUDENT.—Mr. B. D. Pal Chowdery, a wealthy zemindar of Nuddea, whose departure to England we alluded to a few months back, and who has been studying iron in London, having finished his term of probation under a professional gentleman, intends shortly to enter a manufactory at Manchester.—Indian Daily News.

SURVEY OF THE PUNJAB FRONTIER.—We learn that the Geological Survey Department propose to carry out operations on the Punjab frontier during the coming field season, provided there be no political objections to their plans, of which the following is a brief outline. It is intended to take up the work from the point to which it was carried in Sind, four years ago, by Mr. Blanford, and carry it into connection with Mr. Wynne's work in the Punjab. This will involve an exploration of the hills on and beyond the border in the Dera Ghazi Khan, Dera Ismail Khan, Bannu, and perhaps Kohat districts; while it is further proposed to extend operations into Hazara, along the eastern side of the Kaghan Valley. Mr. Blanford will probably commence work about Sibi some time in November, carrying on his explorations along the skirts of the Murri Hills to Bannu. The work, it is believed, is a very important one in the interests of geology.—Civil and Military Gazette.

ART AT ULWAR.—The Maharaja of Ulwar has invited Mr. Kipling, of the Arts School, Lahore, to his capital, for the purpose of consulting that gentleman on the subject of starting an Industrial Arts Institution at Ulwar. Mr. Kipling has promised to give all the assistance in his power to the Maharaja.—Times of India.

NEW RAILWAY.—The Government of Bengal have approved of the proposal to construct a line of railway from the Buctaroore Station on the East India Railway to Behar; and plans and estimates have already been drawn up by the Engineering Department. The cost of the work, if left to private enterprise, is estimated at twelve lakhs, yielding a yearly return of 2 per cent., and if undertaken by Government, at seventeen lakhs, with a return of 2½ per cent. The line is to be constructed on the board or metre gauge.—Englishman.

A NEW CEREMONY IN KESHUB CHUNDER SEN'S CHURCH.—THE NEW HOM CEREMONY.—On Tuesday last (June 7) the Sanctuary witnessed a new and imposing, and, we may add, an instructive spectacle. There was a large iron fire-pan in front of the Vedi; in an earthen vessel was ghee, or clarified butter; bundles of sticks and pieces of fire-wood were gathered in one place, and there was a large metallic spoon. Varieties of beautiful and fragrant flowers and evergreens in abundance formed a semi-circle, skirting the place where these things were arranged. No one was prepared for such a sight, as none even among the select few who were present knew what was going to happen. After the introductory portion of the service was over the minister invoked Divine blessing on the ceremony which was to be performed, and prayed that it might become profitable unto the church. He then lighted up the fuel before him, and, pouring over it clarified butter, produced a brisk fire, which he thus addressed:—O thou blazing Agni, great, great art thou, great among the forces in creation. We shall honour thee and magnify thee because of thy greatness and majesty. Thou art not God: we do not adore thee. But in thee dwells the Lord, the Eternal, Inextinguishable Flame, the Light of the universe, the immanent Fire, Fire of fire whom fire doth reveal and glorify. O thou brilliant Agni, in thee we behold our Resplendent Lord. His hand holds up thy holy flame. Without him thou art not. Then let us glorify Him, thy God and our God. The Lord has made thee, O Agni, formidable and mighty, mighty to consume and destroy. With thy tremendous force thou burnest and swallowest extensive forests, and reducest cities and towns into ashes. Before thy fury heroes tremble in utter helplessness. But if, Agni, thou art a fierce enemy to be always dreaded, thou art also a benefactor, worthy of all honour and gratitude. Our friend art thou, O Agni. Thy good services who can recount? In the firmament above thou art ablaze as the sun, and thou scatterest light and heat in all directions for our benefit. Down below on earth, in the home of every householder, thou kindest a flame to cook our daily food; thou cheerest us in cold wintry nights; and thou lightest the candle to give us light in the midst of darkness. Thou removest plague and pestilence and foul diseases, and thou dost purify the air by destroying noxious effluvia. Therefore, our venerable forefathers, the ancient Aryan Rishis, greatly honoured thee, and performed the sacred Hom unto thy glory. O friend and benefactor of the human race, O thou whose glory the Rig Veda so devoutly sang four thousand years ago, burn brightly before us, that we may sing thy praise amid the civilisation of the nineteenth century, and be worthy of our forefathers. Blessed art thou, O Agni, for thou art a blazing witness unto the lord, and thou revealest his brightness unto man. O thou resplendent God of Fire, O God of Agni, as Agnihotri and priest, I initiate the ceremony of the new Hom, under Thy command, for the destruction of carnal propensities. Help us, God; good God help us. In Thy holy fire we desire to burn to-day our sins and iniquities, our foul desires and lusts of the flesh. As the fire before us burns these pieces of fuel, so shall we burn our anger and avarice, lust and pride, and all our passions in the fire of Thy holiness. We are not saved till the very root of sin and temptation is burnt up. The son of God in an instant bravely vanquished Satan and overcame temptation. And so the blessed Bhudda indignantly drove away the tempter Mara and conquered flesh. Administer unto us, O Resplendent Spirit, fire baptism, that we may vanquish the tempter as those master souls did. Root out iniquity. Destroy the very seed of corruption. O Lord, annihilate Satan and burn Death, that we may put on incorruption and everlasting life. These six pieces of fuel tied together, which represent the six evil passions of the heart, do Thou burn and destroy in Thy flame. And as these pieces of fuel burn and are reduced to ashes may they typify the destruction of our carnal passions in the fire of Thy holiness! Thus saying, the minister cast the six pieces of fuel into the burning fire, the congregation exclaiming together "Victory to God, Victory to God, Victory to God." Peace, Peace, Peace.—The New Dispensation.

PROFESSOR DE UJFALVY.—Professor and Madame de Ujfalvy have left Simla after enjoying the hospitality which Sir Robert and Lady Egerton know so gracefully how to dispense. He is accompanied by Mr. Purdon Clarke, the delegate of the South Kensington Museum, whose purchases for that institution the Anjuman-i-Punjab has been endeavouring to assist. Our president assisted Professor Ujfalvy for several days in taking the measurements, for anthropological purposes, of the Baltis and Ladakis that visit that hill station. The results of these measurements will, we trust, be communicated to the Anjuman. The present destination of the travellers is Srinagar, for which place they are taking the route via Kotgarh, Bajaura, and Chamba. From Srinagar they will probably make for Leh, and unless specially favourable facilities arise to enable them to visit either Yarkand or Lhasa, they will be at Lahore in October next on their way to Bombay, which they will leave by the Lloyd steamer of the 20th of that month. The Governments of India and of the Punjab are affording Professor Ujfalvy every facility for his inquiry, but taking measurements is not always viewed by even semi-civilised races without suspicion. Nor is it perfectly safe to visit Yarkand, now that the Chinese have taken the place of our friend Yakub Khush Begi. Last year, Mr. Ney Elias, although an accredited officer, did not return without danger, whilst Lhasa is prohibited ground, except to the commercial mission which the Maharaja of Kashmir is sending to that capital once in every three years.—Journal of the Anjuman-i-Punjab.

THE AFRIDI FRONTIER.—It is reported from Tirah that Mir Bashir, who assumed the title of Badshah last year among the Afridis, is again scheming to recover his lost status.—Bombay Gazette.

THE CALCUTTA ENGINEERING COLLEGE.—The students of the Sibpur Engineering College, having made full apology for their impertinent action in the matter of the petition against the superintendent, Mr. Fouracres, are to be readmitted after six months' rustication.—Ibid.

STREET PREACHING.—The Calcutta Missionary Conference have submitted a memorial to Sir Ashley Eden, Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, protesting against the police interfering with preaching in the public squares.—Ibid.

SKETCHES OF CABUL.—Lieut. Col. Woodthorpe, R.E., proposes to publish some of the sketches he made at Cabul during the occupation.—Ibid.

CUSTOMS REVENUE.—During the first two months of the current financial year the net Indian sea and land customs revenue, exclusive of the salt revenue, has amounted to Rs.42,45,000, as compared with Rs.38,04,000 during the corresponding period of last year.—Ibid.

REGISTRATION OF LETTERS.—The Post-office contemplate making a concession to the public by reducing the fee for registering letters from four to two annas. The measure is one which has been long advocated, and will prove a valuable boon to senders of letters. It is sure also, from the very much larger number of letters which will be registered, to increase the Post-office revenue under this head.—Ibid.

THE BODY-GUARD.—It is said that the adjutancy of the Governor General's Body-guard, vacant by the death of Lieutenant D'Arcy Thuillier, has been given to Lieutenant R. C. Onslow, of the 10th Bengal Lancers.—Ibid.

CALCUTTA FREIGHTS.—At date of departure of mail the unfixed tonnage in port amounted to 10,355 tons. Rates:—For London via Suez Canal: Wheat, 57s. 6d.; rice, 55s.; market closing steady. London via Cape: Rapeseed, 58s. 9d.; linseed, 57s. 6d.; wheat, 52s. 6d.; rice, 50s.; saltpetre, 45s. Liverpool via Cape: Wheat, 50s.; linseed, 52s. 6d.; oil, 58s. 9d.

MADRAS.

REGATTA IN MADRAS HARBOUR.—There was a pretty large attendance of the public of Madras at the T end of the pier on the 13th to witness the Regatta got up through the exertions of Captain

Taylor, the officers of the Marine Department, and other gentlemen. The hoi polloi mustered in strong force on the south arm of the harbour and on the seashore. While the yachts were doing the second run over the course, a heavy shower of rain came down, which somewhat marred the amusement. About four o'clock the boats for the first race started from the south arm of the harbour:—First class Decked Yachts.—Prize, a Silver Cup.—Lady Anna schooner (Captain Taylor), Gitana, schooner (Captain Bartleits), Zingara, schooner, Water Witch, cutter (Mr. Hooper's), Phantom, cutter, Sea Bird, schooner, Dacca, cutter. The course covered some three miles, and with three or four steamers in the harbour the run could not at all times be seen. The Gitana and Water Witch, the former steered by Mr. Anthony, and the latter by Mr. Hutchins, were the favourites. During the first round the latter yacht, well managed, was leading at some distance; the Gitana, however, passed her near the buoy to the south of the pier; the Lady Anna, steered by Captain Rowland, being a long way off. Owing to the rain at this time the boats were lost sight of till almost the finish, when it was found that both the leading boats experienced some difficulty in rounding the buoy near the harbour entrance, and the Lady Anna was having it all her own way. Captain Rowland passed the winning flag at about six o'clock, amidst the cheers of the sightseers. The second event was the Masula Boat Race, the prize being Rs. 10. Nine boats were entered, but only seven started during a smart shower of rain. The distance was from opposite the pier to the red buoy near the entrance of the harbour. The boatmen made the distance in spite of wind and weather in pretty good time, the crew of a boat number twenty-six being declared entitled to the prize. The third was a race for second-class boats, prize, a Silver Drinking Cup. Eight boats entered for the race, but as it was getting dark, very little was seen of it. The boat belonging to the British India steamer Ellora won the prize.—Madras Times.

THE LATE MR. J. SUTHERLAND.—The announcement of the death of Mr. James Sutherland, of the Madras Times, will be the cause of more regret than surprise to those of our readers who were aware of the critical state of his health when he left Madras for England, on February 9, in the Meinam. He was a well-known member of the London press at the time that the offer of the editorship of the Madras Times was made to him by the late Mr. John Vans Agnew, the proprietor of that journal. He accepted the offer, arrived in Madras in November, 1868, and took charge of the paper on the 10th of the following month. During the eight or nine years that Mr. Sutherland was editorially connected with the Madras Times, the extensive acquaintance of that journal with European and American politics justly evoked the commendation of the local public. But it must at the same time be admitted that the difficulty which Mr. Sutherland usually experienced in taking a lively interest in the affairs of India in general, and in the "rustic cackle" of Madras in particular, reflected itself in our contemporary's columns. He never travelled in India, and consequently he was deficient in that knowledge of Anglo-Indian and native manners and customs, wants, and wishes, which must be gained ere an Indian editor can sympathise with the general requirements of the public for whom he caters. Mr. Sutherland arrived in India with the prestige of being an honoured member of the London press, and he remained an English, but never became an Indian, journalist. He was theoretically right as to the advantage of being "trained on the wide field of European journalism," but the English journalist who thinks of coming to India for employment should come when he is young and susceptible, or not at all. A journalist of Mr. Sutherland's merit and ability is ill qualified, after fifteen or twenty years' intimate contact with the busy public life of London, to take kindly to the monotonous and hum-drum life that pressmen, like other exiles, have to lead in India. Still, it is undoubted that Mr. Sutherland admirably fulfilled his promise to introduce a comparatively new feature into Indian journalism. About the year 1872, he obtained a lease of the Madras Times, which he held at the time of his death. Four years ago he went to England, and started in London a weekly city paper, called the Citizen, which continues to devote its chief attention to the municipal affairs of the metropolis. Last December he returned to Madras, but his friends could not fail to see that he had been unwise to undertake the voyage. For a short time there seemed room for hope that he was recovering strength; but he became seriously ill January, and it was feared when he embarked that he would not accomplish the journey home. But he did so, and on arriving in London, he placed himself in the hands of Dr. Quain, and that eminent physician took so favourable a view of his case that Mr. Sutherland recently wrote to Madras, in very hopeful terms regarding his health. He has left a widow—a thoroughly kind-hearted Scotch lady, who was universally popular during the time that she lived in Madras. Much sympathy will be felt for her in her melancholy bereavement.—Madras Mail.

THE NILGHIRI VOLUNTEERS.—The Nilghiri Volunteer Rifles were inspected by Major General Payne, C.B., on the A.B.C. ground on Saturday last, 4th instant. Notwithstanding the bad state of the weather, a large number of volunteers turned out, one hundred and six of all ranks being present. The general was received with a "general salute," and, dismounting, closely inspected the corps. A march past was then ordered, after which the manual and firing exercises were performed under the orders of Capt. R.

Shubrick, and the bayonet exercise under Capt. Benson. The battalion was then put through various manoeuvres by officers called out by the general. At the conclusion of the inspection, the major general was pleased particularly to compliment the officers on their knowledge of their duty, and also noticed great improvement in the way the battalion moved since he had last seen them on parade. The general took this opportunity of informing the volunteers how pleased he had been to see them turn out in such strength as they did at the funeral of his Excellency the late Governor; this had been noticed not only by the general himself, but by the whole station. General Payne also said he was very much pleased to see such a number then present on parade in such bad weather, especially as many had come from long distances, a very good feeling being thus shown by the corps. In conclusion, the major general stated that he should have much pleasure in making a very favourable report on the corps to Government.—South of India Observer.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY, JULY 11.

THE INDIAN CIVIL ENGINEERS.

Mr. CARBUTT asked the Secretary of State for India whether any scheme for the reorganisation of the Indian Public Works Department was under contemplation, and whether it would in due course be laid before the House; and whether due consideration would in any such scheme be given to the frequent requests from the Civil Engineers in the service for an amelioration of their pension rules and for equality of treatment generally with officers of the Royal Engineers in the same service.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON.—The question of reorganising the Engineering branch of the Public Works Department in India is now receiving the consideration of the Home Government, and due attention will be given to representations which have been made in respect to the pension rules and to the position generally of the officers of the department. The question will form the subject of communications between the Secretary of State and the Government of India, and when a scheme has been settled there will be no objection to lay the same before the House.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY, JULY 12.

THE RUSSIANS IN CENTRAL ASIA.

Mr. ASHMEAD-BARTLETT asked the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether it was a fact, as stated by the correspondent of the Daily News, who was now a prisoner at Merv, that the Russians had not only occupied and annexed the whole of the Tekke Turcoman country, including Askabad, but had also occupied Kuchan, in Persian Khorassan, a most important strategic position on the road to Meshed and Herat.

Sir C. DILKE: Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at St. Petersburg has reported that he understood, from a conversation with the Russian Minister for Foreign Affairs, that Askabad was the southernmost point of the Tekke Oasis, which is stated to be the Transcaspian territory recently annexed to Russia. We have heard that General Skobelev had some months ago demanded from the people of Kuchan payment for property stolen from Russian subjects, and that a Russian agent was to be appointed there to make annual purchases of grain, but we have no knowledge of its being occupied or annexed by Russia.

Mr. ASHMEAD-BARTLETT: Would the hon. baronet take steps to ascertain the facts respecting the alleged Russian annexation of the place?

Sir C. DILKE: We have received very full reports from our agent at Meshed, and my answer was founded on them.

CEYLON.

Sir D. WEDDERBURN asked the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether the attention of the Colonial-office had been recently directed to the necessity for constitutional reforms in Ceylon, especially to the desire for a more genuine representation of the people in the Legislative Council, and to the religious grievance involved in the existing system of ecclesiastical subsidies.

Sir C. DILKE: There has been no recent correspondence on the subject, but the constitution of the Legislative Council of Ceylon has been at various times under consideration, and it has not been thought desirable to alter the system under which unofficial members are at present appointed to the Legislative Council. In selecting gentlemen to be recommended for such appointments the Governor pays special attention to the views and wishes of the classes (planter and natives) to be represented. The decision has been taken to discontinue the ecclesiastical grants. Papers on the subject will shortly be presented.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY, JULY 15.

COOPER'S HILL COLLEGE.

Lord BELPER rose to ask the Under Secretary of State for India whether he could state the reasons which had led to the change in the scheme of management of Cooper's Hill College. He also moved for a copy of the new scheme, and also a copy of any correspondence that might have taken place between the Governor General in Council and the Secretary of State for India on the subject; also for a return of the annual expenditure of the college since its foundation; the annual receipts from the students; the number of students who had entered the college in each year since its foundation; and the number of students in each year who, having passed through the college, had received appointments as civil engineers in India.

The Duke of ARGYLL said that he took very great interest in Cooper's Hill College, which was founded during the time of his administration at the India-office. If a great school of engineering had existed in India capable of supplying a sufficient number of competent men to execute economically the public works undertaken in India it would have been folly on the part of the Government to start an institution like Cooper's Hill College. But the Indian Government had lost annually enormous sums of money by the carelessness and incompetence of many of the civil engineers in India, and when holding the office of Secretary of State for India he found that it was hardly possible to obtain in the open market a sufficient number of competent men to conduct the public works in India on a scale such as that on which they were then being undertaken. Some of the civil engineers in India at the time to which he referred were very distinguished persons, but there were also a number of inferior men who might have been called "hard bargains." On one occasion some millions were spent under the direction of the engineers of India in the construction of new barracks. It turned out, however, that these buildings had been erected in accordance with entirely erroneous principles, and that they were mere "sun traps." They were tremendously hot, and in consequence the health of the troops quartered in them suffered severely. Many of them were so insufficiently built that it was found they would not last for more than a few years, and in some cases even the lime that had been used was pronounced to be bad. In this way the Indian Government were annually losing hundreds of thousands of pounds in bad engineering. The insufficiency of the engineering service having been brought prominently before the notice of the India-office, the authorities formed the idea of the erection of Cooper's Hill College. The project was opposed by a number of persons, including many members of Parliament, but eventually it was successfully carried out. He had always heard that it was considered that the college was a very thriving institution, but he quite understood that during the financial difficulties which India had recently felt fewer public works had been erected, and that consequently there had been a diminution in the demand for the services of such engineers as were trained at Cooper's Hill. In conclusion, he wished to assure their lordships that the foundation of the college was not agreed to until a most thorough investigation had convinced the Indian Department of the insufficiency of the previous system. (Hear, hear.)

Viscount ENFIELD said his noble friend behind him wished to know what had induced the authorities to make a change in the character of the institution known as Cooper's Hill College. He hoped that the change was one which would prove advantageous both at home and in India. A reduction was being made in the Public Works expenditure in India, and corresponding with that reduction there had been a diminution in the number of appointments on the staff of the Public Works Department. Cooper's Hill College having been established for exclusive training for civil engineers in India, it was not now possible to maintain it on its original footing, with the reduced number of men now required for engineering service in that country. It had in former years met with decided success. Rather than take steps which might eventually lead to its being closed, the authorities had determined, after consultation with and with the support of certain eminent engineers in this country, to try the experiment of making the college a general training institution for the civil engineering profession, offering the students at the close of their course of study the number of appointments required to fill up the vacancies which might occur each year in the Indian Public Works and Telegraph Departments. These appointments would be competed for among themselves. The college would receive 150 students, and the number of Indian appointments annually competed for would vary from ten to twenty. Correspondence had taken place between the Secretary of State for India in Council and the Government on the whole subject of the future strength of the Indian Public Works Department and its recruitment, but as this correspondence was still under consideration he could not, speaking for the Secretary of State, undertake to produce it at the present time. There would be no objection to give the other returns moved for, including a copy of the new scheme for Cooper's Hill College. (Hear, hear.)

The Marquis of SALISBURY said that Cooper's Hill at the time of its institution was a very necessary institution, as just at that time far greater public works were being constructed in India than have since been required. Those works had been restricted, and consequently the number of engineers required have been smaller. As far as he knew, the education was of the highest character, and had been spoken of in high terms by the noble earl opposite. But it was clear that if more engineers were sent than were required a periodical block would ensue which would be, as it had been in the past, disastrous to the Indian Exchequer. The Government had exercised a wise discretion in reducing the number sent out. But he hoped the institution would not be closed, but would do as good work in future as it had done in the past.

The return as amended was then agreed to.

RUSSIA AND MERV

Mr. ASHMEAD-BARTLETT asked the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs if he would inquire by telegraph of the British agents in Northern Persia whether it was a fact, as stated by the correspondent of the Daily News, who was now a prisoner at Merv, that the Russians had not only occupied and annexed the whole of the Tekke Turcoman country, including Askabad, but had also occupied Kuchan, in Persian Khorassan, a most important strategic position on the road to Meshed and Herat, and had extended their frontier along the Attrek Valley up to the Yegend, embracing Derghaea and Kclat, and passing close to Meshed; and whether he would at the same time ask for and lay before the House exact information as to the extent of territory in that region now in the occupation of Russia, or alleged by the Russian authorities to be under their rule.

Sir C. DILKE: There is no telegraphic line to Meshed, so it is not possible to make the direct inquiry asked for; but the agent at Meshed is in constant communication with her Majesty's Minister at Teheran, through whom his reports are received. Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires has already been instructed to send home a map showing the boundaries of the recently annexed territory in the Akhal country for the library of the House of Commons.

Mr. ASHMEAD-BARTLETT gave notice that early next week he would again ask the Under Secretary whether he had telegraphed to Herat; and if the hon. gentleman still refused he would bring the matter before the House in the only way that was now unfortunately open to a private member.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY, JULY 18.

MILLS AND FACTORIES IN INDIA.

The Earl of SHAFTESBURY asked the Under Secretary of State for India whether any bill for the regulation of labour in mills and factories in India had been brought in by the Supreme Government.

Viscount ENFIELD replied that an Act to regulate labour in factories had been passed, and had received the assent of the Governor General on April 15 of this year. It applied to the whole of British India, and was compulsory therein. Its chief provisions were:—"The determination of the age of children employed, seven years being the minimum; the limitation of the hours of employment to nine hours, with one hour's interval of rest, of 1s. to 2s. per cwt. Colony plantation Ceylon obtains full prices on account of small supply.

RICE.—A cargo of Rangoon, 1,450 tons, off coast, sold at 8s. 3¹/₂ per cwt. open charter.

SALTPETRE.—Business during the week in Bengal on the spot at 21s. 3d. to 21s. 6d. for 5 per cent.

JUTE (from Messrs. Falconer and Co.'s Circular).—We have to report an improved demand throughout the fortnight, and a fair business has resulted in old crop in all positions at an advance of 5s. to 7s. 6d. per ton. This movement has been influenced by Calcutta advices of little remaining in old crop for shipment, and the belief that the new crop will not arrive in quantity so early as anticipated. In new crop the sales are considerable, but chiefly for early Canal to Dundee.

COTTON.—A good demand at firm prices. Sales about 1,500 bales, including Tinnevely at 5¹/₂d.; Western, 4¹/₂d.; and Cocanada at 4¹/₂d. per lb. For arrival, Tinnevely, July-August, 5¹/₂d. for good fair. Forward delivery, American, July-September, 6 19-32d. to 6¹/₂d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

INDIGO.—The sales of East India closed to-day, 3,500 chests having sold during their progress out of a declaration of 9,200 chests. The following remarks are from the circular of Messrs. Patry and Pasteur:—"The sale just concluded has given a very disappointing result. For some time previous to the commencement of these auctions, the market was firm without being active, and though the transactions in Bengals and Oudes were not large, Kurpahs were in good demand, and an advance of 2d. to 3d. per lb. was established, but on the opening of these sales the demand seemed to collapse, and though importers showed willingness to meet the market, there was the greatest difficulty in getting bids, and much of the Bengal Oude, and Kurpah sold on the first two days were at 2d. to 3d. decline from April rates, and support was required to prevent a further depreciation. On average we quote prices as compared with the April sale—as Bengal, good and fine shipping, par to 3d. decline; ditto; plant Oudes, ordinary to good, par to 2d. ditto. Dry leaf Madras.—A few chests of softish brough fancy prices—say, 6d. to 8d. advance to April, but nearly all the lots offered were inferior, and were only partly sold at irregular prices, averaging about April rates."

FRIDAY EVENING.

INDIAN TEA.—The sales during the past week have comprised 4,700 packages, of which 1,200 were of new season's growth. The market has been very firm for all descriptions, and the latest prices show ¹/₂d. to 1d. improvement for common and medium grades.

COFFEE.—The market is dull, and prices rather easier; 154 casks, 16 tierces, 25 barrels, 40 bags plantation Ceylon sold, and a part of 2,037 bags foreign—Guatemala sold at 57s. to 58s. 6d., and Central American at 78s. to 80s.

SALTPETRE is firm. Business for arrival at 21s. 9d. to 21s. 10¹/₂d. per cwt.

PEPPER.—Black continues firm.

COTTON.—The market continues fairly active, at full prices to an occasional advance. Sales about 3,000 bales, including Western, at 4¹/₂d. to 4³/₄d.; Cocanada, at 4 7-16d.; and Bengal, at 4 9-16d. for fair red. Forward delivery, American, August-September, 6 11-16d. to 6 21-32d.; November-December, 5 31-32d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

THE INDIAN DEPARTMENTAL SERVICES.

We give elsewhere a full report of the reply, made by Lord Enfield on behalf of the Government, to Lord Belper's enquiries regarding the future of the Cooper's Hill College and its trained engineers. It was in accordance with the fitness of things that these enquiries should have been made in the House of Lords; for among the members of that House are the Liberal Secretary of State, the Duke of Argyll, under whose auspices the College was founded, and the Conservative Secretary, the Marquis of Salisbury, who is known to take a warm interest in its welfare. It has been well understood for some time past that the great reductions that have been made in the Indian Public Works Department of late—reductions that must be rendered more or less permanent by the straitened circumstances of Indian finance—necessitate a modification of the arrangements connecting the College with that Department. The nature of the modification decided on was announced on Friday by the Under Secretary of State; and the fact that both the Duke of Argyll and the Marquis of Salisbury spoke on the question, apparently in approval of Lord Enfield's scheme, gives that announcement even more importance than it would otherwise possess, as it probably assures the finality of the arrangement now adopted. It is evident, however, that many details still remain to be worked out; and it is in that belief that we proceed to offer a few remarks on certain points whereby the present rearrangement might be made part of a more comprehensive and more urgently needed reform.

The raison d'être of the college, as described by the Duke of Argyll and Lord Enfield, and assented to by the Marquis of Salisbury, was the urgent need of a high order of scientific engineering in the Public Works Department. That branch of the public service was formerly manned chiefly by Royal Engineers, assisted by Staff Corps officers and uncovenanted engineers recruited on the spot; and the Duke of Argyll seems to have satisfied himself that such a constitution of the Department had proved a failure, and was to blame for a good deal of the scandalously bad work—e.g., the unfortunate lath and-plaster palaces known as the Saugor Barracks—for which the department was so much abused a few years ago. To provide against such scandals, Cooper's Hill College was established, at a large cost to the Indian revenues, to train skilled engineers for India. From the observations of Lord Salisbury, as well as those of the other speakers in the House of Lords, it may be taken for granted that the plan has so far succeeded, that the college sends out men of the highest scientific attainments and ability, in numbers more than sufficient for all the requirements of the Indian service.

Various objections have been taken to the systems thus inaugurated; and, since modifications are now being forced on the Government by financial reasons, it is clearly desirable that all these objections should now be fully considered, and reform attempted where it may be found needful. The college has from its foundation been a standing grievance to the natives of India; who allege (1) that it enables English aspirants for the engineer service to supplement, by the subsidy drawn from Indian revenues, the cost of their technical education; and (2) that the men so trained occupy positions in the public service that ought to be occupied by native gentlemen educated at Rurki, or in the engineering colleges of Calcutta and Madras and elsewhere. To the first objection of the natives, the reply has always been, that the students of the Cooper's Hill College pay heavily for their tuition there, as much indeed as they would pay in the ordinary course of their technical education elsewhere. Still, as things have hitherto been, it could not be denied that the maintenance of the college has been, as a matter of fact, a heavy charge on the revenues of India; so it may be presumed that the new scheme, under which the college is apparently intended to become self-supporting by competing for the tuition of young engineers generally, has been devised with the special idea of meeting this objection. But the second objection of the natives is still left untouched; for it is intended still to send out annually a certain number of assistant engineers selected by competition among the students of the college. In justice to the natives, it will be necessary for us to be able to show that the candidates thus chosen are of higher calibre than any that could be obtained in India. But in that case another difficulty at once confronts the Government. It is well known that the utmost discontent and dissatisfaction is already felt, by all Cooper's Hill men who have gone out to India, at the invidious distinction made between their conditions of service, pensions, funds, &c., and those assigned to Royal Engineers. This distinction will become still more invidious, and its maintenance still more untenable, when the Government is compelled for other reasons to acknowledge that its civil engineers are men of the highest scientific training, drawn from the same class as their sapper colleagues, and educated in fully as thorough and costly a manner. It is greatly to be hoped that the Secretary of State and the Government of India will face this difficulty in a just and liberal spirit. If they do so, they may not improbably be led to a larger reform that has been shirked far too long, that must come sooner or later, and the neglect of which is the cause at the present moment of the most glaring anomalies in the organisation of the Indian Services. We refer to the serious disabilities in regard to the various conditions of service and pension, to say nothing of sundry other petty invidious distinctions, insignificant in themselves, but none the less galling—that are attached to a large number of the superior civil appointments of India, merely because they happen to be ticketed with the meaningless and (in many cases) utterly misleading name of "uncovenanted." The distinction between "covenanted" and "uncovenanted" civil servants, as at present maintained, is an absurd one; it is founded on a classification that has long been obsolete, and its retention is productive of an immense amount of unnecessary pain and annoyance to individuals, and of continual friction in the administrative machine, highly prejudicial to the public interests. It is an undoubted and cruel anomaly that the whole body of those Indian civil servants who are chosen for their special scientific or technical attainments—as distinguished from those who are to form the regular executive and judicial administration of the country—should be the victims of a classification that has survived from the times when no such services were needed in India. The highly-trained Cooper's Hill engineers, of whom we have been speaking,—the large body of distinguished graduates of Oxford and Cambridge who are the inspectors of schools and the professors of colleges throughout India—the men of high scientific attainments who conduct the operations of the geological and other surveys, who are conservators in the Forest Department, or electricians in the Telegraphs—all these gentlemen and scholars are classified, with their own clerks, and with the writers employed under their "covenanted" colleagues, as "uncovenanted." In such matters, all-important to their personal interests, as widows' and orphans' funds, they are treated as a class entirely identical with the clerks and writers; and, in the management of those funds—as has been shown in the most disastrous way by the litigation of the present year—their interests are absolutely subordinated to those of the latter class, who, as permanent residents of India, have really no interests in common with them.

We are not of those who think that the reform of these glaring anomalies can only be effected by the abolition of the Covenanted Civil Service, with all its glorious traditions and its honourable and most useful esprit de corps. No legislation is needed for the redress of the cruel grievances we have pointed out. It is by no means necessary for this purpose that the scientific departments should be included within the pale of the Covenanted Service; any more than that the civil engineers of the Public Works Department should be dubbed "Royal." All that is needed is a new classification adapted to existing circumstances. The undoubted fact should be clearly recognised that there are now in India a number of superior Civil Services or Departments of the State, of which the Covenanted Civil Service is primus inter pares. The meaningless negative term "Uncovenanted" should be abolished; and the Civil Service of the Crown in India should be divided into "Superior" and "Inferior"—or, perhaps better still, "Imperial" and "Local" services. So far, the change would be only one of nomenclature. All that is further needed is, that all regulations regarding conditions of service, leave, pension, funds, &c., should be as nearly assimilated as possible among the various departments of the Imperial Civil Service of India.

OUVAH COFFEE COMPANY.—The report of the directors shows a revenue balance of £17,085 to be dealt with. An interim dividend of 8s. per share was paid in January, and a further similar distribution is now recommended, making 8 per cent. for the year. It is proposed that £1,000 be added to the working expense fund, and that £8,085 be held in reserve.

HOME NEWS.

NAVAL INTELLIGENCE.—The following information respecting the movements of her Majesty's ships is supplied by the Admiralty:—From the East Indies.—The Dragon was at Beilul on June 21. The Arab was at Aden, and was to cruise and visit Makulla when practicable. The Alert was in Torres Straits on May 30.

INDIAN APPEAL CASES.—In the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on Tuesday, before Sir Barnes Peacock, Sir Montague Smith, Sir Robert Collier, Sir Richard Couch, and Sir Arthur Hobhouse, the appeals of Massamut Bibee Sohadra v. Roy Jung Bahadoor and others were decided. These consolidated appeals were preferred from a judgment of a Divisional Bench of the High Court of Calcutta (consisting of Justice Jackson and White) of June 15, 1877, affirming decisions of the local tribunal at Mozufferpore, in Tirhoot. Mr. Leith, Q.C., and Mr. R. V. Doyne were counsel for the appellant; Mr. J. H. W. Arathorn for the respondents. The suits in which the decrees were passed were two out of fifteen suits brought by the respondents to recover possession of certain property in the district of Tirhoot; to cancel sales alleged to have been illegally made of the estate; and to recover mesne profits of the same during such period as the law allowed. There was no dispute as to the facts, and the only questions now arising were whether (as the appellant contended) the suit was barred by limitation, and whether the respondents had not themselves acquiesced in the sales. The Indian Courts decided in favour of the respondents, and their lordships, without calling on the counsel for the respondents, said they entirely agreed with the view taken by the Courts below, and the appeals would accordingly be dismissed, with costs.

THE EASTERN TELEGRAPH COMPANY notify the interruption of their Aden-Bombay cables near the shore at Bombay. Until they are restored telegrams for India, China, Australia, &c., should be sent by the lines of the Indo-European Telegraph Company.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—The tenders for Rs. 40,00,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, Rs. 19,17,000, and Bombay, Rs. 20,83,000; the average rate in each case being 1s. 7½d. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 7½d. received about 83 per cent. The India Council, following the practice observed by it during the last three weeks or so, fixed the minimum price at 1s. 7½d. It was thus able to sell at that price all the bills that were offered.

THE SILVER MARKET AND THE EASTERN EXCHANGES.—On Wednesday the Silver Market was steadier than it had been for some time past. Prior to the allotment of the Council drafts, business was effected at 50¾d., but subsequently no transactions were heard of, although that price was again quoted at the close. The Mexican dollars brought by the French packet Ville de Brest, together with a few ex Don, were disposed of at 50¼d. per oz. There was no appreciable change to notice in either the Indian or Shanghai rates of exchange, but the Hong Kong quotation was rather duller at 3s. 8¼d. to 3s. 8½d. There was a fair inquiry for Rupee Paper, and the respective prices for the Four-and-a-Half and Four per Cents. in consequence advanced to 91½ and 86.—On Thursday, in the absence of supplies, no transactions were announced in silver. Owing, however, to the firm tone of the market, the price of bars was quoted at 50¾d. to 51d. In Mexican dollars there was no alteration. In sympathy with the improvement shown in the uncoined metal Rupee Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Paper recovered 3.16, to 91½ to 91¾. The exchanges from the East presented no variation from Wednesday's figures. On Friday renewed firmness was shown in silver. In view of the arrival of small bazaar orders from India, combined with the restricted character of the supplies, the uncoined metal advanced to 51d. No business of importance was reported in Mexican dollars, which, however, closed with a steady appearance at 50¼d. per oz. A further improvement was noted in Rupee Four and a-Half per Cent. Paper of ¼ to 91½ to 92½. According to the latest telegraphic quotations of exchange from the East the rate from Hong Kong is 3s. 8¼d. and Shanghai 5s. 1½d. Owing to the interruptions of cable communication with India no Indian exchange rates were received.—On Saturday the market was unchanged, and Friday's prices could be readily obtained were there any supplies of either bars or dollars to be dealt with. According to advices from Calcutta, the rate for telegraphic transfers was 1s. 7 9-16d. and Rupee Paper in India seems to be rising in value, the Four and a-Half per Cents. having reached 113, and the Four per Cents. 105½. Here the respective quotations are 92 to 92½ and 86½, with a fair demand.

EASTERN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The half-yearly general meeting was held on Thursday, at the City Terminus Hotel. Mr.

Pender, M.P., the chairman, presided, and, in moving the adoption of the report and accounts and the declaration of a final dividend for the year of 2s. 6d. per share and a bonus of 1s. per share, making $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. for the year, observed that the revenue for the half-year ended March 31 last was £302,158, being an increase of £10,964 over that of the corresponding half-year. This was to some extent owing to the increased return which their investment in the South African Company had given them—a dividend of 6 per cent. and a bonus of 4 per cent., as against a dividend of only 6 per cent. The ordinary expenses of the company had been £67,754, being a decrease of £883 as compared with the corresponding half-year, when, however, there were certain charges amounting to about £1,500 which did not come in the present half-year's accounts. On these occasions he had generally been able to congratulate them on the cables being in perfect working order; but he regretted to have to inform them that on that occasion that their two Bombay cables were silent. They, however, had received information leading them to believe that the defects were within a very short distance of the shore, and that they would be able to repair them on the first lull in the monsoon. Beyond the delay in the traffic, therefore, they were occasioned no uneasiness, as, by the arrangements they had made, they were able to carry on the traffic without sustaining any pecuniary loss. These combinations are almost necessary in submarine telegraphy, for, as he had never hesitated to tell them, it was more or less of a speculative character, though the experience they were gaining every day enabled them to have more and more control over it, rendering it a less speculative investment, and he thought they had what might be regarded as a fair property. The item of repairs was large, but from the commencement it had been under 10 per cent. on their capital. He congratulated them on the increased dividend, which he hoped might still be further increased hereafter. The report was unanimously adopted. The chairman afterwards stated that they expected before long, in addition to the direct line which they had acquired through France to Egypt—which had been a good bargain to them—to have a further direct line through another important part of Europe.

HONOURS AND REWARDS.—Her Majesty, on the recommendation of H.R.H. the Field Marshal Commanding in Chief, has been pleased to grant silver medals for distinguished conduct in the field to the following non-commissioned officers and men, in recognition of their gallantry in action during the recent campaign in Afghanistan, viz.:—Sergeant Major W. LAMPLOUGH'S EFFERVESCENT PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators, also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough v. Savour.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all European visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor.

KIRKMAN AND SON, ESTABLISHED NEARLY 150 YEARS.

3 and 9, SOHO-SQUARE, LONDON, W.

KIRKMAN AND SON'S PATENT STEEL FRAME SHORT GRAND PIANOS, SIX FEET LONG, IN ELEGANT ROSEWOOD OR WALNUT CASES,

Are considered by all who have heard them to combine a greater amount and resonance of tone, consistent with adaptability of size, shape, and elegance of appearance than those of any other manufacturer.

KIRKMAN AND SON'S OVERSTRUNG GRAND AND COTTAGE PIANOS

It being considered by some competent judges that the German method of over or cross-stringing Pianos is attended with great advantage, Messrs. Kirkman and Son are now manufacturing both Grand and Cottage Pianos on this principle, the latter having the plain sticker Action, which is not the case with Pianos of this class manufactured by other makers; in fact, the extreme simplicity of the action used by Messrs. Kirkman and Son in all their Pianos render them eminently suitable for exportation to the Colonies, where skilled workmen are few and far between.
All useless checks and complications are carefully avoided,
thus enabling any tuner, with however superficial a knowledge of the business, to regulate them or repair any damage they may sustain.

KIRKMAN AND SON

Have a reputation extending over nearly a Century and a Half.

There are now in the possession of the house Harpsichords and Virginals dated 1758 and 1778, manufactured by Jacobus and Abraham Kirkman.

The present members of the firm beg to call the attention of shippers and exporters to the fact that in ordering of this house they are dealing with a firm who manufacture on principles derived from experience of this almost unprecedented length.

KIRKMAN AND SON

Have at present a Fine Selection at their Extensive Show Rooms in Soho-square.

COLONIAL HANDBOOKS, MAPS, &c.

NOW READY.

CANADA—including Ontario,
North-West Territory, Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia, &c.
With New Coloured Map. Crown 8vo. 238 pp. Cloth, 6s.

"Athenæum," June 25, 1881.—"Full of information and statistics, which ought to prove very serviceable
to any visitor to the Dominion."

"Times,"—"Under the above title Messrs. Silver have brought out much more than a mere "Handbook to Canada," an historical, political, social, geographical, and topographical guide for the use of travellers and settlers
over the greater portion of our North-American possessions.
The need of such a work, at once handy, comprehensive,
and trustworthy, has long been felt both by intending settlers and by readers at home, who are surprised, and not unnaturally, at the scanty information about so important a territory which is accessible to them. The volume is illustrated by a map, showing the whole extent of the Canadian Confederation from the shores of the Atlantic to those of the Pacific, and exhibiting all the details of inland communication, whether by Railway or the long chain of inland lakes. Those who have friends in British Columbia, Manitoba, &c., will find this map most useful; and it may be added that the historical chapters are full of materials for the future historian of Canada, or for the writer of an article on that subject in an encyclopedia.

"Manitoba Daily Free Press,"—"Comprised in
this book is a mass of valuable information, which cannot fail to impress every reader with an intelligent idea of the great resources and capabilities of our country. In fact, we are convinced that in the words of the preface, a comprehensive, reliable, and at the same time cheap and handy work has been produced, which will furnish the kind of information most sought for in regard to the Dominion, and especially in regard to Manitoba and the North West territories. We have every reason to think that this handbook to Canada is one of the best contributions to immigration literature yet produced. It is also very handsomely got up tastefully bound, and very well printed."

"Graphic,"—"We are already acquainted with Messrs.
Silver's Handbooks to Australasia and South Africa.
They are concisely written, accurate in information, and full of practical details. The same praise may be accorded to the volume now before us, which comprises a survey of the whole of British North America, the reader's researches being aided by an excellent map. To the intending emigrant the descriptions of Manitoba and British Columbia will be especially attractive."

KEPLER MALT EXTRACT,

AN AGREEABLE SUBSTITUTE FOR COD-LIVER OIL.

A CONCENTRATED NUTRITIOUS DIGESTIVE FOOD.

VERY DESIRABLE AS A RESTORATIVE WHEN THE SYSTEM HAS BECOME REDUCED BY WASTING DISEASES.

Kepler Malt is free from Alcohol, and one tablespoonful contains more nutritive and digestive value than one pint of the strongest Beer, Ale, Porter, or any alcoholic or fermented Extract of Malt.

Ziemssen's Cyclopædia of Medicine says:—"Malt Extract is preferable to Cod-liver Oil, being more palatable and more easily digested."

The Lancet says:—"Kepler Malt Extract is very good and may be used with confidence."

"The Kepler Malt Extract is reliable, and is manufactured in such a careful manner as to ensure the preservation of its valuable constituents."

The Medical Times and Gazette says:—"The Kepler Malt Extract is deserving special commendation. Dr. W. Roberts, of Manchester, places it first on the list of Malt Extracts he had found reliable, and containing a proper amount of Diastase, and possessing the property of digestive starchy foods."

THE KEPLER COD-LIVER OIL WITH MALT EXTRACT

(CONTAINS 50 PER CENT. MALT EXTRACT).

"The taste of the oil is agreeably disguised. Its nutritive powers are greatly increased, and it is rendered easy of digestion."—British Medical Journal.

The Lancet says:—"The Kepler Cod-liver Oil with Malt Extract has hardly any of the taste of the oil. Many could take it easily who cannot take the oil."

A RIDE TO KHIVA

BY CAPTAIN FRED. BURNABY

Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 18:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous cures produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was immovable to all native medicines, when I administered to him five

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JULY 25, 1881.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, July 5; Madras and Allahabad, July 3; Calcutta, July 2.

THE reports on the state of the season, the prospects of the crops, and the public health throughout India, for the week ending June 21, show that rain has been general and abundant in Bengal, Assam, and Burma, and more or less fell in all the reporting districts of the Madras Presidency. With the exception of some slight showers, chiefly in the North Western Provinces and Oudh, and some heavier rain in one district of the Central Provinces and in one of the Rajputana States, there has been a break in the wet weather throughout Northern and Central India. In the Bombay Presidency also there was not much rain; and more is needed in parts of the Deccan and the Southern Mahratta country, in Berar, and in Mysor and Coorg. In most parts of the country, however, the rainfall of the past fortnight has benefited crops and facilitated agricultural operations. Prospects, so far, continue generally good; but they are better in the eastern districts, where the monsoon has set in with some strength, than in Western India.

THE detailed reports for the various provinces are:—

MADRAS, JUNE 22.—General prospects good.

BOMBAY, JUNE 22.—General slight rain; some damage from locusts in Sind; cholera increasing, in Surat 520 cases, 248 deaths; in Baroda 149 cases, 72 deaths; sowing retarded for want of rain.

BENGAL, JUNE 21.—Rain generally throughout the provinces, benefiting crops and facilitating agricultural operations, but damaging crops on low lands in some places; paddy, jute, sugarcane, indigo, and cotton doing well; rivers rising; prices easy; cholera and small-pox dying out, but fever prevalent in a few places; general health good.

N.W. PROVINCES AND OUDH.—Slight showers fell in most districts on first day of the week; weather since changed, and hot west winds now generally prevail; ploughing operations impeded in Benares, but progressing elsewhere; prices on the whole stationary; cholera continues in Gorakhpur, Lucknow, and Kumaun, and has appeared in Meerut—otherwise health good; cattle disease continues in Lucknow and Fyzabad and is increasing in Kumaun.

PUNJAB, JUNE 21.—Rain reported from Delhi only, but the fall of the previous week has been favourable for ploughing and preparations for the autumn crops.

CENTRAL PROVINCES.—Weather close and cloudy, with rain in several districts; kharif sowings in progress; cholera reported from districts of Jubbulpore division; public health generally good; cattle disease abating; prices easy.

BRITISH BURMA, JUNE 18.—Excepting slight small-pox in Arakan and cases of cholera in Pegu and Tenasserim, public health good; some cattle disease in few districts; ploughing general.

ASSAM, JUNE 22.—Weather cloudy, with rain; cattle disease not yet disappeared; sowing of asra, dumahi, and murali crops about to be finished; cultivation of sali crop progresses; common rice 26½ seers; health good.

MYSOR AND COORG, JUNE 22.—In Mysor want of rain much felt; agricultural operations retarded; standing crops withering in parts of some districts; prospects indifferent; health fair; prices risen in parts. In Mercara paddy suffering from want of rain; ragi thriving; small-pox and fever prevalent.

BERAR AND HYDERABAD, JUNE 22.—Reaping of tabi completed; kharif sowings continue, but recent break in weather proving injurious; cattle disease in one taluka; weather warm; prices—coarse rice 10, wheat 16, white jowari 20, yellow jowari 24, and gram 20 seers per current sicca rupee.

CENTRAL INDIA STATES, JUNE 22.—Prospects favourable; health good.

RAJPUTANA, JUNE 22.—Tanks dry, wells again resorted to; health good; close and sultry, heat intense; clouds hovering; prices fluctuating. Rain entirely cleared off; high south west wind blowing; field operations consequently stopped; health good.

NEPAUL, JUNE 16.—Weather close and sultry; more rain needed.

THE agony in Afghanistan is still prolonged. Ayub Khan is face to face on the Helmand with the Commander in Chief of the Ameer's forces; and we can only say, as we said last week, that any day may bring us decisive news. Much depends on the energy of General Gholam Haidar Khan, and that is not believed to be great. The fact that the Amir is absent from the scene, whilst his rival is present, is an important one. A telegram from the correspondent of the Daily News at Lahore has announced that Ayub has already succeeded in driving back his antagonist; but it is possible—judging from the official telegram of yesterday—that this report only represents native expectation in the bazaars of the Punjab. Meanwhile, even before the crisis has come, we are beginning to reap the fruits of our feeble policy, as will be seen from the telegrams given below, in raids on our Hazara border, and open outrages by armed bands, perpetrated actually within the limits of our Peshawur cantonments.

THE last telegram from the Viceroy of India to the India-office, dated July 24, refers probably to the report telegraphed to the Daily News from Lahore. It is as follows:—

“Letter from Kandahar, 20th, says no fighting has taken place beyond Helmand. Ayub alleged to have proposed negotiations.”

Of course, Ayub will negotiate if Gholam Haidar Khan is sufficiently cowardly or treacherous to allow him to do so; for every day that the Ameer's troops delay to attack the invader must bring him large accessions of strength. If Gholam will only wait long enough to allow all the Durrani tribesmen to join Ayub, as well as the thousands of clansmen whom memories of Maiwand will attract, the conflict will be virtually over, and the Ameer's cause lost for the present.

THE uncertainty of the situation is well put by the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, who telegraphed last night, July 24:—

“The news of the first regular engagement between Ayub's and the Ameer's troops is expected hourly, and it is quite possible that Ayub may be in Kandahar before the end of the week; but it is just as likely that he may be in full flight towards Herat. Gholam Hyder Khan, the Ameer's general, reports the receipt of a message from Ayub suggesting an amicable division of the country. He says that he indignantly rejected the overture, believing it to be only a pretext to gain time.”

THE Quetta telegram of the same date, July 24, says:—

“By the latest information, extending to the 20th inst., the rival armies were not in a very dissimilar position to that held by General Burrows and Ayub at this time last year, with the important difference that both are to the west and not to the east of the Helmand. General Gholam Hyder Khan, who has at last left the city to take the command of his troops, has concentrated them at Kalati Chitani, some ten miles above Girishk, having left only one regiment and a few militia to hold Kandahar. The advanced guard of Ayub's army was not more than twenty miles off to the north, though whether it had been joined by the regulars and guns was uncertain. Anyhow, these must have reached it by this time. Ayub himself was said to be with the advanced guard, and had sent a message through Mohamad Hashim to the camp of the Ameer's troops, inviting Kazi Saad-ud-din, a prominent Barakzai chief and ardent partisan of the Ameer, to meet Hashim half way between the camps, with five horsemen each, to discuss the terms of peace. The matter was referred to Sirdar Shams-ud-din Khan, the Deputy Governor, who returned a spirited reply to the effect that he could listen to no propositions except in Herat, and he ordered General Gholam Hyder to advance at once and attack the enemy's position before they could be joined by any number of volunteers or could sow dissension in the ranks of the Ameer's army. This, no doubt, is what ought to be done. Whether it will be done is another question, for Gholam Hyder does not seem to be an enterprising commander. Up to the present there have been no defections from the Ameer's side. Indeed, no one of importance seems to have joined Ayub, nor do we hear of the people generally flocking to his standard as was so confidently anticipated; but they only refrain from doing so on account of the prevailing impression of the superiority of the Ameer's troops, and if these remain within their entrenchments this impression will grow weaker and disappear, and Ayub's army will be swollen by thousands of the Duranis. Reinforcements are said to be on the road from Cabul, but they cannot be very large, and are certainly not worth a week's delay.”

Kandahar to 13th report situation unchanged. All accounts agree that Ayub has six regiments, each of 400 men. Ameer's force stated to consist of 3,000 regular and 1,000 irregular infantry, 800 regular and 400 irregular cavalry, besides Kandahar levies, with twenty-four guns. Sirdar Gul Mahomed Khan is said to have left the army and retired to his house at Nahr-i-Sarhar, east of Helmund; the Alizai and Barakzai horse (with) him have consequently gone to their homes. The feeling in favour of Ayub is almost universal in and about the city."

"FROM VICEROY, SIMLA, JULY 19, 1881.—Kandahar agent writes that Sirdars Muhamad Hashim and Muhamad Hasan with cavalry have reached Naozad. Sirtip Mir Mahomed with two regiments and six guns arrived at Washir on 13th. Ayub is said to be in the Bakwa, but this requires confirmation. Ameer's force on Helmand consists of five regiments infantry, two of cavalry, 1,000 Kasadars, sixteen guns, 500 Kelati and Kandahar horse."

A Reuter's telegram from Bombay, dated July 22, gives some rather stale information about the opposing forces on the Helmand:—

"Ayub Khan has reached Naozad, place situate about thirty miles west of the Helmand river, Gholam Hyder Khan is with the Ameer's forces, at Kelat-i-Gaz, and it is expected that an attack will be made on Ayub's forces, although the movements of the Ameer's troops will depend upon the arrival of reinforcements."

THE following interesting communication on the position in Afghanistan has been addressed to the Times by a correspondent whose signature and address will be generally recognised:—

"Sir,—Your Calcutta correspondent, in announcing the arrival of Ayub Khan at Hyderabad on the Helmand, remarks that it is uncertain whether he will advance on Kandahar or on Cabul, via Ghazni. If he determines on the latter course, the shortest route is the direct one, via the Kakreez Valley. For important reasons, his probable route will be via Kandahar. From former experience he knows every inch of the ground which is practicable for his wheeled guns; the people who were for him last year will probably again flock to his standard; the country is easy, whereas that via Kakreez is difficult; and his troops, remembering their brilliant victory of July last, will advance with confidence to the attack of wealthy and comparatively weak Kandahar. Again, as Ayub Khan did not hesitate last year to attack Kandahar, defended by a British division, it is hardly likely he will hesitate now when the prize is held by a much weaker enemy. Eastern armies attach immense importance to their guns, and an advance on the strong fortress of Ghazni, via Kakreez, would be a matter of very great difficulty to a force encumbered with wheels. Up to the present Ayub's tactics are identical with those of last year. He has chosen the same season and advanced on the same spot on the Helmand, and, the chances are, hopes to fight his first battle at the same place and under equally advantageous circumstances as before. An unsuccessful engagement before Ghazni would place him between two armies—those of Cabul and Kandahar; whereas the defeat of the Kandahar force on easy and well-known ground would render his further advance on Ghazni an enterprise of comparatively small difficulty. The conquest of Kandahar would give him all he requires in arms, ammunition, and money. His prestige at and about Kandahar is immense, and he is undoubtedly looked up to as the national hero—the man who defeated a British brigade and imprisoned a British division for a whole month, retiring only before vastly superior forces advancing on him from Cabul under Roberts, and from India under Phayre. His defeat last year by Roberts was never looked upon as a crushing blow by his countrymen, although the loss of his guns was a very serious matter in their eyes. His regular army for the greater part escaped to Herat and to Cabul. Eastern armies do not retreat in the same manner as European armies; they disperse and meet again at a given time and place. Knowing the impossibility of withstanding the combined attack of Roberts, Primrose, and Phayre in September last, he dispersed his army at the sacrifice of his guns, and made the best resistance he could under the circumstances with some thousands of determined Ghazis, who were in reality his best troops, but by whose defeat he did not lose prestige to the same degree he would have done had his regulars been cut up. That the defeat was not a crushing one is proved by his arrival at Hyderabad on the Helmand, and his readiness to try conclusions again with a powerful enemy within a year of his engagement with Roberts. For all these reasons we may well believe that Ayub Khan will attack Kandahar, and that shortly. If he is victorious, and the chances are he will be, what will be the result? Ayub, next to Yakub (our prisoner), is the direct heir to the throne of Cabul—he is the national hero and our bitter foe. Abdur Rahman has been set up by us, and is consequently hated. Ayub's first success will mean Abdur Rahman's fall. The natives of India look upon Ayub as the protège of Russia, and they are probably right. They look upon Abdur Rahman as the protège of the British, of which fact there can be no doubt. To thinking natives of India, then, the coming fight will be between the rival champions of England and Russia. If Russia's champion wins, and Ayub ascends the throne of Cabul, what shall we have gained by the campaign of 1879-81? Not much, certainly, but still something. We shall have advanced our frontier to a splendid position on the Khojah Amran range, within 75 miles of Kandahar—a position in itself almost impregnable, covering the most important passes into India from Southern Afghanistan, and from which Kandahar and the richest portion of Afghanistan is always at our mercy, the knowledge of which fact is more likely to keep our enemy quiet than any number of treaties. The completion of Sir Richard Temple's railway from the Indus to some point in Pishin would enable us to hold this position with 10,000 men, and would quickly develop the trade with Herat and Kandahar and turn Pishin into a fertile valley. The completion of the railway and the retention of Thal-Chotiali Valley in force would also keep the troublesome Marri tribes in order and cover the Hun Pass into India. These advantages have been dearly purchased, and it is to be hoped will not be lightly given up.—Yours,

"15, Devonshire-street, Portland-place, W., July 18."

HERE is a good specimen of what we may expect under the masterly inactivity régime:—

"Last Tuesday night a body of hillmen, supposed to belong to the Afridi clan, attacked a picquet of the 19th Bengal Lancers on the Jamrud road, within the Peshawur cantonment. Two troopers were killed and three were wounded. The assailants escaped."

This is a telegram from Calcutta, sent to the Times last night, July 24. It represents a state of affairs that will, we fear, become a normal one on the frontier, now that we have done all we can to show the tribes how weak and vacillating we are. To be a British subject will soon be as uncomfortable on the Afghan frontier as it already is in the Transvaal.

AND so it will be all round the frontier. Here is another telegram from Calcutta to the Times, also of yesterday's date:—

"The Aliwals, a Punjab frontier tribe on the Hazara border, have been giving some trouble by kidnapping Hindu shopkeepers from British territory. They have been induced to surrender their prisoners, but refuse to give up the ringleaders. A fine has been inflicted, but has not yet been paid. Steps will be taken to realise it, but it will probably not be necessary to use force. The population of the Alia Valley numbers about 7,000 fighting men." It may confidently be predicted that we shall not hear much more about the ringleaders.

THE Civil and Military Gazette of Lahore, writing just before the departure of the mail, says:—

"If we are to judge from the information which reaches us every week from Cabul, the loyalty of Kohistan has already become doubtful. Turkestan appears to be the only portion of the Cabul kingdom whose loyalty to the Ameer remains unshaken; and the motives of Turkestan loyalty are much too obvious to require explanation. Nowhere is the Ameer more unpopular than in Cabul itself and its neighbourhood. Our Cabul news makes it evident that his rule is merely one of confiscations and incarceration. His policy is one of activity at home and indolence abroad. But though it may empty his throne it is filling his purse. His Highness may deliberately be making provision against a rainy day. We should probably be within the mark if we calculated the last five or six weeks' proceeds of the Ameer's confiscations at ten lakhs of rupees at least. We base this estimate on Cabul information, the substantial accuracy of which we have no reason to doubt."

THE Russian Government doubtless imagines, from past experience, that it has full right to whip up the present English Ministry when they neglect their duty towards their St. Petersburg cronies. As Sir Charles Dilke's Republican friends across the Channel throw him overboard when France wishes to make the tour du lac in the Mediterranean, so Mr. Gladstone's Russian friends turn round upon him when they are frightened about a revolutionary congress. In regard to Russian advances in Central Asia they get their own way so entirely with the right hon. gentleman that they are aggrieved if not equally influential in all other matters. A telegram from St. Petersburg, of yesterday's date, says:—

to Mr. Borlase's question concerning the meeting of the Revolutionary Congress in London, considers that the British Government assumes great responsibility by the passive attitude which it appears to take up in the matter. The journal proceeds to say:—"We have already too often expressed our opinion with regard to the solidarity between Governments to render it necessary for us now to reopen the subject. The revolutionists speak openly and do not conceal the means they intend to employ. Conservatives of all shades are bound, therefore, to adopt the necessary defensive measures."

THE Rangoon correspondent of the Times telegraphs on the 23rd inst. that two Frenchmen attempted to send a sword from Mandalay to Calcutta. It was suspected that their intention was to communicate with the refugee prince there. They were imprisoned, but have since been released. One, however, was severely beaten.

FROM the same source we learn that the Thikeik Myee is heading a disturbance in the Ningyan district, and in order to quell it the local governor is levying war taxes and impressing men. He has impressed some raftsmen working for English contractors.

It is further stated that the Mandalay customs authorities are displaying unwonted activity in examining all goods passing up to Bhamo, and creating such difficulties that the Irrawaddy Flotilla Company are in consequence refusing to carry such goods, as hampering their traffic.

As we predicted would be the case, further troubles are now announced from the Bheel country. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times, telegraphing on July 24, says:—

"The Bheels have again begun to show signs of uneasiness. Adjoining the Meywar Bheel tracts is a wild strip of country belonging to various native States, which are grouped together as the political district of Mahikanta and are superintended by the Bombay Government; while Meywar belongs to the Rajputana Agency, under the direct control of the Foreign-office. In this wild border-land, the Bheels, acting in connection with their brethren of Meywar, have been making disturbances and fighting with the State's police. They assembled in force at Ghoradpur, in the district of Pol, plundered some shops, and forced the Rao of Pol to sign thirty-eight articles, binding himself to reduce his claims for rent, punish criminals only by a fine, remit the unpaid fines, and release the prisoners. The son of Major Goodfellow, the political agent at Mahikanta, went to inquire into the affair, and took the strange step of signing this document, explaining that he did so merely as an admission that the chief had entered into the agreement. The Bheels, not unnaturally, took this as a ratification by the British Government. Officers have been sent to inform them of this mistake, but that the Government is willing to consider their grievances. This occurred last month. Early this month a number of Bheels emigrating from Meywar came into collision with the police at Gulpura, in Mahikanta, but were driven back with a loss of twenty killed. There seems to be some reason to believe that the Bunniahs incited the ignorant tribesmen to rise in the hopes of obtaining a reduction of their own rents from their chiefs. The movement may cause us some trouble if it becomes necessary to assist the chiefs, but it is hoped that it may be suppressed without calling out the troops. The Governor-General's agent at Rajputana has gone to Ahmedabad to confer with the Bombay authorities, and Colonel Blair and Major Probyn, acting under his orders, have been deputed to inquire into the causes of the discontent. A conference of officers versed in Bheel politics will assemble at Abu next winter and discuss the whole subject dealing with these tribes."

THE hopes of the silver party are looking up. A Reuter's telegram from Rome, dated July 20, shows that the Italian Government have taken up the thread of the question at the point where it was dropped at the adjournment of the Paris Monetary Conference, and are really hammering out what they believe to be a practical scheme. The telegram was as follows:—

"It is stated that Italy will despatch a memorial to the various Powers represented at the Monetary Conference, proposing a solution of the monetary problem which is regarded by the Italian Government as feasible at the present time. The drawing up of the memorial in question will probably be confided to Signor Muzzatti, the Italian delegate at the Monetary Conference."

Now that there is no Press Commissioner in India, to give out the financial notifications of the Government in such a way as to ensure their simultaneous publication in all the great centres, the notification of a loan affords a fine opportunity for rigging the market. The Times of India says:—

"We observe with some surprise that Calcutta has been allowed to steal a march on Bombay in a matter of considerable importance. The notification relating to the new loan appears to have been published at Simla and Calcutta simultaneously, and was republished in the local papers on Tuesday morning, whereas the Gazette Extraordinary containing the notice only reached Bombay by post from Calcutta on Thursday."

A REMARKABLY quick passage from Liverpool to Bombay is reported from the latter port. The Armenia, 3,700 tons register, the latest addition to the Anchor Line fleet for their Indian service, arrived there on Wednesday, June 22. She made the passage in the remarkably quick period of twenty-four days, from Liverpool, including all stoppages. Capt. George Read, late of the steamship India, is her commander.

DURING the week that preceded the departure of the mail there had been some excitement in Calcutta, caused by a difference between two members of the Bench of the High Court and a barrister. The incident will doubtless figure as an episode in the new series of the Chronicles of Dustypore. Mr. Jackson, a member of the Calcutta Bar, applied to Mr. Justice Cunningham and Mr. Justice Prinsep to have a suit transferred from Patna on account of a strong local feeling which, he urged, was likely to be prejudicial to his client. Their lordships having decided against the transfer without hearing Mr. Jackson out, application was made to the Chief Justice to appoint a new Bench for the rehearing of the matter. After some consideration the Chief Justice came to the conclusion that he had no power to form a new Bench; and, according to the Pioneer, he further censured the conduct of Mr. Jackson. The two justices have expressed their willingness to continue the hearing of the original application.

WE noticed last week the somewhat limited range of Major Baring's notions as to what constitutes "private enterprise" in India. From yesterday's Calcutta telegram to the Times it appears that the Calcutta merchants have once more endeavoured to induce him to enlarge the scope of those notions. Bengal does not need railways that propose to attempt an impossible competition with the marvellously cheap and convenient river-borne traffic of the Gangetic delta; it has been shown over and over again that such railways can only be maintained at a loss to their owners, unless propped up by extravagant concessions on the part of the State. But there are many ways in which the Government may encourage "private enterprise"—though perhaps not that particular form of "private enterprise" that is represented by great financing operations—if the Finance Member will only condescend to take counsel from such important public bodies as the local chambers of commerce. The Times telegram says:—

"The Bengal Chamber of Commerce have addressed to the Government a temperate and clearly-reasoned remonstrance on the recent orders regarding the purchase of stores in England. They point out that many struggling local industries might be placed on a firm basis if the Government increased the demand by buying stores in India, and they question the hypothesis that the India-office officials are in a position to purchase as cheaply as private traders. They also show that under the existing system the field of purchase is artificially limited to England and practically to London; that the Government is obliged to maintain one special establishment in England for buying and shipping and another here for landing and transporting; that the traders are better placed than the officials for procuring cheap freight; that the Government loses heavily by breakage and leakage, and that the stores are often unsuitable or arrive after the time and have to be replaced locally. They urge that tenders should be asked for in rupees and at prices to cover landing and other expenses. Thus the Government would know the exact cost in Indian currency of each article; it could command delivery where and when it pleased, and in case of non-delivery would have a prompt and efficient remedy."

Apocryphos, we learn from the Pioneer that the Government of India have sanctioned the construction, from the provincial revenues of Bengal, of a navigation canal to connect the existing tidal canal in Hidgellee with the Orissa system. The cost of the work is estimated at 33 lakhs.

Now, could not Messrs. Baring Brothers and Co. have been induced to take up this scheme, going for only 33 lakhs? The dues on a canal to connect the Orissa system with the Ganges ought to be more than the earnings of a deltaic railway on the borders of the Sundarbans. But then, possibly Major Baring and the Government of India could not have made those liberal concessions to a canal that they are able to make to a railway.

THE Calcutta folk would be thankful to Messrs. Baring Brothers and Co., or any other incarnation of private enterprise, if they would come to the aid of the Government to increase the carrying power of the East Indian Railway, which, as a long-distance line, can compete successfully with the river for the grain-carrying traffic. The Calcutta Statesman, referring to the great recent improvements in the railway communication between Bombay and the North, says that "The grain trade of Upper India, even from as low a point as Cawnpore, is gradually finding its outlet at Bombay, instead of Calcutta, as formerly. The advantages of the shorter route are great, yet we should have little fear of Calcutta entirely losing this trade if only the railway carrying rates were lower. That they can be reduced is evident from the fact that the company is at present paying well, and it will be found better to carry this immense traffic at slightly lower rates than lose it altogether. It may be said that the company cannot well carry more than they are doing, and hence it is not desirable to lower rates to induce a traffic for which the company have no appliances. This is true perhaps; but the obvious remedy lies in doubling the line. This, the paper understands, is now completed as high as Mogulserai; but the profits to be realised from this grain-carrying trade will not be enjoyed to the full till this is done. It is useless to have it done out of earnings, as such a course would inevitably delay the execution of the work for many years, and in the interval the trade would be diverted. New capital should be invested for the purpose, and the entire line doubled to Delhi."

THE Chairman of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, speaking at the last half-yearly meeting about the present tendency of wheat and cotton—even from Cawnpore—to find a way to Bombay instead of to Calcutta, said:—"A further impetus in that direction will be given before long when the new State line, unfortunately of narrow gauge, is completed between Khandwa and Nusseerabad, thus opening up in the West a splendidly fertile agricultural country." This line has lately been completed; the last rail was laid and the last spike was put in on June 6. That portion of the line which runs from Khandwa through Mhow to Neemuch was opened out last hot season, and a further section, Neemuch to Chilta, in December last. The line from Chilta to within a mile from Bheelwarra has been since laid; and the remaining portion of sixty-eight miles on to Nusseerabad has been finished from the other or Nusseerabad end; as already said, the last rail on this line of sixty-eight miles from Nusseerabad to Bheelwarra was laid on June 6. But the line is still very kutchy, and not till the winter will all the bridges and larger culverts be finished and the present diversions taken up. Salt can now come down, however, and this and the line's own traffic will doubtless be carried till the line is formally opened. The engines are now running with loaded material trains at an average pace of twelve miles an hour, and rattle down the diversions at some thirty miles, so as to enable them to clamber up the opposite banks with their heavy loads.

THE Bombay Gazette has the following on the state of the weather:—

"The forecast we ventured to give last week as to the progress of the south west monsoon rains has been amply verified. We said it was probable there would soon be another heavy burst; and the weather of the past week has been very-wet, not only in Bombay, but also all along the coast to the southward. There is little doubt that the rain has now extended pretty generally into the interior, where it was urgently required for sowing operations. Moderately heavy rain has also fallen between Bombay and Broach, but, with the exception of light showers at Rajkot on the 25th and 26th June, there was little rain in Gujarat during the week ending June 27. There was a moderate fall in Khandesh, in Berar, and in Central India on the 25th and 26th, and heavy rain at Sholapore on the 28th, with lighter showers on the two following days. From the Simla weather report of the 27th it appears that the recent break in the rains in Central and Upper India had, on that date, come to an end, and that, as regards the whole of India, the rainfall was again extensively distributed, and in many places heavy. The barometer, on the whole, has been low and moderately steady throughout the whole of the past week. It is now about '05 inch below the average at Bombay. It is falling rather rapidly at the southern stations, but rising slightly at the northern ones. Both these changes diminish the difference of pressure between north and south, weaken the westerly winds, and tend to lessen the rainfall in the Konkan and along the Western Ghats. They are, however, in favour of an increase of rain in the eastern districts of the Bombay Presidency. The fall of the barometer at most of the coast stations is a promise of more rain to come, and, although other indications are at present absent, it is not improbable that moderate rain will continue in most districts for some time longer."

WE are glad to observe, from the telegram of the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, dated July 24, that better weather is reported from the tea districts, and the manufacture is progressing favourably, except in Cachar, where a blight is unusually prevalent and is doing much damage.

FROM the same authority we learn that indigo prospects in Bengal are not good, and the outturn is expected to fall short of the average, but more favourable reports are received from the North West. Rain is much wanted in Mysor, where the crops are withering, and some anxiety is beginning to be felt. Throughout the rest of India there is a promise of a fair harvest.

THE electric light, introduced into India at the printing-offices of the Bombay Gazette, is rapidly coming into extended use. The Pioneer says that the example of the Empress Mills has now been followed by the Muir Mills, Cawnpore, and the Brush electric light is in full swing there, enabling the work to be carried on by night as well as by day. The Indian Daily News gives an interesting account of the appearance of another set of mills, those owned by Messrs. Mackinnon and Co., at Calcutta, on the first night on which they were illuminated by the electric light. The exemption from over-heating is a great boon in such a climate as that of India.

ON the Calcutta indigo market for the week ending July 2 Messrs. J. Thomas and Co.'s price-current has the following:—

"Judging from our Lower Bengal advices, there has been no improvement in prospects since our last report. Manufacture is in progress at many factories, and a considerable quantity of unripe plant has been cut to save it from inundation by the local rivers. Jessore has suffered much from incessant rain. Tirhoot and Chuprah prospects continue good, sufficient rain has fallen, and the plant is yielding fairly well. In Chumparun the rainfall has been exceedingly heavy; as much as 10 in. were registered at some factories on the 29th and 30th. A few of the low-lying lands have suffered accordingly, and produce for the present has been somewhat reduced. From Benares our reports are favourable, but in the Doab, we hear, rain is wanted. The London July sales commence on the 11th; 8,600 chests have already been declared."

THE same price-current has the following on the Calcutta tea market for the same week:—

"Further sales were held on June 23 and 30, when 12,283 packages found buyers. On the former date prices were very steady, but the auction of the 30th consisted chiefly of Cachar descriptions, and prices generally were slightly easier, except for ordinary pekoe souchong and broken sorts, which brought full rates. Our advices from the tea districts are a little more favourable, but the quantity manufactured to date is considerably less than at the same time last year."

THE Times of India gives the following obituary of the week ending July 5:—Brigadier General J. H. Henderson, Major J. Low, Dr. John Macgregor, Mr. J. E. Innes, B.C.S., Mr. H. P. Edwards, and Mr. A. L. de Mars.

DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZES AT THE ROYAL INDIAN ENGINEERING COLLEGE.

ON Friday the ceremony of distributing the prizes to the successful students of the year at the Royal Indian Engineering College, Cooper's Hill, took place in the presence of the Secretary of State for India. The following distinguished guests were also present:—Sir Louis Mallet, K.C.S.I., Under Secretary of State; Sir Baron Ellis, K.C.S.I.; Lord Napier of Magdala, G.C.B., G.C.S.I.; Sir Richard Temple, G.C.S.I.; Lieutenant General Foster, C.B., and Mrs. Foster; Lieutenant General R. Strachey, C.S.I., R.E.; A. Cassels, Esq.; B. Wodehouse Currie, Esq.; Lady Norman; Sir Edward and Lady Clive Bayley; General Sir Richard and Lady Pollock; Sir Douglas Forsyth, K.C.S.I., and Lady Forsyth; the Provost of Eton and Mrs. Goodford, Sir A. Arbuthnot, K.C.S.I.; the Inspector General of Fortifications and Mrs. Galloway; Colonel Sir O. T. Burne, K.C.S.I.; C. W. Siemens, Esq., D.C.L., F.R.S., and J. Fowler, Esq.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON called upon Sir Alexander Taylor to read the report of the examiners. He began by calling attention to the fact that a young engineer in the service of the Government in India, if incompetent, was very difficult to be got rid of. It was necessary, therefore, to be careful in their education and selection. Until some twenty-two years ago the engineers had been chosen practically from the royal engineers. Lord Stanley had thought it right to inaugurate the system of selecting civil engineers from the profession here. That, however, proved a failure from neglect of scientific training amongst the younger members of the profession here, the contrast being great between this country and the Continent in the matter of scientific training. This led to the formation of the Royal Indian College of Engineering, which has proved so great a success that it is now contemplated to extend its scope and make it general, instead of confining its sphere of operation merely to India. It gives scientific training, which enables young men to make the best of the opportunities they may have of acquiring practical experience. In addition to that the pupils are conducted through a series of visits of workshops to give them an idea of practical matters. The examiners of the thirty-five senior pupils make a very favourable report of their attainments, the net result being very satisfactory. The second year's students were not quite so satisfactory, but only required industry in their last year to turn out well. The report referred, in conclusion, to the work of Colonel Chesney (now transferred to important work in India), in establishing the college and bringing it to its present high state of efficiency. In conclusion, Sir A. Taylor expressed his satisfaction at the condition of the college, and said that someone seeing the students boating and playing lawn tennis had hastily come to the conclusion that they did nothing but lark, but if he had known that every student had to undergo some ninety-six compulsory examinations and knew the nature of the work he would probably have come to a different opinion. He had no doubt that the pupils who were leaving would turn out manly, useful, and upright men, and would prove that they were well qualified to rise to high and responsible positions and reflect credit on their college at Cooper's Hill. (Cheers.)

The prizes were then handed to the successful students by the Marquis of HARTINGTON, who afterwards said—Mr. President, Ladies, and Gentlemen,—I believe that it will be in accordance with the usual practice that I should say a few words to the successful students and others of this college. I feel, as I am sure you all will, that the able and comprehensive and interesting report which has been just delivered by the president leaves me, and indeed, any one, very little to say. I must first express the regret which I felt last year at not being able to be present on that occasion, and to have had the opportunity of congratulating Col. Chesney on the success of the college which he himself entirely organised, and which he had conducted with so much success and with such excellent results for nine years. (Cheers.) I was not aware at the time that I should not have another opportunity of paying him the public tribute which his labours in this sphere had so well deserved, but as you are all aware he has been called by the Viceroy to fulfil in India other equally responsible duties of a most important character. I am sure that the cordiality with which the president's allusions to his name have been received, both by the students and by their friends who are assembled here to-day, will amply show that the labours which Col. Chesney has devoted to this institution have not been thrown away, and that they have been entirely appreciated by all with whom he has come in contact. Although very many of us regret that Col. Chesney is no longer here to conduct the labours of this college I think I may congratulate you on the successor whose services we have been able to secure. (Loud cheers.) Sir A. Taylor's name will always remain inscribed on some of the most important and interesting pages of Indian history. (Cheers.) He has served his country well on many a battlefield, and especially I will recall the distinguished services which he was able to render at the sieges of Delhi and Lucknow. (Cheers.) We rejoice to be able to congratulate officers in recent times, of the present day in fact, upon their achievements in the Afghan and other wars. We are glad to be able to recognise in them that they still retain the qualities which have distinguished their predecessors; but I think we ought not to let the record of any previous exploits, however brilliant, drive from our minds for one single moment those great and invaluable services which were rendered by many officers; amongst them Sir Alexander Taylor was one of the most distinguished during that most trying and most critical period of the great Indian Mutiny. (Cheers.) Never were the qualities of Englishmen more severely tried than during that period, and, critical as was the position for a considerable time, I believe that nothing has contributed more to the stability of English rule in India than the qualities which were displayed by our officers on that occasion. (Cheers.) Well, simultaneously with the change in the president of this institution has occurred the change in its position and in its future organisation. As has been said by the president, it has been the child of the Indian Government. It has been supported and maintained and organised by the Government of India. It has been entirely dependent upon that Government, and it has given back to India all its fruits, all the men, or almost all, the men it has turned out. Circumstances with which most of you are familiar have made it necessary to reduce the number of engineers who will be sent out from England for the public service for some years to come. It has been necessary, therefore, to make some change in the organisation of this college. It is far from having become an independent institution. Some day, perhaps, it may become independent of Government altogether. But, at all events, it has taken this year a step in the direction of independence. It has now a board of visitors, amongst whom are comprised, I am happy to say, some of the most distinguished engineers of the present day, along with other gentlemen of great Indian experience who have been good enough to give us their assistance. It is now about to invite to its walls all comers, and it is about to offer to the kingdom at large, the colonies, and the dependencies, as well as to India, the services of students who may be trained by this institution. It is too early to guess at what the result of this new organisation of the institution will be, but I think there is, in what has occurred in the past, good hope for the success of the institution in the wider sphere it is now about to enter upon. (Hear, hear.) I am informed that the Government of India and the Public Works Department of India are well satisfied with the 300 students who have already been sent from here to India, and who are now becoming able, useful, and distinguished public servants; and I am glad to hear the president's report state that he has received reports from the engineers, with whom students are now going through a practical course preparatory to their taking up their appointments, to the effect that they are well satisfied with the acquirements which those students have brought away with them from Cooper's Hill. (Cheers.) It must never be forgotten that if the demands of India on the resources of this college in the future are likely to be more limited, it is not on account of any dissatisfaction with the men who have been sent to India from Cooper's Hill, but simply because, for the present at all events, the wants of the Public Works Department in India are not equal to what they have been hitherto. I am in hopes that the change may not operate otherwise than favourably for the efficiency of the institution. In the candid remarks of the president in his report I think that we may trace that he observes some want of application and industry among the students in the first and second year. I think it is not impossible that the defects to which the president has called attention may be to some extent due to the fact that there is not the stimulus of healthy competition sufficiently applied to the students while they are within the institution. I don't mean to say there are not sufficient examinations. (Laughter.) After what we have been told by the president, I felt some wonder, which I think you must have all shared, that the students have time to do anything else but be examined. (Cheers.) There is certainly plenty of competition of that description. What I mean is, that up to the present time, students who have been able to pass the qualifying examinations have been sure of obtaining appointments in India, and perhaps there has not been a sufficiently stiff competition of a practical character, and that now that the number of prizes which are offered by the prospect of employment in India are to be limited there will probably be an additional inducement to students during their three years' course here who wish to obtain employment in India to work with greater energy and assiduity. But I admit it would be a source of regret to me if I thought that the reduction in the number of Government appointments which will hereafter be offered to the students of this college would necessarily imply any cessation of the connection between the college and the Public Works Department in India. I should regret it, not only on account of the college itself, but of India and of Indian interests. There cannot, I think, be the slightest doubt that India, more than any other country, still stands in need, notwithstanding all that has been hitherto accomplished, of a great extension of its public works. India requires an extension of its public works, not only as all other countries do for the full development of its resources, but, more than any other country, because on the full development of public works in India depends the very great question of the protection of that vast country from the constantly recurring calamity of famine. Experience has happily shown that, constantly recurring as these famines are, they are never prevalent at the same time over the whole country, and there is little doubt, I think, but that India produces in any year, even in the worst, ample food to support its whole population, if means existed of transporting the food from the places where it is superabundant to the places where it is deficient. That result can only be attained by developing the railways of India, which has already done so much to mitigate these great calamities. Prudential and financial reasons had compelled the Government of India, as I think wisely, to limit its own operations in this direction, lest a Government department may become too much responsible even for undertaking beneficial works. Such responsibility may become too heavy, and I think it is wise not at present to overtax the energy and resources of the Government of India. But there is no reason, I trust, why the same course should not be taken as is taken in this and other countries—why private enterprise, private capital, and private energy should not step in to the assistance of Government in the development of public works in India. There is, I am happy to say, at the present moment every reason to believe that such will be the case. Up to a short time ago it has always been supposed that if the Government of India did not make the railways and irrigation works of India, or unless it did not tempt private companies to undertake those works by giving a guarantee for a large number of years, it would be impossible to induce private capitalists to invest money in the public works of India. There seems now every hope, and in this country every disposition, without such inducement as has hitherto been found necessary, to hold out that capitalists will come forward to develop the resources of India. I fully believe that they may invest capital safely there notwithstanding some mistakes which have been made, into the details of which I will not go, and, notwithstanding the disadvantage which may attend the undertaking by Government of works such as these, I believe it can be shown and can be satisfactorily established that, on the whole, the capital which has been invested in India in public works there is now yielding a satisfactory return. (Cheers.) If that has been the result in India up to now, I see no reason why the capital invested in further works should not, like them, yield a remunerative return. But it is not my business nor my duty, and I should be very sorry to come forward here or anywhere for the purpose of advertising public works in India, or of inducing capitalists to invest money in undertakings in which perhaps there may be disappointment. All I wish to do is to point out to the students of this college that, although they may not be able to obtain appointments in the Public Works Department of India, there is no reason why in the service of private companies they may not have an opportunity of an equally useful and, I hope, equally advantageous career in connection with Indian public works. I do not think it is necessary that I should detain you at greater length, for, as I have already remarked, the president has said everything concerning the history and present position of this college which I think can be said. I believe that it is usual on occasions such as these to give a few words of good advice to the successful and also unsuccessful students, but I think such a task is almost unnecessary on the present occasion. I do not think any one here can be ignorant, that any one who is taking up the profession of an engineer can be ignorant, that, whether in Government or private employment, his future success depends upon energy, activity, and application. (Hear, hear.) After all that is a truism of all professions, though, perhaps, these qualities are more required in the engineering profession than any other. But activity and energy are not all that is required in the sphere where you, gentlemen, are going to exercise your labours. Many of you are going to work in India amongst a people of different habits, of different race, of different religion, and of different feelings and opinions in almost every conceivable matter. I believe there never was a time when this country was more anxious to do its duty towards India, and to discharge its great responsibilities towards India, than now. I believe the whole country takes a greater, deeper, and more active interest in the welfare of that great dependency than it has done at any other time. But on the other hand it is also a fact that the facility of communication between England and India has made those who are engaged in the Government of India at the present time regard it less as their home than was the case in the old days when Indian servants looked forward to spending their lives amongst the people of India. There has been therefore, perhaps, of late years something less of harmony or mutual understanding between the Government and the people of India. There is, I am sure, no diminution of the kindly feeling which is felt by Europeans towards Eastern people; but there is perhaps now somewhat less of union, somewhat less of sympathy and understanding than used formerly to exist between them. I know very well that these things cannot be learned, but I think there cannot be any better preparation for the sympathy, the courtesy, and the good feeling which ought to exist on the part of European officers in India than the state of things which has been described as existing among the students of this college by Sir A. Taylor. He has described their conduct and character in this institution as in every respect eminently satisfactory, and I have no doubt that, trained as they are by Sir A. Taylor and by the able staff of professors by whom he is surrounded, they will be able to exercise a great, a useful, and a beneficial influence upon the people of India with whom, in their important duties, they will be brought into contact. I beg to congratulate Sir A. Taylor and the students of his college upon the extremely interesting report which he has been able to make of it, and to wish you in the future every prosperity and every success in the noble profession which you are about to undertake. (Cheers.) The company then dispersed. Many of them proceeded to examine the drawings on view in the Victoria-hall.

BRITISH BURMA.*

A SERIES of valuable essays by the late Capt. C. J. F. Forbes, on various philological and other subjects connected with British Burma has just been published by Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co. Of these by far the most important is the one which gives its name to the book, "A Comparative Grammar of the Languages of Further India." From a very brief preface by the editor we learn that the MSS. of this, and the other essays now given to the public, were found, in a more or less incomplete form, among the papers of Capt. Forbes after his death. They have been printed much in the same state as that in which they were left by their lamented author; and we have no hesitation in expressing our opinion that the value of the researches now made accessible amply justifies this decision. The author's own preface is touching, by reason of the singularly modest and almost deprecatory tone in which he speaks of his work, no less than for the melancholy circumstances under which it appears. Whilst we think that orientalists at large will form a much higher estimate of the value of that work than Capt. Forbes seems to have hoped for, we are sure that all will appreciate the high-mindedness of the true scholar that is apparent throughout.

The first chapter of this little treatise is entitled a "Survey of the Races and Languages of Ultra India;" in which, and in two following chapters, the author traces briefly the origin and rise of the principal nations inhabiting the Indo-Chinese region. The later part of the work is devoted to a short comparative grammar of the Mon, Cambodian, and Anamese languages, being an endeavour to prove that these three form one family, the Mon-Anam. These races, with the wild tribes allied to them, the author considers, in opposition to generally received authorities, to be the earliest settlers in the Trans-Gangetic countries.

Attached to this somewhat extended treatise, which occupies the greater part of the volume, are several shorter essays. One, on "The Shoulder-headed Celts of Burma," gives the results of some interesting original investigations; another, on "The Life of Gautama," is a compilation of great merit and value.

A PASTIME FOR RETIRED ANGLO-INDIANS.*

MRS. ELIOT JAMES is already well and favourably known to our readers by her capital little books on "Indian Household Management" and "Indian Industries." She now comes forward to teach us how Anglo-Indians—and others—can combine amusement and profit by going in for poultry keeping. We have never seen a more thoroughly practical little manual on the subject. The fair authoress never forgets that many of those who consult her book will know nothing whatever of the business in hand, and will be glad to be instructed in all those little petty details that are usually taken for granted as "known to every schoolboy." Mrs. Eliot James condescends to tell one everything, whether known to the schoolboy or not; and the result is a little volume that exactly fulfils the conditions of the excellent series to which it belongs. It is emphatically a "useful handbook."

THE COOKERY INSTRUCTOR.*

To the same series belongs another admirable manual, "The Cookery Instructor, explaining the Science and Practice of Cookery," by Edith A. Barnett. This little book is written by a lady who is an examiner to the National Training School of Cookery and also a lecturer to the National Health Society. It gives us the scientific rationale of an art whose direct dependence on the science of chemistry is too little thought of even by the most highly educated people. The scientific principles that underlie even the most simple processes in cooking—e.g., the coagulation of albumen when subjected to heat, as seen in a boiled egg—are explained in a clear and easy way that can be readily understood by all, even by children. These scientific principles should be known by all, for they are of course of universal application; a slight knowledge of some of them communicated to our khansamahs and butlers in India would do much to remove the reproach that still attaches to our Indian cooking.

CORRESPONDENCE.

SLAVERY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In the Quarterly Review just published you will find a carefully written article on the present state of India; especially valuable, because there exists a fatal disinclination among both Tories and Whigs to discuss Indian subjects. The reviewer is well aware that if we have a loyal peasantry in India we are safe: the intrigues of all other sections of the community will be unavailing to shake our power. But are the peasantry loyal? They have been and are very anxious to be loyal: all that they want is nourishing food for themselves and their families, and they feel particularly loyal if they can find means to purchase cheap Manchester clothing and a few brass household utensils. Their chief complaint against the British Government is that it has systematically encouraged the increase of debt and has enacted objectionable means of recovering debts. One of the leading ideas in an Englishman's mind is that the extension of credit is the road to wealth; that, if we facilitate borrowing, we shall make everyone happy and prosperous. You would confer an inestimable benefit on the people of India if you would teach the people of England that their Indian subjects have not yet come of age, and ought not to be entrusted with the dangerous power of unlimited borrowing. Hopeless indebtedness is slavery.—Your obedient servant,
July 18.

ENGLISH EXPLORERS IN CENTRAL ASIA.

THE Government are beginning to see the necessity of watching Russian progress in Central Asia. Colonel Stewart, a well-known Punjab cavalry officer has just returned to England from those regions. He tried to reach Merv, and got as near it as anyone but Mr. O'Donovan, who is now beguiling his imprisonment there by writing letters to the Daily News. Colonel Stewart has been referred to in these columns several times recently as the "Armenian Traveller." He started from Calcutta as an Armenian horse-dealer, bent on regaining his native country; he cleverly maintained the disguise throughout; and he spent some months in Northern Persia, keeping his eyes open, mapping out routes, and obtaining information. He travelled at his own risk, and without even the small amount of Government assistance afforded to Major Butler; but the object of his travels was known, we believe, to our representatives in Persia, and, it is said, to the Russian authorities as well. Since his arrival in London he has, we hear, had interviews with Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Childers, Lord Granville, and Lord Hartington, which looks as if these astute Ministers were not quite so certain of the peaceful intentions of Russia as they would lead the House of Commons to believe. But to make inquiries about Russian progress now that we have scuttled out of Kandahar is very like locking the stable door after the horse has been stolen. Of course, Russia is going on whenever it suits her convenience. Every student of Central Asian politics knows that, her Majesty's Ministers as well as anyone else. But promises had been made in Midlothian and elsewhere during the elections, and must be kept. The doings of the Conservatives had been denounced, and must be reversed. At the same time the adventurous English travellers who visit the scene of Russian encroachments and give the public the benefit of their personal experience, are doing useful work in educating the English mind as to the actual state of affairs on the Persian frontier. In spite of the lukewarmness of official support, the spirit of adventure is still strong enough in Englishmen to supply the want of an efficient Intelligence Department. A month or two back there were four independent English travellers in Persia, all severally bent on the same mission—Capt. Gill of the Engineers, Colonel Stewart of the Punjab Cavalry, Mr. O'Donovan of the Daily News, and the gentleman who is travelling under the disguise of a Hajee, and whose letters are appearing in our columns.—Times of India.

STAFF CORPS PROSPECTS.

WE would advise officers who have any intention of becoming probationers for the Staff Corps to give a short time to the study of the Army List, from which they will learn that the average service of the senior lieutenants of cavalry of the line is seven years and five months, and the average service as lieutenants of the seniors of the 100 regiments, Rifle Brigade and West India regiments, is seven years eleven months. As lieutenants in the Staff Corps have to remain in that grade twelve years, it is almost impossible for them ever to go on service with British regiments without being called on to serve under officers who were formerly their juniors in rank. Nor is this evil confined to the junior ranks, as the new line majors will supersede all Staff Corps captains. The Staff Corps promotion was framed on the average service of the line, but the average service for companies and majorities in the line has decreased by some five or six years, while the Staff Corps promotions have remained the same. A lieutenant in the Staff Corps of twelve years' standing, if obliged to leave the service, obtains no sort of pension or gratuity, a lieutenant in a line regiment of the like length of service is given £1,200 on retirement. A captain in the line can leave the army after twenty years' service on £200 per annum, although he may never have served out of England. A captain in the Staff Corps must serve twenty years (eighteen years in India) before he obtains a pension of £192 per annum, and subsequent pensions up to thirty years service are better in the line than the Staff Corps. An officer of average promotion in the Line who has served all his time in India will, when he has twelve years' service and has been a captain four years, have drawn Rs.42,552. An officer who entered the Staff when he had three years' service will be lieutenant at twelve years service and have drawn Rs.42,300 as lieutenant and wing officer. Between the grades of captain and major the pay is again much the same, but the line officer gains by his early promotion to major. We may say briefly that, taking the present difference in quickness of promotion, the pay is much the same in both branches, but the promotion is considerably quicker in the line and the pensions are infinitely better. The expenses of living are slightly more in the Staff Corps than the line, and the chances of distinction considerably greater in the latter. Reviewing the whole question, we are forced to the conclusion that, now that the fear of compulsory retirement in the junior ranks of the line need not alarm any officer of under ten years' service, for him to enter the Staff Corps is to wilfully exile himself from his country for many years without any sort of compensatory advantage. When the Staff Corps held out hopes of distinction to young officers ambitious to rise above their fellows, it could always enlist eligible recruits, but the unwise regulations defining the years an officer must serve before attaining to a command, 2nd in command, or wing officership, has reduced the Staff Corps to a dead level of promotion by which the fool and the wise man are treated alike. The Government, instead of endeavouring to remedy the manifest injustice which the Staff Corps are suffering in promotion and pensions, and finding they cannot recruit it from the class of officers who were induced to enter formerly, now hold it out as a boon to impetuous young officers in every part of the world. We do not consider such a course is fair to the officers who were formerly induced to enter, or advantageous to the Government, and we hope to see some decided steps taken to put a stop to it when the reorganisation scheme comes into operation.—Englishman.

THE NATIVE PRESS ON THE CIVIL WAR IN AFGHANISTAN.

BUT the most serious difficulty is, how to prevent the Afghans from being converted into "cats' paws" by England's enemies. A civil war in Afghanistan is just the thing wanted by Russia—how to prevent the wily Russians from coming in and playing an important part in the civil strife. They may espouse the cause of one party or other, or both parties at the same time, and thus plant a footing into Afghanistan. Our prestige will be irretrievably gone if our Ameer elect is driven away by the Afghans with the aid of Russia. It is impossible that we could afford to allow such a thing to occur. To prevent such a catastrophe we will have to again occupy Afghanistan and maintain a large army there. Its circumstances lead to such a result, which is not unlikely, then our position would be a singularly unfortunate one. Even the very idea of such a contingency must give a shudder to every Indian and every Englishman.—Amrita Bazar Patrika.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

EMPLOYMENT OF NATIVES.—We are glad to observe that a native gentleman has been deemed qualified to hold the office of Postmaster General of the North Western Provinces and Oudh. Rai Saligram Bahadur, who has distinguished himself in the department, has received the appointment. A native officer has been appointed Superintendent of Stamps and Stationery in Madras. These are examples for the other provinces.—Hindoo Patriot.

THE civilians in Burma, according to annual custom, dined together on June 16, under the presidency of Mr. Bernard, Chief Commissioner. The following gentlemen attended:—Messrs. Jardine, Hodgkinson, Burgess, Copleston, Fox, Phayre, Symes, Mitchell, Snow, Irwin, Morrison, Adamson, Hall, Sankey, and Shaw.—Englishman.

CENTRAL ASIAN TRADE.—A statement of traffic in Ladakh from April 16 to May 15 shows that during that period 130 horses, 117 bullocks, 126 asses, and 41 coolies were imported from Cashmere territory; twelve horses from Chinese Tibet. There were no imports from India, and the only exports consisted of 11 horses, sent via Cashmere. 157 horses, 75 bullocks, and 163 asses were exported to Cashmere territory, and 20 horses to Turkestan.—Times of India.

COMMISSARIAT REORGANISATION.—Colonel Low, C.B., commandant 13th Bengal Lancers, has arrived in Simla and will at once begin work on the new transport scheme. The committee of which he is president is called "The Commissariat Reorganisation Committee."—Pioneer.

THE FOREIGN OFFICE.—Capt. T. Hope has been appointed to officiate as junior under secretary in the Foreign Department until Lieut. Col. Ridgway's return from England next November.

Mr. Martindale, C.S., Madras, joins the Foreign-office as assistant secretary.—Ibid.

DEFENCE COMMITTEE.—Captain G. Hildebrand, R.E., has been appointed to succeed the late Major Pierson, R.E., as secretary of the Defence Committee.—Ibid.

GAZETTEER OF AFGHANISTAN.—The new Afghan Gazetteer, which is being prepared in the Intelligence Department at Simla, by officers with personal knowledge of the country, is progressing rapidly. Col. Lockhart, C.B., head of the Intelligence Branch, takes that part of the work which relates to Northern Afghanistan; and Capt. Maitland, 3rd Sind Horse, is dealing with the southern districts—viz., those below 34° north latitude. The valuable survey work done during the late Waziri expedition will also be available for the new Gazetteer.—Ibid.

HYAT KHAN'S TRIAL.—Mr. J. W. Smyth, judge of the Chief Court of the Punjab, and not, as was previously announced, Mr. Barkley, has been appointed to try Mahomed Hyat Khan. Mr. Spitta, the Government advocate, who will prosecute, is now in Simla preparing the case. The trial will take place in Lahor, but the date has not yet been fixed.—Ibid.

THE VOLUNTEERS.—The Governor General in Council has sanctioned the formation of a volunteer garrison artillery corps for Chunar, to be attached to the N.W.P. Volunteer Rifle Corps.—Bombay Gazette.

FOREST DEPARTMENT.—It is stated that Mr. F. D. Vincent, of the Punjab Forest Department, will be deputed, some time towards the end of the present year, to Ceylon, for about six months, to report upon the Crown forests in that island.—Ibid.

BOARD OF REVENUE, N.W.P.—Mr. C. P. Carmichael, of the North West Provinces Board of Revenue, goes home for three months in August. During his absence Mr. Cairns Daniell, Commissioner of Benares, will, we hear, act on the Board of Revenue. The appointment was offered to Mr. J. Simpson, C.S., Commissioner of the Allahabad Division, who, however, declined it, as he himself, requiring a rest, was going on leave.—Pioneer.

CALCUTTA FREIGHTS.—At date of departure of mail the unfixed tonnage in the port amounted to 13,000 tons. Amount of business transacted during the week had been meagre, and the market closed quiet. Rates were as follow:—London via Canal: tea, 60. London via Cape: Wheat 52s. 6d.; linseed, 55s.; rapeseed, 57s. 6d.

MADRAS.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—When Col. Mullins, R.E., the chief engineer for irrigation, now on three months' privilege leave, returns to duty, the taking over by Government of this system of water communication will commence. Government have directed that the system be worked as economically as possible, without impairing proper maintenance. Mr. J. H. Latham, the chief engineer and manager, will, it is understood, disconnect himself from it.—Madras Mail.

INSPECTIONS IN MADRAS.—The Provincial Commander in Chief will proceed to Bangalore in his capacity as general officer commanding the Mysor Division, to inspect the 1st Regiment Madras Light Cavalry, lately arrived at that station from Southern Afghanistan, and also to carry out the field firing and other divisional duties and exercises. Eventually, in his capacity as provincial commander in chief, Major General Payn will proceed to Madras to inspect certain regiments which have lately returned to the Presidency from the Rampa district and the Bengal Presidency.—Pioneer.

INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.—Dr. Cornish, Surgeon General with the Government of Madras, has submitted to Government the name of eleven surgeon majors of the Indian Medical Service as candidates for promotion to the new grade of brigade surgeon. Among the names submitted are those of Surgeon Majors E. A. Burn, M.A., M.D., R. Dempster, H. Croker, B. Williamson, and G. Bidie.—Madras Times.

ENGINEERING STAFF S.I. RAILWAY.—It has been decided that the strength of the engineering establishment of the South Indian Railway shall for the future consist of one chief engineer, one deputy chief engineer, and six assistant engineers. Owing to abnormal requirements at present the services of an extra assistant engineer have been sanctioned. This reduction in the staff is causing much discontent, inasmuch as it has greatly narrowed the enjoyment of privilege and other leave earned under the terms of their covenant.—Madras Mail.

THE CONSERVATION OF ANTIQUITIES.—Surgeon Major G. Bidie, M.B., superintendent Madras Central Museum, has written to the Madras Government as follows:—"I have the honour to request the sanction of Government for the carriage to, and erection at, the Museum of some old carved stones, referred to in paragraph 18 of the committee's report, recorded in G.O., No. 914 W., of April 4, 1881. The stones which I wish to appropriate consist of fifteen carved pillars, certain base stones, and some stones used as breast-summers. The pillars have been cut in the square with circular intervals, and the faces of the square portions are adorned with mythological and other figures in bold relief. The material is granitoid gneiss, and the pillars are in fair preservation, and are said to have formed part of some old fort in the Chingleput district. It would be a great pity to destroy such relics of the past, and I would propose to preserve them by erecting them at the Museum in the shape of a small square, like a rest house, but without a roof, under trees. All the pillars are not of equal length, but this might be met by sinking some of the taller ones in the ground and elevating the shorter ones on the existing base stones. The breast-summers should then be placed on the top of the pillars to keep them in position, and, if necessary, might be fastened to them by single iron pegs let into the tops of the pillars. This completed, a few base stones might be placed in the interior as seats. It will thus be seen that the expenditure involved will be very trifling, and I have to request that the superintendent of works, Presidency, may have funds placed at his disposal and be requested to carry out the work." The Government in their order observe that the transfer of the stones in question has already been approved. The superintendent of works, Presidency, will see to their erection in the Museum compound as suggested by Dr. Bidie.—Pioneer.

BOMBAY.

CENSUS OF THE HYDERABAD ASSIGNED DISTRICTS.—During the past thirteen and a-half years there has been an increase of the population of 20 per cent. in the whole province. The increase in Bassim is the greatest, although the district suffered most severely from the last visitation of cholera, being 29·86 per cent. In Akola it is 23·33, Wun 21·08, Buldana 20·02, Amraoti 15·20, and in Ellichpur 12·43 per cent. There has been an increase of about 13,000 males in excess of the increase of females, and the relative proportion of the sexes in 1881 is 51·63 males to 48·37 females, against 51·66 males to 48·34 females in 1867. The proportion of males is largest in the Akola district, where it is 51·97 per cent., and lowest in the Buldana district, where it is 51·19 per cent.—Deccan Times.

Add—Silver received during the week	43,834

Mehta, instructed by Mr. Khunderao Morojee, applied in chambers, on behalf of Mr. C. M. Thomas, for summonses against Mr. Henry Curwen, editor, and Mr. C. E. INSPECTION BY THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF.—The commander in chief, General the Hon. A. Hardinge, commenced his inspection of the regiments and batteries in garrison in Puna on June 27. He began with No. 2 Mountain Battery, which he inspected most minutely; afterwards visiting the lines and stables. To Lieut. Keene, R.A., the commanding officer, General Hardinge expressed himself thoroughly satisfied, both as regards the condition of the mules, the soldier like appearance of the men, and the smartness of the appointments. The battery has just returned from Afghanistan.—Ibid.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS IN BOMBAY.—The total number of deaths registered during the week ending Tuesday, June 28, was 394, being 18 less than in the previous week, 18 more than the week ending June 29, 1880, and 69 less than the mean of the corresponding period in the preceding five years. During the week 312 births were reported in the different districts of the city. The rate of mortality per 1,000 of the population per annum was 30·09. There were 89 deaths from remittent fever, being 12 less than the previous week, and 17 less than in the same period last year. The deaths from diseases of the respiratory system, diarrhoea, and dysentery were last week 44, 24, and 11 respectively, as compared with 28, 7, and 21 last year. There were 22 deaths from cholera last week, as compared with 11 in the week previous. The following remark is appended by the health officer to his return:—"As there is no allowance made for the increase of population, natural and extraordinary, during recent years, the percentages of mortality are unreliable".—Ibid.

BALL AT GUNESH KHIND.—The first ball of the season came off at Government House, Gunesh Khind, on Wednesday evening, June 29. All the élite of the station were present on the occasion, and everything went off well. The apartments were brilliantly illuminated.—Puna Observer.

OFFICIAL CORRUPTION IN NASICK.—Several Government native officials in the Nasick district have been dismissed from service for a gross abuse of their authority, by which they obtained grain from the ryots at prices below those ruling in the general market. The ryots were ordered to send in certain quantities of grain at a certain price, and sent them as a matter of course; but anonymous letters called the attention of the collector of Nasick to what was going on, and an inquiry showed that the mamladar, chief constable, and other native officials of Peint had participated in the fraud.—Bombay Gazette.

TORTURE IN AHMEDABAD.—A Parsee chief constable of police at Khot Taluka, Ahmedabad district, has been sentenced to four months' imprisonment, and to pay a fine of Rs.1,000 for torturing a prisoner by suspending him by the arms and branding him in the palms of the hands with a view to extort a confession.—Ibid.

BOMBAY MUNICIPAL OFFICES.—The Bombay Town Council resolved last Tuesday, on the motion of Mr. Nowrojee Furdoonjee, to recommend the corporation to set apart a sum of Rs.2,50,000 from the surplus cash balance for the construction of municipal offices in a suitable locality on the Esplanade.—Ibid.

WESTERN INDIA RIFLE ASSOCIATION.—The annual meeting of the Western India Rifle Association is fixed for the 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th October. The prospectus is, as to value, the same as last year, but a few changes in the details of some of the matches have been made. Nos. 11, 12, and 13 of last year become No. 11 of this, and No. 14 of last year is split into Nos. 12, 13, and 14 this year. In the bye-laws a few important alterations have been made. Misses have been excluded from the ties, and the Wimbledon classification of rifles has been adopted. The prospectus has been approved by the council, and will be issued in the course of a week or two.—Deccan Herald.

GAS FOR PUNA.—We are glad to learn that we are to have gas lights introduced into Puna. We presume the lighting of our streets and buildings will be undertaken by a company, a purely mercantile speculation—and will undoubtedly prove of immense advantage to the public and profitable to its promoters.—Ibid.

THE LATE LORD LAWRENCE.

MR. WOOLNER'S bust of Lord Lawrence in Westminster Abbey was unveiled on July 12 in the presence of the widow of the great Indian administrator, Lady Lawrence, and his sons and daughters, Lord and Lady Lawrence, Hon. H. A. and Mrs. Lawrence, and Hon. Maude Lawrence, by whom it has been placed in the Abbey. Dean Stanley's slight illness, from which we are glad to say he is recovering, prevented him from attending. The bust stands, on the pedestal representing the India lotus leaf, against the north wall of the church on the west of the gate called the Canons' door, through which a glimpse of the green turf of the Paradise and of the cloisters round it is obtained, and nearly underneath the monument of Sir James Outram. Its pure white, newly-sculptured Carrara marble stands out brilliant against the time-worn stone of the nave and aisle. The breast is draped in the robe of the Star of India, the blue folds of which hung as a pall upon the coffin when two years ago it was borne to its resting-place in the Abbey, followed by the representatives of the Royal House, and by such an assembly of English statesmen and of bronzed servants of the Indian Crown as can rarely, if ever, have gathered together on a similar occasion. Over the heart is worn the Star of the Order. The face, sculptured with great mastery of striking and, at the same time, delicate effect, finely expresses the power which Lord Lawrence exercised over those who approached him. "Iron John" was the appellation of the late Lord Lawrence in his youth, and iron resolution breathes in the lines of his face as represented by Mr. Woolner. The forehead is very high and capacious; the distinctive features of the face are the deepset eyes protected above by unusually low, straight brows, like those of a born fighter whom Nature had protected from injury to his eyes by making it almost impossible to reach them. In like manner, the massive neck is unusually muscular and strong. While the general cast of the face is such as to convey the idea of a commander who would irresistibly enforce his will and compel obedience, the expression of the mouth is singularly sweet and simple. The lines are large and strong, but the finely pointed lower lip indicates extreme sensitiveness as in the lower lips of Bacon, Cromwell, and Mr. Woolner's fine study of Alfred Tennyson. The sides of the pedestal are decorated with incised and gilded lotus flowers, and in front is the following inscription:—"John Laird Mair, first Lord Lawrence of the Punjab, who, from the Civil Service of the East India Company, rose to be Viceroy. His public life began among the races of Upper India, whose hearts he won and whose lives he inspired. In the Mutiny of 1857 he maintained peace in the Punjab and enabled our armies to reconquer Delhi. His Viceroyalty promoted the welfare of the Indian people and confirmed the loyalty of the chiefs and princes. His devotion to public duty was ennobled by the simplicity and purity of his private life. 'He feared man so little because he feared God so much.' This monument records the love and the pride with which his memory is cherished by his widow and children. Born March 4, 1811; died June 27, 1879." The bust is a less ambitious memorial of the "great pro-consul of our Indian Empire" than the full-length statue by the same sculptor which now stands in Calcutta; but lovers of art as well as Anglo-Indians will have reason to rejoice that so worthy a record of the features of a very remarkable man is now to be preserved in London.

HEDOZONE.

THE ORIGINAL NON-ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE. PURE AND SPARKLING.
REFRESHING AND INVIGORATING.

ZONE.

Nearly every schoolboy knows that there are divisions of the earth that relate to the temperature of the latitudes, called Zones; and that these have been estimated on five in number—viz., one Torrid, two Frigid, and two Temperate. In the year 1876 another Temperate Zone was discovered, was brought to the recognition of the philosophical world, and named HEDOZONE. What Hedozone has to do with the divisional portions of the surface of the globe is so far that it fortifies mankind in resisting the extremes of temperature in all Zones, and dating from 1876 proves it to be the original sparkling tonic beverage and diet drink—Of Chemists, Wine Merchants, and Grocers. ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JULY 25, 1881.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

On August 15 next and following days an examination will be held of candidates for ten appointments in her Majesty's Indian Medical Service. The applications for admission to this examination, together with the necessary certificates, have [to be forwarded to the India-office at least a fortnight earlier; so that within a very few days the authorities will be in a position to judge how far the supply of duly qualified candidates is now equal to the urgent demands of India. The papers that have come to hand from India by recent mails show that the result is awaited, by the army and the official community throughout the country, with considerable anxiety. It is pointed out that the competitions of late show a rapidly progressive tendency to substitute Native agency for European in this Service. If it could be maintained that this result is due, mainly or in any considerable degree, to the increasing superiority of native to European skill in the science and art of medicine, there would be some cause for satisfaction; though, even in that case, the prospect of having a large number of our great European stations in India placed under native medical charge is one which we cannot expect the English community cordially to acquiesce in. It will be frankly acknowledged by all enlightened and liberal-minded natives, as well as by Anglo-Indians, that the time has not yet come for such an arrangement. But apart from this consideration, there seems no reason to doubt that the results of late years have been due to altogether different causes—to the neglect with which the just grievances of the Indian Medical Service have been treated, to the half-hearted and grudging spirit in which concessions have been made, and to the consequent disinclination of the profession in England to furnish a fair supply of duly qualified candidates of British birth and training. This view, if it be a true one, as we believe it to be, gives the greatest importance to the Blue Book on the subject, recently presented to Parliament, which closes with the concessions made by Government on April 14 last. As is well pointed out in one of the papers therein published, continued neglect of the just demands of the service can only lead to "a deficiency of properly qualified candidates, daily increasing agitation in the profession, and then, in view of the complete breakdown of the Department, extravagant concessions of pay, rank, and pension, considerably in excess of what would at first have been accepted as sufficiently meeting the just claims of the service." In common with all those who have at heart the well-being of our Indian Empire, we shall watch with much concern the effect produced by the recent concessions. Meanwhile, a letter that has just been addressed to the Secretary of State by the "Indian Medical Service Defence Committee," under date of July 15, affords some valuable indication of what we may expect; and we trust that it will also suggest to Lord Hartington—whose own "sense of fairness and personal interest in the welfare of the Service" are clearly, and, indeed, warmly, recognised and acknowledged by the Committee—some points in the scheme of redress that still afford room for improvement.

We are unable in this place to enter in detail into the temperate and logical representations of the committee; nor is it necessary that we should do so, as a copy of the letter will probably be in the hands of most of our readers who are interested in all the particulars of the subject. It will be remembered that the Committee by deputation submitted an address to Lord Hartington on June 2, 1880, to urge on his lordship's attention various Service grievances, and especially the fact that serious injury would be inflicted on the Service by some of the provisions of the new scheme. The statements then made, being referred to India, were sharply criticised by Lord Ripon's Government in a letter to the Secretary of State, dated Nov. 4, 1880, and the letter of the Committee is mainly concerned with answering those criticisms. It shows clearly that some of the Committee's statements were misunderstood by Lord Ripon, whilst others appear to have been unjustly impugned. The Committee properly points out that no better proof of the general accuracy of their statements could be had than that which is afforded by the fact that most of the grievances then complained of have since been redressed. It is satisfactory to find that the Committee is of opinion that, on the whole, the civil branch of the service has now received substantial justice; and further, that comparatively slight modifications in the new scheme will be sufficient to satisfy the military branch. The Committee is to be congratulated on the courage and moderation with which Surgeon General Cockburn has once more restated their case. He shows that the military branch of the Service must suffer very seriously if their further claims are not carefully considered; and we have every hope that the representation now made will receive from Lord Hartington the generous attention it deserves.

MOUNTAIN BATTERIES.—The committee on Mountain Batteries, of which General Leslie is president, has begun work at Simla. The scheme for the reorganisation of the batteries will take some two months to elaborate.—Pioneer.

THE BENGAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.

The monthly general meeting of the Asiatic Society of Bengal was held on June 1; the Hon. H. J. Reynolds, C.S., vice president, in the chair. Mr. C. H. Tawney exhibited and described a rare silver coin of Sophytes. The following papers were read:—1. On the voles (arvicola) of the Himalayas, Tibet, and Afghanistan, by W. T. Blanford, F.R.S. In this paper the author gives an account of all the Himalayan, Tibetan, and Afghan voles which have hitherto been described, and for this purpose has examined all the type specimens. The molar teeth of the different forms are figured and described. Mr. Blanford considers it very doubtful that any vole has ever been found in Oriental regions. 2. On Myospalax fuscicapillus, Blyth, by W. T. Blanford, F.R.S. This paper is a description of a small rodent which was named by Mr. Blyth forty years ago. The original specimen was obtained at Quetta. Another from Afghanistan having been recently found among the collections of the East India Company which have been transferred to the British Museum, Mr. Blanford has compared the two specimens and has given a full description of the species and its affinities. 3. Notes on the inhabitants of the Nicobars, by F. A. de Roepstorff. This paper is a description of an expedition made by Col. T. Cadell, Chief Commissioner of the Nicobars, to obtain information regarding the tribe living inland in the great Nicobar. Mr. de Roepstorff was formerly of opinion that this tribe, the Shombengs, were not of Papuan or Negrito origin; but in October last he saw a man of the tribe whose appearance induced him to change his opinion. With Col. Cadell, however, he was able to penetrate further into the interior than he had in done in October, and fortunately succeeded in finding a number of Shombengs whom they examined carefully. As a result of this examination Mr. de Roepstorff has reverted to his former opinion, that there are no traces of Papuan or Negrito blood in the Shombengs. The man whom Mr. de Roepstorff met on his first expedition is quite different to the other Shombengs;

and Col. Cadell on seeing him said that if he had seen him alone he too would have been misled. Mr. de Roepstorff again suggested that these people may be of the same race originally as the inhabitants of the little island Schowra, who support themselves by cultivation, whereas all the islanders around them are fishermen. Mr. Ball, the officiating natural history secretary, made some remarks showing how interesting the Andaman and Nicobar Islands are from a zoological and geological as well as an ethnological point of view. He alluded to a rumour as to the existence of mercury in the Andamans, which he had first brought to the notice of the society ten years ago, and pointed out that there were points of resemblance between the geology of the islands and that of California, where the now most important mercury mines in the world are situated. 4. A paper supplementary to the one read at the last meeting on the excavations of Jowhri Di, by J. E. P. Lincke, C.E. 5. Note on a photograph of a sculpture found at Bulandshar, by F. S. Growse, M.A. C.S., C.I.E. The sculpture represents the Buddah seated on a throne enveloped in a thin robe reaching to the wrists and ankles, and falling over the body in a succession of narrow folds. It was found in the garden of a native gentleman, Munshi Gopal Rai, close to the Id-gah, between the city and the civil station, and is of interest as being the only unquestionable proof that has yet come to light of the ancient prevalence of Buddhism in that neighbourhood. 6. Note on some curiosities found at Bulandshar, by F. S. Growse, M.A., C.S., C.I.E. The curiosities referred to, which were exhibited at the meeting, may be described as earthenware flasks, but the purpose for which they were intended is by no means obvious. They are pointed at the bottom like a Roman amphora, with a very small orifice for the mouth. They are all of the same shape, but they vary very much in the patterns with which they have been ornamented. Most natives who have seen the flasks think they were meant to hold either gunpowder or oil, but they are too heavy to be carried conveniently on the person, and the pointed bottom makes them awkward for storing. The opinion has also been expressed that they were meant to be filled with gunpowder and then exploded as a kind of firework, but if this were so they would hardly have been ornamented with so much care. With these jars Mr. Growse forwarded a specimen brick which he had discovered while carrying on excavations at Bulandshar, and which he believes to be of great age. The brick is well burnt, and is of a large size, measuring 1ft. 7in. by 11in. by 3in.

OPIUM IN BURMA.

THE following letter has been addressed to the editor of the Times:—"Sir, I have not yet had time to procure the parliamentary paper referred to in your leading article on the opium trade in British Burma. On the face of it, however, it appears to me that the officiating Chief Commissioner's opinion is not entitled even to the importance you attach to it. Mr. Bernard has visited opium shops in Rangoon without notice; he has travelled in various districts of the province; and he has visited gaols and hospitals. He says he has seen but one person permanently degraded by the use of opium. Such an assertion is surely unwarrantable. It assumes, in fact, that persons so affected can with certainty be recognised among a crowd by a casual observer. But the excessive use of opium produces little more effect on a man's external appearance than that of alcoholic drink. Certainly its immediate effect is far less observable; and he would be a rash man who concluded that, because 'among hundreds of stalwart' dock labourers we saw no 'apparent traces' of evil wrought by hard drinking, therefore no great mischief was done by drink. That few or no thorough debauchees should be found in the opium shops is not surprising, for it is rather by beginners than by habitues that the shops are frequented. The habitué mostly enjoys the drug in his own house. If Mr. Bernard has seen but one person permanently degraded by opium, he has, after all, only been about a year in Burma, and that, too, in a position very far elevated both above the opium eater and above the police officer and the magistrate, who commonly have to deal with him. The three Commissioners of Division, the highest officials in the province, men who had spent their lives in the country, gave very different evidence when consulted by Mr. Aitchison. The consensus of opinion about the effects of opium in Burma is all but unanimous among Europeans as well as natives. I have lived in Burma for years and have known a great many Europeans residing there, both official and non-official; but with the exception of Mr. Bernard himself, and, perhaps, one of his present advisers, I never heard of any one who maintained the expediency of distributing opium throughout the country as our Government has done. Sir Ashley Eden's opinion cannot fairly be quoted, for he did not remain long enough in the province to witness the terrible growth of the system he did so much to promote. And, after all, where is the English official who can boast of such intimate knowledge of the Burmese as to justify him in disputing at any rate the moral debasement alleged to be produced in the face of a consensus of native opinion? How many English officials know even the language of the country thoroughly well?

The representation the inhabitants of Akyab made in 1878 was even more energetic than you describe it. They anticipated an important objection that might be made to the abolition of the traffic by praying that any loss of revenue which resulted might be made good by an increase of taxation in some other shape, which they said they would gladly pay. Nor does their petition merit even the passing jest that it is of Oriental fashion. Surely, all the world over, the better sort of men pray their Government from time to time to prevent their weaker brethren from ruining themselves and their friends by vices to which they may be addicted. Have we no instances of such petitions among ourselves? All Englishmen interested in Burma must be grateful to you for drawing attention to this subject. It must be admitted that for the present as much as could be reasonably expected has been done towards remedying the evil. But there is no reason why still further steps should not hereafter be taken in the same direction, until the consumption of opium is reduced to what it was twenty years ago, or when we first annexed the country; that is to say, to a fourth of its present amount or less. It is to be hoped that the light which has now been thrown on the question by the publication of the parliamentary paper, and still more by your comments on it, will help towards the attainment of this end, or will at all events prevent the reversal of Mr. Aitchison's far-sighted and philanthropic policy. British Burma is the most flourishing province of our Indian Empire. It is increasing every year by rapid strides in wealth, population, trade, and revenue. After paying all the expenses of its own administration and defence, it contributes nearly a third of its revenue annually to the Indian exchequer; and no financial considerations can here be said to stand in the way of a reform of such vital importance.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, FRIEND OF BURMA."

HOME NEWS.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England for Rs.40,00,000 in Government bills on India. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, Rs.22,00,000, and to Bombay, Rs.13,00,000. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 7½d., being the minimum posted, received in full. Compared with the previous week this price shows a rise of ¼. The amount to be tendered for on Wednesday next is reduced to Rs.35,00,000.

THE SILVER MARKET AND THE EASTERN EXCHANGES.—On Wednesday the silver market closed at some improvement on the satisfactory allotment of the Council drafts. A few small transactions in bars were said to have taken place at 51¼d., and Mexican dollars were quoted 50½d. The exchanges from the East were all telegraphed steady, excepting the Shanghai rate, which improved ¼d., to 5s. 1¾d. Rupee Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Paper was unaltered.—On Thursday the bars to hand by the Chilean packet were sold at 51¼d., being ¼d. higher than the previous quotation. Mexican dollars were unchanged, but firm at 50½d. The exchanges from India were telegraphed 1s. 7 13-16d. for Bombay and 1s. 7¾d. for Calcutta, or an improvement in both instances of ¼d., but the rates from China were unaltered. Rupee paper was little dealt in, and closed steady.—On Friday the inquiry for silver on continental account continued, and, in the absence of supplies, bars were quoted firmer, at 51¾d. to 51½d. per ounce. Mexican dollars remained at 50½d. The Bombay exchange was telegraphed 1-16d. higher, and the Hong Kong ¼d., the respective quotations being 1s. 7¾d. and 3s. 8¾d.; but the Calcutta and Shanghai rates were unaltered. Rupee Four-and-a-half per Cent. Paper improved ¼, to 92½ to ¾.

INDIAN RELIEFS.—The trooping season will commence unusually early this year. According to present arrangements the Indian troopship Serapis will leave Portsmouth about August 20, and will be followed in the middle of September by the Malabar. These fixtures, however, will depend upon the condition of affairs in the Transvaal. The Crocodile and the Jumna will be the first to make the usual passage to Bombay, while the Euphrates will be withdrawn from the trooping programme in order that she may undergo a thorough repair. The Serapis, which for the present is only having a makeshift refit, is ready for sea, but great efforts will have to be made to complete the other ships by the dates fixed. The Jumna and Euphrates are being provided with new decks and fitted with steam steering gear, the former, in addition, being supplied with a new and larger auxiliary boiler. In consequence of the great strain which the annual refit of the Indian troopships throws upon the Portsmouth yard their lordships have authorised two of them to be sent every year to Chatham for repair.

MILITARY SERVICES (SPECIAL REWARDS).—There has been issued the following return of all rewards given since 1835 for special military services to officers of her Majesty's Army or of the Indian Army. The following are chargeable on the revenues of India:—Major General Sir William Nott, G.C.B., £1,000 for life; Lieutenant General Viscount Hardinge, G.C.B., Governor General of India, £5,000 for life; General Lord Gough, G.C.B., Commander in Chief of the Forces in the East Indies, £2,000 for life; Major General Sir George Pollock, G.C.B., £1,000 for life; Major General Sir Archdale Wilson, K.C.B., £1,000 for life; —On Saturday fine bars were quoted 51 ½d., and Mexican dollars 50 ¾d., but no actual business was reported. The exchanges from the East were telegraphed 18. 7 ¾d. for Bombay and Calcutta; 38. 8 ¾d. for Hong Kong; and 58. 1 ¾d. for Shanghai. Rupee paper was unaltered. On Monday (to-day) both the new Indian Rupee Loan for three crores, and the Chinese Loan for 4,400,000 taels, or about £1,100,000, will be allotted, but at what rate the average of the tenders will be is a subject entirely of speculation. According to some authorities the premiums in both cases will range from 4 to 5 per cent. Large applications are understood to have been made from this side.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY, JULY 21.

CIVIL WAR IN AFGHANISTAN.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said the following question had been put on the paper by the hon. member for Eye, but as that hon. member was not in his place, and he (the Marquis of Hartington) could probably not be present to-morrow, he might reply by anticipation. The question was "to ask the Secretary of State for India whether he could give the House any information as to the civil war which had broken out in Afghanistan, and especially with regard to the statement that Ayub Khan had crossed the Helmand." The reply he had to make was that the Government had already given to the Press for public information all the intelligence they had received on the subject. The latest telegrams from the Viceroy showed that Ayub Khan was in the Bakwa, a small district more than 100 miles west of the Helmand. His force consisting, it is said, of six regiments of infantry, thirteen guns, and about 1,500 cavalry, was distributed between Farah and Washir. The Ameer's force, which consisted of five regiments of infantry, two of cavalry, 1,500 irregular horse, and sixteen guns, was said to be at Kalah-i-Gaz, close on the other side of the Helmand. Besides this, it was reported that two regiments of infantry and twelve guns left Kandahar about July 16 en route to Girishk, and that further reinforcements were on their way from Cabul.

OPIMUM IN INDIA.

Mr. CROPPER asked the Secretary of State for India whether the Government of India had issued or sanctioned the issue of orders having for their object the increase of the area of poppy cultivation in Bengal; whether the Government of India had issued orders for the introduction of the cultivation of the poppy under the system of licenses and advances into the North West Provinces; and whether he would lay upon the table a return of the areas cultivated, and quantities of opium produced in all the agencies during the last ten years; also a copy of the "resolution on the report of the Board of Revenue on the administration of the Opium Department for the year 1879-80," dated Calcutta, April 4, 1881; and copies of any other resolutions of the Government of India which had for their object the increased production of opium.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: In consequence of the partial failure of crops for three consecutive years, and of a reduction of the reserve stock of opium, the Government of India, in a resolution of May 2, 1879, desired that the agents in Behar and Benares should be encouraged to extend their engagements with cultivators. Thereupon the Benares agent endeavoured to reintroduce poppy cultivation into certain pergunnahs of the Allahabad and Mirzapore districts of the North Western Provinces, which are favourably situated for the purpose, and where the poppy used to be grown, but these efforts were not attended with much success. No orders were issued by the Government of India for the introduction of the cultivation of the poppy under the system of licenses and advances into the North West Provinces, that system having existed there for many years, several of the sub-divisions of the Benares agency being situated in territory under the Lieutenant Governor of those provinces. A statement can be given of the areas cultivated, and the quantities of opium produced in the Government opium agencies of Behar and Benares for the ten years ending with 1878-79, together with a copy of the resolution of the Government of India above referred to. The resolution on the report of the Board of Revenue on the administration of the Opium Department for the year 1879-80 has not yet been received.

HALF-PAY COLONELS.

Captain AYLMER asked the Secretary of State for War whether those colonels on half pay who had completed fifty-eight years of age, and who, by his first memorandum, he proposed compulsorily to retire on July 1, 1881, on a pension of £420 a year, but whose age for such compulsory retirement had been extended to fifty-nine years of age by the recent Royal Warrant, might retire from July 1, 1881, with the compensations offered to the latter when compulsorily retired at the age of fifty-nine; and whether it was proposed to keep those colonels on half pay till they attained the age of fifty-nine, thereby depriving them of about £198 for that year, which sum they could have obtained under the warrant of 1877 by voluntary retirement; and, moreover, of the following compensation for that year—viz., the equivalent for the net loss by being debarred by age from succeeding to the establishment of general officers, and the actuarial calculation of value of the chance of a regiment.

Mr. CHILDERS: In reply to the hon. and gallant gentleman, I have to say that any colonel entitled under the warrant of 1878 to retire on his pension of £420 a year can so retire now. The addition granted by the warrant of June 25 last is only given in cases of compulsory retirement. A colonel now on half pay must elect between the two courses.

CHAPLAINS IN BENGAL.

Mr. BAXTER asked the Secretary of State for India, with reference to his view that the Government of India do not appear to have paid sufficient attention to their promise to revise ecclesiastical expenditure, whether it was true that no fewer than eleven chaplains had been appointed on the Bengal establishment alone in the one year of 1880, being as many as were appointed by the late Government in the four years, 1875 to 1878 inclusive, and greatly in excess of the average of many years.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: In 1880 nine Bengal Church of England chaplains were appointed, as against six in 1879. From 1875 to 1878 inclusive fifteen such chaplains were appointed, making for those four years an average of nearly four per annum. In order to obtain an average of many years it is proposed to give the number of chaplains appointed since the last revision of the establishment in 1859, when the existing number was fixed at ninety. From 1860 to 1880 inclusive 107 chaplains were appointed. The average of these twenty-one years is more than five per annum. No new chaplain is appointed except when a vacancy occurs. The Government of India, in reply to my inquiries, recently forwarded a letter from the Bishop of Calcutta, in which they stated they generally concurred, to the effect that the number of chaplains was not in excess considering the duties to be performed. I have addressed a despatch to the Government of India, requesting them to state specifically their own opinion whether the number of chaplains goes beyond the obligations of the Government reasonably understood. The Scotch chaplains are not included in the above figures, as it is believed that Mr. Baxter's inquiries were not intended to embrace such chaplains. On the Bengal Establishment there are five Scotch chaplains.

FIELD OFFICERS IN INDIA.

Sir T. LAWRENCE asked the Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been called to the fact that in the native regiments of the three Presidencies there are 625 field officers to 560 captains and subalterns, several regiments having but one captain and subaltern apiece; whether the establishment for native regiments is not two field officers only to five captains and subalterns; and whether so disproportionate a number of field officers, many of whom are no longer young and are simply waiting for off reckonings, does not impair the efficiency of the native regiments and add considerably to the cost of the commissioned ranks. He wished further to ask when the revised rules relating to pensions and retirement in the Indian service would be promulgated.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: The revised rules have been settled, they are now being put into formal shape, and I trust they will be published in a short time. With regard to the assumed proportion of field officers to captains and subalterns in the performance of regimental duty, I can only refer to the reply I gave on June 20, to the effect that the latest return in the office shows that of the 1,058 officers of the Staff Corps and Indian services in the three Presidencies holding regimental commands 430 are field officers and 628 are captains. A reference to the latest "Bengal Army List" shows that throughout that army and the regiments under the Government of India—105 in all—there are only twenty-one substantive field officers holding positions which should be held by captains or subalterns, and of these only three are in the actual performance of such duties, there being either on leave or acting in higher regimental positions or on the staff. It does not appear that one of these regiments is reduced to one captain and one subaltern. The disproportion, where it exists, is in the armies of Madras and Bombay, aggregating eighty-one corps. The existence is purely temporary, and will be greatly alleviated, if not altogether removed, by the measures with regard to pensions and other matters which are now under consideration and will very shortly be announced. There is no establishment of the several army grades for native regiments. The duties to be performed by the European officers, who it is to be remembered are not troop and company officers, justify three field officers with each infantry and four with each cavalry regiment. The employment of the existing field officers with corps does not add to the cost of the army, as the officers would equally draw their pay whether in the performance of regimental duty or not.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY, JULY 22.

FREE TRADE IN THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

Mr. ASHMEAD-BARTLETT wished to ask whether the Government would give facilities for the discussion of a motion of his which now stood first for the 2nd of August, relating to a question of greater importance than the Land Bill. The motion declared that all trade within the limits of the British Empire ought to be free.

Mr. GLADSTONE said he was not aware that the Government were in possession of facilities to give. Before they could give them they must be in possession of them.

Mr. ASHMEAD-BARTLETT: Am I to understand that, if the Land Bill be finished before the 2nd of August, the Government will not take that day for their business?

Mr. GLADSTONE.—I by no means said anything of the kind. (Laughter.) It is a good rule not to give answers to hypothetical questions.

COLONIAL HANDBOOKS, MAPS, &c.

NOW READY.

CANADA—including Ontario,
North-West Territory, Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia, &c.
With New Coloured Map. Crown 8vo., 288 pp. Cloth, 5s.
"Athenaeum," June 25, 1881.—"Full of information and statistics, which ought to prove very serviceable
to any visitor to the Dominion."

"Times."—"Under the above title Messrs. Silver
have brought out much more than a mere "Handbook to Canada," an historical, political, social, geographical, and topographical guide for the use of travellers and settlers
over the greater portion of our North-American possessions.
The need of such a work, at once handy, comprehensive,
and trustworthy, has long been felt both by intending settlers and by readers at home, who are surprised, and not unnaturally, at the scanty information about so important a territory which is accessible to them. The volume is illustrated by a map, showing the whole extent of the Canadian Confederation from the shores of the Atlantic to those of the Pacific, and exhibiting all the details of inland communication, whether by Railway or the long chains of inland lakes. Those who have friends in British Columbia, Manitoba, &c., will find this map most useful; and it may be added that the historical chapters are full of materials for the future historian of Canada, or for the writer of an article on that subject in an encyclopaedia.

"Manitoba Daily Free Press."—"Comprised in
this book is a mass of valuable information, which cannot fail to impress every reader with an intelligent idea of the great resources and capabilities of our country. In fact, we are convinced that in the words of the preface, a comprehensive, reliable, and at the same time cheap and handy work has been produced, which will furnish the kind of information most sought for in regard to the Dominion, and especially in regard to Manitoba and the North West territories. We have every reason to think that this handbook to Canada is one of the best contributions to immigration literature yet produced. It is also very handsomely got up tastefully bound, and very well
printed."

"Graphic."—"We are already acquainted with Messrs.
Silver's Handbooks to Australasia and South Africa.
They are concisely written, accurate in information,
and full of practical details. The same praise may be accorded to the volume now before us, which comprises
a survey of the whole of British North America, the reader's researches being aided by an excellent map. To the intending emigrant the descriptions of Manitoba and British Columbia will be especially attractive."

lication could the immense activity of our Australian Colonies and the rapid advances they have made since their very recent foundation. . . It is a creditable and useful, and, we believe, trustworthy publication."

AUSTRALIAN GRAZIER'S
GUIDE No. 1, Sheep. Crown 8vo. Limp cloth. 2s. 6d.
"Field."—"This little work is intended to supply, as fully as may be in a small compass, an admitted want in Colonial literature, and is indeed exactly the sort of 'Guide' for the assistance and instruction of those who propose to try their fortunes as stock-raisers abroad, and

THE "PISTON" FREEZING MACHINE (ASH'S PATENT).

The "Piston" Freezing Machine Freezing and Moulding Dessert Ices, Icing Wines, and making Block Ice.

ASH'S "PISTON" FREEZING MACHINE is the most effective and economical method of freezing known. It is rapidly becoming a part of the "cuisine" in the establishments of the aristocracy of this country; it has received the highest patronage, and is used in all parts of the world. By this process Ice Creams are frozen in shapes ready for table—an operation never before accomplished—entirely superseding the use of ice pots and moulds; it also forms a Wine Cooler and produces Blocks of Ice. When not used with the usual ice and salt mixture, as on board ships, in the Tropics, &c., Ash's Freezing Powders are most effective, and guaranteed to succeed.

The "Piston" Freezing Machine (without the Fittings) forming a complete Wine Cooler.

THE SELF-FEEDING REFRIGERATOR.

PATENTED BY MR. CLARKE

ASH, 1872.

By this invention Economy in Ice, increased space, an uniform low temperature, and a ventilated dry atmosphere are attained. Whether the ice placed in these safes be much or little, the same low temperature is produced, and, moreover, the lowest temperature generated by any given quantity of ice is maintained day by day until the ice is dissolved.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE,

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila; to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS. Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 18th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanied each bottle.

LAMPLOUGH'S EFFERVESCENT PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators, also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.
 Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

Says page 18:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 2, 1881.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, July 12; Madras and Allahabad, July 10; Calcutta, July 9.

THE official report on the prospects of the season and the state of the crops for week ending June 28 states that rain had been more general than in the preceding week. In the greater part of the Central Provinces and Berar the break in the wet weather is apparently at an end. In several of the Central India States also there have been good showers. There has been more or less rain in most parts of the Madras and Bombay Presidencies, but in the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country, and in the southern districts of Madras, the fall has not yet been sufficient. In Mysor prospects are uncertain, and the want of rain is much felt. More rain would also be beneficial in Hyderabad, in parts of Rajputana and the Punjab, and in the western districts of the North Western Provinces. On the other hand, there has been no break in the monsoon in the Eastern Provinces; and in a few places in Bengal the crops have been slightly damaged by too much wet. Agricultural prospects are so far good in the east and to the centre of the country. In the south and west and in part of Northern India they would be improved by more copious rain.

CHOLERA was increasing in the Bombay Presidency—especially in Surat, Baroda, Baroch, and Tanna; prevalent in the Jabalpur districts of the Central Provinces; but abating elsewhere.

THE crisis in Afghanistan is come. The Ameer's army of the South exists no longer as a fighting body; its leaders, with the Governor of Kandahar, are in full flight for Cabul; and it is more than doubtful whether Abdur Rahman will await his rival even at Cabul. The victor of Maiwand has promptly seized Kandahar, out of which we have scuttled in good time; and by this time Ayub Khan is probably en route for the northern capital—unless indeed he accepts the invitation of our flight to Quetta, and thinks it worth while first to occupy the Khojak Pass. But probably our humbleness will protect us for the time: one of our yesterday's telegrams says that "a friendly message from Ayub is hourly expected at Quetta." This is really kind of Ayub; and possibly means that he intends to settle Cabul before meddling with us.

MEANWHILE, Lord Ripon has done what might have been expected. He has ordered General Hume to "concentrate his force on Quetta"—i.e., to run away from the neighbourhood of Kandahar, as fast as British legs can execute a movement to which not even twelve months of Mr. Gladstone's rule has fully habituated them. If practice makes perfect, our troops ought soon to become wonderfully proficient in the art of executing what the humour of our American cousins used to call "strategical movements to the rear," for which Lord Ripon has discovered another euphemism. But we make bold to doubt whether any amount of teaching will ever induce the British soldier to take kindly to this kind of strategy.

THE news of Ayub's victory, and the collapse of the Prince whom we have been so lavishly supplying with money and arms, was brought in three telegrams, all dated July 28—one to the Times from Quetta, one from Reuter's agent at Bombay, and one to the India-office from the Viceroy at Bombay. They were:—

TIMES TELEGRAM.—On the night of the 20th inst. Ayub Khan broke up his camp twenty-five miles north of Girishk and marched to the south, turning the left flank of the Ameer's army on the next day. The Ameer's army followed, but did not come up with Ayub till he had reached Karez-i-Atta, thirty-two miles from Kandahar. Here a decisive action was fought on the morning of the 26th inst., resulting in the complete defeat of the Ameer's army, with a loss of eighteen guns and all his baggage.

One regiment of regulars and the Kandahari Horse joined Ayub after the fight. The rest were dispersed. Shams-ud-din Khan still held Kandahar for the Ameer when my informant left.

REUTER'S TELEGRAM.—An engagement was fought yesterday between the forces of Ayub Khan and those of the Ameer. During the battle one of the Ameer's regiments deserted to the enemy, and thereupon the remainder of Abdur Rahman's troops fled, leaving their guns and baggage on the field.

OFFICIAL TELEGRAM.—Telegram just received from Chaman says that, in action fought yesterday morning at Karez-i-Atta, Ameer's forces were totally defeated, eighteen guns taken, and all baggage. The Khelat Regiment and Kandahar Horse went over to Ayub. Gholam Haider has fled towards Cabul. Sirdar Shams-ud-din still in Kandahar with 400 men of Cabulee regiments and some police.

FURTHER information, day by day, on the position of affairs in Afghanistan, and on our own strategical movements to the rear, has been extracted from Lord Hartington by questions in the House of Commons. His lordship's replies will be found in our Parliamentary intelligence; and we believe there are few readers who will not sympathise with him in the execution of his supremely disagreeable task. From a party point of view, his speech of last night in reply to Mr. Ashmead-Bartlett will probably be regarded by his colleagues as somewhat risky; but every patriotic Englishman will rejoice to find that, at such a crisis as the present, the Secretary of State for India has the courage of his convictions. Lord Hartington was not afraid to avow sentiments in regard to the Russian advance in Central Asia, and in regard to the nature of British interests in Afghanistan, which may possibly give offence to the extreme section of his lordship's party, who are content to draw their inspiration solely from the Midlothian spring; we are very confident that those sentiments, founded on facts which are patent to every eye not blinded by faction, will commend themselves to the nation at large.

WILL Lord Ripon declare that our flight from the Kandahar side into Quetta was not a consequence of the reappearance on the scene of the victor of Maiwand?—Post hoc, not propter hoc? We are familiar with the sophistry that has represented the defeats of Laing's Nek, the Ingogo, and Majuba Hill, as merely accidental breaks in the train of negotiations that commenced before them, and that has terminated in our surrender to the Boers. If Lord Ripon is equally smart—some perhaps would use a harsher term—he will point out that Government long ago decided to bolt from Pishin, and that they cannot allow the advance of Ayub to prevent them from carrying out their intentions, any more than Colley's death and Joubert's victories did in the Transvaal.

A TELEGRAM from the Viceroy, dated July 30, says:—

"Following from St. John, dated 29th July. No news from Kandahar to-day. Still uncertain whether Ayub has occupied it. Account of battle given by Sirdar Mahomed Hasan, who is here, shows it was lost solely by bad generalship; only six guns and one regiment out of four brought into action. Gholam Haider in column of regiments received Ayub's attack in line. Ayub had collected only 400 or 500 horse and as many ill-armed foot among Duranis. All the Zamindawar chiefs and their sowars remained faithful to Ameer to last. About 2½ lakhs rupees fell into Ayub's hands."

FURTHER details regarding the position of affairs are given in the Times telegrams from Chaman, Lahore, and Calcutta. We reproduce them verbatim:—

CHAMAN, JULY 31.—Later accounts show that the summary telegraphed on the 28th inst. was generally correct. After amusing Gholam Hyder with negotiations for several days, Ayub, having got his force together, although he failed almost entirely to get recruits, marched southward with the object of seizing Kandahar, or at least of interposing himself between the Ameer's army and the city. Gholam Hyder left the camp on the Helmand on the 22nd, with the view of attacking Ayub, but, finding him gone, he quickly retraced his steps, crossed the river at Girishk and, arriving at Kushk-i-Nakhud on the 25th, found that Ayub was near Karez-i-Atta, six miles nearer Kandahar. Here Ayub again attempted to treat, declaring that his object was to avoid Kandahar and attack the English at Peshin. Undeceived by this transparent device to gain time, Gholam Hyder advanced to the attack the next morning and found Ayub's army strongly posted on rising ground facing north. It consisted of 1,800 regular infantry, fifteen guns, 2,509 horse, and 500 irregular infantry, all under the command of Sipah Salar Husain Ali Khan. The Ameer's force was composed of 2,750 regular infantry, 1,200 militia, and 2,500 horse, of which 800 were regulars, with eighteen guns. Gholam Hyder attacked without any regular formation or preparation. Two regiments and six guns only were engaged. At first they gained considerable advantage, but Ayub's general bringing up his reserves and Gholam Hyder failing to do so, they were broken and routed. One regiment of cavalry made a gallant attempt to retrieve the fortune of the day, but unsuccessfully. Gholam Hyder fled, leaving two regiments and twelve guns that had not fired a shot. One regiment with some Kandahar horse made their submission to Ayub, while the rest of the army dispersed. The whole affair lasted barely an hour. The news reached Kandahar the same day and the governor made preparations to defend the city, but next morning he fled towards Cabul, and in the afternoon Hashim Khan, with seventy horse, occupied it without resistance. Thus ends an experiment the failure of which was generally predicted, though it has failed in a way generally unexpected. The Indian Press has for the last three months been teeming with prophecies that directly Ayub appeared the tribes would rise en masse and expel the Cabulis from Kandahar; but Ayub failed to get more than a few hundred recruits, and the Ameer's cause was lost by the hopeless incapacity of his general. The Durani tribes, although almost universally well-wishers to Ayub, are either standing aloof or remaining in the ranks of the Ameer's army. All is perfectly quiet here. Colonel St. John has come to Chaman.

LAHORE, JULY 30.—Of four of the Ameer's regiments engaged in the battle at Karez-i-Aitta, two only fought. Ayub's troops, facing northwards, began the attack, his cavalry trying to get round Gholam Hyder's right to the baggage in the rear. Encountering the enemy's cavalry, Ayub's infantry followed in support. At first they were repulsed, but, being reinforced, they drove off Gholam Hyder's two regiments. General Mir Ahmed Khan, the Ameer's Envoy, reached Jamrud by way of Simla.

LAHORE, JULY 31.—Mahomed Hasan Khan, who was appointed Governor of Kandahar when the province was given to the Ameer, has reached Chaman. By his account the defeat was owing to incapacity or worse. The latter hypothesis is favoured by Afghan residents at Lahore and Amritsir. Mahomed says that Ayub had only 1,000 men, all told, whereas Gholam Hyder had four times as many. He says that only one Cabul regiment was engaged. The booty is variously estimated at from two to five lakhs. Messengers arrived at Quetta say that Hashim Khan, with a small detachment, quietly took possession of Kandahar in Ayub's name on the morning of the 27th inst. The same day Shams-ud-din left for Cabul. A friendly message from Ayub is hourly expected at Quetta.

CALCUTTA, JULY 31.—If the Government has received full details of the action at Karez-i-Atta it has not yet published them, and the public is left to choose between two accounts, one of which attributes the defeat of the Ameer's army to bad generalship on the part of Gholam Hyder Khan, while the other ascribes it to the defection of the Khanabad regiment at a critical moment of the battle. It will probably be found that both these causes operated together to produce the result. This much, at least, is certain, that the Ameer's troops were totally routed, that such of them as have not joined Ayub are dispersed and demoralised, that Abdur Rahman's cause is lost in Southern Afghanistan, and that Ayub has captured eighteen guns and five lakhs of treasure. Probably he has by this time occupied Kandahar. An official press communiqué issued yesterday states that the Zamindawar chiefs and their followers remained faithful to the last; but their fidelity is not to be trusted. They are only awaiting the course of events, and when they see Ayub master of Kandahar they are not likely to hesitate about throwing in their lot with him. The chances are that this week will witness Ayub in full march on Cabul. Whether the Ameer will await him there is doubtful. He may elect to try the issue of another battle under the walls of the capital, or he may at once make for Afghan Turkestan. Probabilities seem to point to the adoption of the latter course. Abdur Rahman's rapacity and cruelty have made him unpopular in Cabul. Mahomed Jan, the most powerful man in the north, a doubtful friend hitherto, may at any moment become an open enemy. That the Ameer cannot trust the Cabuli troops is very clear from the fact that the Khanabad regiment, whose treachery contributed to, if it did not actually cause, the rout at Karez-i-Atta, consisted of northern Afghans, and was one of the corps which accompanied Abdur Rahman from Turkestan last year. Then the Ameer's conduct for the last few months appears to show that he has been carefully securing a retreat beyond the Hindu Kush. He has sent thither the greater portion of the arms and treasure presented to him by the Indian Government. He has a strong force there under his cousin Ishak Khan, and it is now pretty certain that Ishak has given up the plan, if, indeed, he ever seriously entertained it, of making a counter-march on Herat by way of Maemena. It is not unlikely that the Ameer may succeed in holding his own in Afghan Turkestan, and that the end of the civil war may see Afghanistan split into two kingdoms—Ayub being master of Cabul, Kandahar, and Herat, and Abdur Rahman reigning in Balkh and Badakshan. Should this forecast be fulfilled the British Government will have to face a serious problem. Abdur Rahman, separated from us by a victorious rival, can hardly fail to sink to the same position as the Khans of Bokhara and Khiva and become a feudatory of Russia, which will thus practically advance the Russian frontier to the Hindu Kush, while the remainder of Afghanistan will belong to our avowed enemy. That England cannot afford to allow events to arrange themselves in this manner is, I believe, the unanimous opinion of people in this country, and it is a matter of general remark that the folly of the withdrawal from Kandahar and the hastily patched-up settlement made at Cabul last year has already become manifest. The Indian public is waiting anxiously, but not hopefully, to see whether the Government will take any and what action. Reports are current that orders have been issued to reinforce the Quetta division and strengthen the garrison of Peshin and Khojak, but these reports are probably unfounded. Even the most sanguine can hardly hope for more than that the Government may not commit the further mistake of evacuating or in any way loosening their hold upon Quetta and Peshin.

In our summary of last week we pointed out the very obvious fact that if Ayub could so far play upon the cowardice or treachery of Gholam Haider Khan as to induce him to negotiate, and could in this way gain time, the Ameer's chance of success would be most seriously damaged, and perhaps destroyed. Lord Ripon, however, seemed to think that he had made a great discovery in waking up to this fact. He deemed it of sufficient importance to telegraph to the Secretary of State; and the deliciously mild and cautious way in which he communicates his views is refreshing. This is his Excellency's telegram, dated July 27:—

"Letters from Kandahar, 22nd, say Sirdar Ghulam Mohin-ud-din, son of Kohindil Khan, now with Ayub, is endeavouring to mediate peaceful settlement. Ameer's Governor insists on Ayub's forces retiring as condition of negotiation. Ayub's army is described as weak and ill provided, and Ameer's regular force is certainly stronger; but Ayub's partisans are actively stirring up the country in his interest, so the delay is thought unfavourable to Ameer."

"A good old man, sirs; he will be talking." The evasions, vacillations, and general feebleness that must always characterise a good man attempting to bolster up a bad cause have been painfully visible in the recent telegrams of the Viceroy. There was first the hoping against hope that Ayub's advance would be stopped in some way or other. Then came the excuses for Gholam Haider's failure; the minimising the results of Ayub's victory, and the wild clutching at a comforting thought that the Radical programme had not yet been fully carried out inasmuch as there was still "a considerable Anglo-Indian force" in Ayub's neighbourhood. Then there was a little revival of the Radical spirit, in the order to General Hume, coute que coute, to "concentrate on Quetta" and run from Pishin; this must have occurred in some interval when Bob Acres had Sir Lucius O'Trigger with him to keep him up to the mark; and this phase lasted long enough to mislead poor Lord Hartington in his replies to Colonel Stanley and Mr. Stanhope—and also to mislead the chief organs of the Ministry in London, who have been lustily declaring that we are perfectly indifferent to Ayub's success. Lastly comes the utter collapse of all Radical theories, in the Times telegrams of to-day, which are obviously inspired, although dated from Lahore. Bob Acres's valour has oozed out at the tips of his fingers. Under what terrible pressure of circumstances Lord Ripon has at last, after so many twists and turns, finally abandoned the Midlothian standard, we know not, but the fact remains that Mr. Gladstone's Viceroy is at the present moment hurrying British troops up from Quetta to Pishin. He has apparently thrown to the winds the "indifference theory," which has been the shibboleth of the present Ministry; possibly last night's speech of Lord Hartington, on which we have already commented with approval, indicated the first turn of the switch for the very sharp curve that is now being made by the Viceroy. We give these new and startling telegrams. It will be observed that we hear no more about "concentrating at Quetta;" on the contrary, the careful reader will note that the only doubt in Lord Ripon's mind appears to have been, whether two regiments would suffice as a reinforcement for Pishin—as who should say that a run from Pishin had never been as much as thought of! All this must be very amusing to foreigners; it would be amusing to us if we were not Englishmen. The telegrams are:—

LAHORE, AUGUST 1.—The Government have prepared for the instant despatch of a brigade beyond Quetta in the event of complications at Khojak and Pishin, though admitting that these are extremely improbable. It is thought, meanwhile, that to strengthen these outposts to the extent of two regiments outside their usual strength would suffice.

2.7 P.M.—Ayub occupied Kandahar on the 30th. A statement has reached Quetta that Shams-ud-din was captured. No action is reported at Kandahar. One wing and headquarters of the 63rd and 9th Bombay Infantry respectively left Quetta for Pishin on Saturday. Part of the 9th Bengal Cavalry follows from Kishdih Khan.

We learn from the Broad Arrow that the difficulties which stood in the way of those civilians who took part in the Afghan war receiving the decorations which are to be issued have now been overcome. The war medal with Cabul clasp will be given to Sir Lepel Griffin and those members of his staff who were at Cabul during our occupation of Afghanistan. All politicals who were on service with the Cabul Field Force, Khyber line, and Kuram Valley columns, and Southern Afghan forces will receive the war medal.

HERE is a good illustration of the respect for the British power and name that has been inspired in the tribes on our Afghan frontier by the measures of the present Government. We quote the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, telegraphing on July 31:—

"It is believed that the recent attack on a picquet of the 19th Bengal Lancers at Peshawur was made by the Malik-din-Khel section of the Afridi tribes under the leadership of one of the most notorious freebooters of the frontier. The raid is said to be due to a desire to avenge the loss the Bassi Khel, their near friends, sustained when they attacked a convoy on the Kohat road near Matunni last year. The affair was well planned, the picquet being taken by surprise, although they were within the cantonment limits, and all except one man being put hors de combat by a single volley. The raiders carried off four Snider carbines. It is to be hoped that prompt measures will be taken to punish the offenders."

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times, telegraphing on July 31, says of the loan:—

"The new loan of three crores of rupees has proved even a greater success than was anticipated. The tenders opened on Monday amounted to over ten crores, and the loan was issued at an average rate of 105 rupees 3 annas, the lowest accepted tenders being 104 rupees 12 annas. The Government has made a clear profit of over 15 lakhs. The readiness with which capitalists now come forward to lend money to the Indian Government at 4 per cent. gives a full refutation to the theories of those alarmists who have lately been predicting the national bankruptcy of India."

A REUTER'S telegram from Calcutta, dated August 1, says:—

"A rumour has been current here that a large portion of the new loan, amounting to a crore of rupees, has not been taken up in consequence of worthless cheques being tendered with applications. This report is declared to be absolutely unfounded, and it is added that everything in connection with the loan is progressing smoothly."

WITH reference to the general policy of the loan, the following letter to the Times will be read with interest:—

"Sir,—Your correspondent 'S. B. B.' who appears to be so well informed about Indian exchanges, should make sure of his figures and not make statements that can be so readily refuted. He gives the excess value of exports of merchandise from India over imports to India as annually £24,000,000 sterling; and, to show that he means sterling, he goes on to say that the £24,000,000 sterling must be remitted to India to make up the balance of trade. I have the last number of the accounts relating to the trade of British India—published by the Governor General in Council at Calcutta—before me, and it gives the figures as follows:—Excess exports, 1878-79, Rs.24,32,75,000; 1879-80, Rs.27,43,09,000; 1880-81, Rs.24,23,90,000; of an average of 25½ crores of rupees, and this at the average rate at which Council bills have been allotted for 1878-81—say 1s. 8d.—gives the excess value of the exports over the imports as a little over £21,000,000 sterling, which is the amount that has to be returned to India, and, not as 'S. B. B.' puts it, £24,000,000 sterling. The last Budget of the Indian Government stated that they required to draw on India for the equivalent of £17,200,000; to this add drawn by the Secretary of State for interest on Rupee paper, held at London, and railway bills sold by the Indian companies—say £1,000,000—£18,200,000. There is only a balance of about three millions sterling to be filled up by specie, gold, and silver, and to cover family remittances and profits, which are alone estimated to exceed £3,000,000 per annum. So that it virtually comes to this, that if the Government sell the equivalent of £17,200,000 of Council bills, as budgeted for 1880-81, there is not room for the import into India of a single ounce of silver or of gold. The demand in India for silver and gold is, however, steady, and thus it is clear that the Government cannot dispose of the amount of Council bills they state in their Budget they intend to offer. The above facts are, of course, known to the officials of the India-office, and it requires an official mind to comprehend why the Government should try to sell so largely on India—thus depressing exchanges to their own cost—the more so when they state that a portion of the money is to go towards paying off sterling debt, which really costs them less annually than the rupee loans they are raising in India. If 'S. B. B.' means to say that if the Government are contented to sell whatever amounts the public will buy—not caring whether they sell the full amount in the financial year or not—exchange must advance, he would be correct; but, if the Government have already made up their minds that they will be satisfied if they can draw for the equivalent of, say, 15¼ millions sterling during this financial year (that being the average of their sales during the years 1878-81) why do they not at once say so and thus secure a better rate for their bills?—B. K. R."

OUR readers will remember that, in our leading columns three weeks ago, we indignantly combated the imputations that had been made, by some foolish horror-mongers in Parliament, on the gaol administration of Bengal. We have not had to wait long for our justification from India. The Times correspondent telegraphs from Calcutta, under date of July 31:—

"The agitation lately started at home regarding the gaol mortality in Bengal has caused some feeling of indignation here. As a matter of fact, Bengal contrasts in this respect very favourably with the other Provinces, and the sensational questions asked in the House of Commons were all founded upon imperfect information. The average percentage of the gaol mortality for the two years 1878 and 1879 in various Provinces was as follows, omitting fractions:—Bombay, 11; the Punjab, 10; the Central Provinces, 9; Madras, 9; Bengal, 8. Last year the Bengal rate had fallen to 6 per cent., and for the first six months of the current year it has been little over 4 per cent. per annum. That the gaol mortality is very high throughout India is, unfortunately, too true; but it is clearly unfair to select Bengal for special attack when, in spite of its great natural disadvantages, it steadily shows a lower death-rate than the four other Provinces, and when, as appears from the Lieutenant Governor's recently-published minute on the subject, strenuous steps are being taken to further reduce the already decreasing unhealthiness of the provincial gaols."

WE are sorry to observe from the Times telegram from Calcutta of July 31 that some anxiety continues to be felt about harvest prospects in Mysor. The western or hilly districts have had a good rainfall; those in the east little or none. A good fall within the next fortnight may yet save the crops. Meanwhile, the local Government are wisely preparing for the worst.

THE Rangoon correspondent of the Times telegraphs under date July 30:—

"Trade with Upper Burma is disorganised. Shipped cotton is being removed from the steamer by the monopolists. Firms are closing their Mandalay branches. The Chamber of Commerce has complained to the Indian Government. Denegri, one of the Frenchmen mentioned last week as having been imprisoned at Mandalay, was cruelly used."

WE learn from the Times telegram that two orders have been published by the Government giving a list of the stores which may be purchased in India instead of being ordered through the India-office. The first relates to some articles of trifling value for office use, such as rulers and red tape; the second deals with a supply of Himalayan beer for the troops. Lord Ripon's concession in regard to red tape is a timely and appropriate one.

THE Pioneer, in announcing that the Press Commissioner-ship is to be transferred from the Foreign to the Home Office, states that the work of the department will henceforth "be done less obtrusively." The present régime in India seems to be one of euphemisms.

LAST week we called attention to the wide field opening up in India for the employment of the electric light; we now learn that a company has already been formed for the occupation of this field. It was found in the office of the Bombay Gazette that, in addition to the other numerous advantages of this mode of lighting its coolness alone, in such a climate, was sufficient to make its employment an incalculable boon to all those who have to work at night. We confidently predict a great success for the new company.

THE Gazette of India of last week contains a Government resolution (summarised in the Calcutta correspondence of the Times) carrying into effect a recommendation of the Committee on Military Finance which sat in England in consequence of last year's blunder in the Budget. The principal reform consists in the Military Accountant General being made a deputy secretary in the Military Department and completely subordinated in all financial matters to the Controller General of Accounts.

WITH reference to the letter of the Indian Medical Service Defence Committee, on which we commented last week, the United Service Gazette has the following:—

"The Indian Medical Service Defence Committee have published a long letter to the Marquis of Hartington pointing out where they consider they have been misunderstood and their 'accuracy most unjustly impugned.' The committee acknowledge that in almost every instance their grievances have been practically acknowledged by measures being taking for their removal, but they are still sore at the repudiation of their inferences that the Indian Medical Service will in future be practically subordinated to the Army Medical Department. They quote facts in support of this, the most telling being that, out of seven principal medical officers in the second Afghan campaign, only one was an Indian officer—a proportion certainly not in accordance with the respective strength of the two services. It appears, too, that the names of the Indian medical officers mentioned in despatches were originally suppressed, it is said, by an oversight, and that out of seven C.B.'s the Army Medical Department monopolised six. The actual facts as to inequality of pay between the two services, and the effect on promotion by the suppression of certain administrative appointments, are also insisted on. But it is satisfactory to learn that, while some further modifications on these points are prayed for, the mild species of Boycotting with which the Indian Medical Service was threatened by the universities and examining bodies is now withdrawn. It is admitted that the civil branch has been undoubtedly improved, although the military branch has been seriously depreciated. The latter we cannot but think inevitable in amalgamating the two services, and so doing away with the absurd waste of a dual administration in each of the three Presidencies. It was a question of the public good which could be put off no longer, nor do we think that the high character of the service will be allowed to be lowered in future by those who have most interest in its maintenance, even if the Government cannot at present concede all that the committee urge."

WE are glad to observe from the Indian Mirror that at last a suitable abode is to be provided for the Viceroy of India at Simla. It would have been a matter for regret if advantage had not been taken of the reign of a Liberal Viceroy for this purpose; for if any Conservative Viceroy had taken the business in hand Mr. Gladstone and the Radical Press would have overwhelmed him with obloquy. The Indian Mirror says:—

"There are some indications that the new palace for the Viceroy at Simla is at last about to be commenced. Preliminary preparations, in the shape of grants of petty contracts for the supply of material, &c., required in the construction of the building, are being given out by the executive engineer in charge."

REGARDING Babu Nishkanta Chatterji's letter from Zurich on Russia's designs on India, the Delhi Gazette says:—

"Altogether Mr. Chatterji's contribution seems a truthful one and ought to be a valuable aid to his countrymen in the way of enabling them to appreciate the relative advantages of English and Russian rule. That a Bengali, and a Brahmin of all men in the world, should travel so far as St. Petersburg, and have the opportunity of writing such a letter, is a proof of what free institutions can do in the way of awakening energy even in India."

A TELEGRAM from the Berlin correspondent of the Morning Post, dated July 25, states, on the authority of the Novoe Vremya, that Lord Granville has instructed the British Embassy at St. Petersburg to inquire into the reports which have been circulated as to the Russians having constructed blockhouses along the Merv frontier.

THE Army and Navy Gazette gives an interesting account of an investigation recently set on foot in Russia as to the possibility of constructing a fleet that should be able to meet the English fleet on equal terms. The Gazette says:—

"In December last an article in the Army and Navy Magazine, by Mr. Charles Marvin, entitled 'Russia's Decadence as a Naval Power,' provoked a great sensation in Russia, and led to a discussion which resulted, late in the month, in an official overhauling of Russia's naval policy. At the close of this the Admiralty was taken to task for allowing Russia to lose her place as a first-rate naval Power, and an inquiry was made as to the cost required for her to recover her position. The Admiralty thereupon caused a project to be drawn up, in which it was recommended that ninety-five vessels should be built—namely, nineteen first-class ironclads, four second-class ones, sixteen frigates and cruisers, fifteen gun-boats, six transports, five despatch-boats, ten steam-cutters, three schooners, and seventeen torpedo-boats. In framing a calculation as to the time that it would take to construct these vessels with Russia's limited resources the projector found that the whole of the Russian dockyards and private engineering establishments could not complete the entire ninety-five in less than twenty years. Such a statement naturally did not satisfy the wishes of the Imperial Council, which returned the project, with the remark that it wanted something practical and definite for the present year, and not for such a distant period as 1902. The Admiralty has taken this snub very quietly, and is now trying to work out a more practical scheme. In the meanwhile, the project possesses value of its own, as showing what the Russian Admiralty thinks would be required in order to make the Russian fleet as powerful as that of England."

THE current number of the Academy contains an interesting and appreciative review of Mr. Edwin Arnold's "Indian Poetry" from the pen of Mr. W. W. Hunter, C.I.E. In a detailed examination of Mr. Arnold's spirited and sympathetic rendering of the "Gitagovinda," and a more general notice of the other poems now given to the public, Mr. Hunter has worthily illustrated a work of true genius that marks an era in the history of the interpretation of Eastern thought and imagination to Western readers. In Mr. Arnold's poems, as his reviewer well puts it, "the heart of India speaks to the heart of Europe in song."

WE fear that poor Sir George Campbell finds his seat at Kirkaldy not so comfortable as his old throne at Beldere. We learn that a letter was received yesterday by the Kirkaldy Liberal Association from Sir George Campbell in reply to an inquiry regarding his vote in favour of Lord E. Fitzmaurice's amendment on the Irish Land Bill. Sir George says that through the discussion on the bill he had expressed the opinion that the case of the large tenants who came in recently on purely contract tenure should be kept apart from that of the mass of small tenants, who in some sort represent the people of Ireland. He thought the amendment inopportune, but it would have seemed cowardly in him, whose opinion was in favour of such distinction, not to support it.

IN the course of the Transvaal debate the other day, Mr. Rathbone defended the Government policy on the ground that it showed we—meaning, presumably, the Radicals of England—are "determined to control our Proconsuls." But a better plan seems to be to send unruly Proconsuls to Kirkaldy. Sir George will perhaps now learn that a Radical caucus can be more despotic than even a Lieutenant Governor of Bengal.

WE heartily join the United Service Gazette in the following protest on behalf of the distinguished English military explorers who have endeavoured to penetrate to Merv, and have only been prevented from doing so by their feelings of loyalty and discipline:—

"In the name of the officers enumerated below we protest against the misleading remarks conveyed in an article on 'English Exploration of Merv' in the Scotsman of July 19. The statement we call attention to is as follows:—'Merv for many years past has been as unapproachable as the south pole. Few have sought to go there, and the enterprising military men who have been willing to risk their lives in the attempt have met with insuperable difficulties, and have turned back again disconsolate, but whole skinned. Where military ardour has failed the cool-headed address and determination of the 'special correspondent' has succeeded, as the columns of the Daily News are witnesses.' On referring to Marvin's 'Merv, the Queen of the World,' where an exhaustive account of all the Turcoman travellers is given, we find the following reasons assigned for the failure of the military explorers preceding O'Donovan to attain the Tekke capital:—1873. General Valentine Baker. Peremptorily refused permission to visit Merv by Kooshoot Khan. 1874. Major Napier (Government agent). Instructions from the Government not to approach Merv. 1875. General C. M. McGregor and Major Burnaby. Both stopped and ordered home when riding towards Merv. 1878. Major Butler, stopped and ordered home. 1879. Major Napier (Government agent), instructions not to visit Merv. We may add to this the names of Col. Stewart and Capt. Gill, ordered home a few weeks ago, when the Government heard they were on the Persian border. In this manner, in every instance save one, there was no 'failure of military ardour;' the explorers were simply checked at the moment of success, and ordered home against their will. It is bad enough that they should have experienced this treatment from the State without having slurs cast against them by the Scotsman."

JUST as we were going to press we received the following:—

"FROM VICEROY, AUG. 2.—Ayub Khan entered Kandahar on the 30th. His infantry and guns are in the citadel, his cavalry in cantonment. From Chaman a report says that all is quiet within and about our frontier. General Mir Ahmad has returned to India on a fresh mission from the Ameer. He must have left Cabul before news arrived of Ayub's success."

THE Times of India gives the following obituary of the week ending July 12:—Hon. K. V. Ranganada Shastriyar; Mr. Comyn, C.S.; Mr. J. E. Edwards, barrister at law.

LETHBRIDGE'S "HISTORY OF INDIA."

THE Indian Spectator of Bombay quotes, with approval, the opinion of its London namesake on a handbook of "The History of India" by the late Press Commissioner. The Bombay paper says:—"The following appreciative notice by the London Spectator of Mr. Lethbridge's well-known 'Handbook of Indian History' will be read with interest:—'Mr. Lethbridge's compilation will make an admirable class-book, and it is to be hoped that English schoolmasters will not fail to utilise one of the books best fitted to dispel a disgraceful ignorance of India, that is only now beginning to be remedied. Mr. Lethbridge commences with a clear account of the social and political condition of India under British rule. In this section its physical conformation, racial and linguistic character, literature and religion, are concisely and adequately treated. The history proper succeeds, and is carried from the period of the non-Aryan population down to the present day. Of course the compiler does not pretend to exhaust his subject within the modest limits to which he is restricted; but what he aims at doing he has done well. His careful explanation of Brahminism and Buddhism appears to us extremely praiseworthy, and the account of the Mahomedan invasion and Mogul empire will come to the English schoolboy fresh as a new story of adventure. A good index makes the book useful for reference.'

THE WEARING OF DECORATIONS.

THE suggestions recently made in one of the Service journals, that the miniatures, or at least the ribbons, of all decorations conferred by the Queen for war services should be worn on evening dress has met with general approval. The Globe heads its article on the subject, "Why Not?" and it has been pointed out that our insular fashion on this point—like our shame at appearing in uniform except when we are compelled to—is a relic of the old time when soldiering was unpopular and the army hated in this freedom-loving country. The following are some of the letters that have appeared in the Army and Navy Gazette on the subject:—

"SIR,—I am glad to see a paragraph in the Army and Navy Gazette of July 16 recommending that all retired officers who possess decorations for war services should wear the ribbon on their evening-dress coat. A command from her Gracious Majesty the Queen on this subject would, I feel sure, be loyally received. If I mistake not, the Prince of Wales expressed a wish that officers attending the dinner given some months ago to Sir Frederick Roberts at the United Service Club should wear their miniature medals on their evening dress, which was done. I recollect also, some years ago, attending the Prefect's ball at Pau, where English officers, though in plain clothes, all wore their miniature decorations, amongst others the present general officer commanding in Ireland. Why, therefore, should not we do so in our own country?—I am, &c., "A RETIRED OFFICER."

"SIR,—Permit me most fully to endorse the remarks in the last issue of your valuable journal on the subject of distinctions being borne on visiting cards. The mere announcement of military rank conveys little real information to most civilians, by whom the difference between a captain and a colonel, for instance, is generally neither known nor understood. Many years ago, in a neighbourhood where I am well known, I was, as a captain, called, as often as not, 'major' or 'colonel.' Now, as a colonel, many very old friends often call me 'captain.' I doubt if they have the least idea which rank is the superior. Moreover, as you justly observe, in these days a colonel may belong to the regular army (combatant or non-combatant branches, including, of course, the Indian forces) or he may be a successful, and of course, most estimable, alderman, and not improbably mayor, of his native country town; while, as regards the distinctions of the various Orders of the Bath, St. Michael, St. George, &c., hardly one civilian in ten knows what they mean, still less any of the honour and advantages they are supposed to carry with them. A companion of the Bath, by a statute of the Order, takes precedence of all esquires; but of this, as far as I can judge, civilians are entirely ignorant, and I am very sure that neither my wife nor I have ever gone in to dinner one place the sooner for my possessing a pretty bauble, which I cannot wear (expect in uniform, which I am not likely ever to put on again), and the possession of which, proud as I may be of it, I am unable, according to existing usage, to signify or indicate in any way whatever that I know of. I may add that, in my own case, I find the authorities at the War-office, with their accustomed courtesy, particularly careful, in addressing letters to me, to omit the coveted initials, 'C.B.'"

"SIR,—I was glad to see your suggestion on the 16th inst., that officers should wear the ribbons of their decorations in mufti. It is certainly no compliment to her Majesty not to do so. An alternative suggestion was proposed in a letter to the Morning Post a short time ago (June 15), advocating the wearing of mess-uniform by all officers, whether on the Active or Retired List, in evening dress, after the manner of the members of a hunt appearing in 'pink.' The wish of the Queen on the subject would settle the matter at once."—I am, &c., "A."

"SIR,—Will you kindly give me your views on the following subject? I hold the Crimean, Turkish, and Indian (North West Frontier) medal for 1850-51, under Lord Clyde (then Sir C. Campbell). I am rather proud of my medals, having won them at the cost of my blood. I was driven from the army by the doing away of purchase. I find myself swamped by majors and colonels who never saw a shot fired, and the only means of trying to assert my status, and to show I have seen service, is by wearing those medals (in miniature) in evening dress. This, I am told, is held to be snobbish by the club men,—i.e., non active service swells. Is it so?—I am, &c.,

"MEDAL."

[We consider the present system by which officers suppress their decorations when in mufti a most objectionable one. It is only custom which causes an officer to put his medals, &c., away with his uniform, and it is a custom which we hope will shortly die out. An officer, it seems to us, ought to be proud of the honours conferred upon him by his Sovereign, and if only the senior officers would set the example of wearing miniatures, or at any rate ribbons, juniors would soon follow suit.—ED. A. and N. G.]

PROFESSOR NISHIKANTA CHATTERJEE OF ST PETERSBURG ON RUSSIA'S DESIGNS AGAINST INDIA.

THE following is an extract from the very remarkable communication, to which we have already alluded in these columns, addressed to the Tribune, a native Lahore paper, by the Bengali gentleman who was recently professor of Sanskrit in the Imperial University of St. Petersburg:—

"From what I have hitherto read it is easy to see that you perfectly share in the views of Mr. Gladstone and his party about Russia's designs on India. That is to say, you are of opinion that Russia's designs are really not so bad as they were construed to be by the late Earl of Beaconsfield and the ex-Viceroy, Lord Lytton. You are far more optimistic than they, and seem to put a more charitable construction on Russia's professions of friendship and fidelity. Unfortunately, I have had occasions never offered to foreigners to get some insight into Russian politics and Russian diplomacy, and am unable to go in with you and the Liberal Ministry on this subject. My knowledge and experience compel me to do justice to Lord Beaconsfield and his party, and to say that even their worst suspicions were only too reasonable. I think that the noble lords were only too right in all that they thought or suspected about Russia's designs and intrigues to endanger the safety of the British Indian Empire. I repeat that I have had occasions which are never offered to any foreigner, not to say any Englishman, to know what the high and even the highest circles in Russia think on the subject, and I cannot think otherwise than I do. And I have known also to some extent what Russian diplomacy means. I should hardly hesitate to assert most positively that the greatest Russian diplomatist must undoubtedly be also the greatest rascal on the face of the globe, the most consummate rogue brought up on the principles of the Machiavellian 'prince,' whose words are meant never to express, but always to conceal, his thoughts (attributed also to Talleyrand). Had the entire Cabul correspondence been found—had Yakub Khan revealed all the secrets he is said to be in possession of, even the most optimistic Russophile of Mr. Gladstone's party would have seen that the darkest suspicions of their antagonists about Russian intrigues and diplomatic wiles were but too legitimate and justified, that Russia's avowed professions of peace and amity were very much like those of the saintly tiger in the Hitopadesa, who had not only repented of his former wicked ways, of his previous dinners on numberless cows and brahmans, but was now actually living only on milk and vegetables, bathing daily in the holy Ganga, reciting the Vedas, and even giving alms of golden bracelets!

THE INDIAN FACTORY ACT.

AN occasional correspondent of the Manchester Courier writes as follows on the above subject:—"The baleful effect of the want of continuity in the policy of the Home Government towards India has again found fatal exemplification in the domestic legislation which has just been sanctioned by the Viceroy. The Factory Act, which had received the sanction of the Home Government, backed by the unanimous vote of the House of Lords and the endorsement of the late Governor General, Lord Lytton, has been so far mutilated in its passage to the statute book as to bear little resemblance to its former self. A measure, which had its origin in native necessities, and framed by a native gentleman, the Hon. Sorabjee Shaporjee Benglee, has been stifled in its birth. The Factory Act which has been substituted is one in name only, purporting, indeed, to effect the same object, but in its effects barring the way to the amelioration of the condition of the women working in those houses of bondage, the cotton mills of India. The Factory Act of the late Viceroy was to all intents and purposes a Ten Hours' Act, similar to the English Factory Act. Its object was to protect the women and children employed in Indian mills from the effects of overwork. It provided that the mills in India, so far as they were worked by women and children, were to be worked from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. for six days out of seven, and whilst the Act forbore to stipulate for the observance of the Christian Sabbath, so long as the proportionate number of holidays were secured to the enervated factory workers, it did not interfere further in its definiteness. The other main provisions of the bill were that no females were to work more than ten hours per day, and no young person more than nine hours, allowing in each case one hour for meals, and no child under eight years was to work at all. Certifying surgeons were to be appointed, a register kept, certificates were to be given to all persons employed under its provisions, and all dangerous machinery was to be guarded. Penalties were attached to any violations of its provisions, and power was reserved to the Governor General in Council to exempt from the operation of the Act certain mills where adult male labour alone was employed. Such was the Factory Act which obtained the sanction of Earl Lytton and would have regulated the working of the mills in India but for the exigencies of home politics. In the enactment, however, which has finally become law, no provision is made for the protection of women and young persons. Children alone, under seven years of age, are prohibited from working in factories; but children from over seven years and under twelve years are allowed to work nine hours per day. The provisions for inspection are retained as in the bill of Earl Lytton, but the vital parts are struck out. Women and young persons above the age of twelve years may, therefore, be employed in the mills of India from sunrise to sunset throughout the entire year, native holidays alone excepted. These fearfully long hours, as is well known, will know no cessation but for about twenty minutes during the middle of the day for the midday meal. And when it is further known that these dreadful houses of bondage are worked the longest time when the people employed are the least capable of bearing it some idea may be had of the terrible condition of the women and young persons employed. During the hot season the period of enforced labour is thirteen and a-half hours per day, and during the cooler season about eleven hours. But it is apparent that, whereas the mills in Bombay are in some instances a considerable distance from the bungalows of the workers—some two or even more miles—the practical outcome of the present system of working the mills in India is that the degraded workers in these modern pandemoniums leave their homes in the dark of the morning and return in the night, the working hours being illuminated by a burning sun upon the emaciated, and drooping, and jaded operatives. That such a condition of things should be perpetuated under the new Act of the Indian Government is indeed a marvel, but its cause is not far to seek. Indian officials, English as well as Parsee, are largely interested in Indian mills. It cannot be, however, due to the exigencies of their condition as shareholders, but to their desire for large dividends. Those earned by these mills would delight the English millowner, who loyally submits to judicious factory legislation. That the Viceroy has yielded to the clamour of the powerful factory interest in Bombay is only too certain. It has long been in existence, but it is not the less discreditable. That the Act, as just passed, will long remain unrepealed is inconceivable, if any sense of shame remains to the Indian Government. It is a scandal to the country and a reproach to the English name. The success which has attended factory legislation in England, the home of the modern factory system, demands its faithful reproduction in India, where climatic conditions of working are far more unfavourable than at home; and imperial policy and humane considerations alike suggest the expediency of the same laws for the regulation of factories in England and India."

INDIAN TEA.

THE following letter has been addressed to the editor of the Times:—"Sir,—Apropos of the remarks on the subject of Indian tea in your leader of to-day, it may interest your readers to learn that since 1860, when the imports of Indian tea first reached 1,000,000lb. the growth of the trade has been rapid and continuous. At the end of the first decade in 1870 the quantity imported was 13,000,000lb., while last year, at the close of the second decade, the imports were 45,000,000lb., of the estimated value of £3,000,000. The area of land now under plant is over 200,000 acres, representing an investment of British capital to the extent of £15,000,000, and giving employment to a population of over a quarter of a million souls. The crop of tea this year is not likely to be less than 50,000,000lb. India, as you remarked, can grow 'far better tea' than China can, and as the public learn this fact they will not be content with inferior sorts, even when blended with Indian, but will insist on having pure Indian tea. The tea plant, as you are aware, is acknowledged to be of Indian origin, and is indigenous to Upper Assam, from whence in bygone ages it must have been introduced into China.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, ERNEST TYE, Secretary. Indian Tea Districts Association, St. Mary's-chambers, St. Mary-axe, July 27."

"SIR,—In your leader on the 27th inst. you refer to the production of Indian tea, and allude to the damage done to the crops by the red spider. As brokers, we are often asked for information on the subject, and after careful inquiry have come to the conclusion that the injury to the crop from this cause has probably been very much overrated. It may, perhaps, be satisfactory to your readers to learn that the new season's importations from India are so far generally of excellent quality, and that the crop promises to be a good one, both in this respect and as regards the yield. The secretary of the Indian Tea Districts Association alluded in the Times of to-day to the development of the industry. The deliveries will soon amount to 50,000,000lb. per annum, and there can be little doubt, considering the growing and high estimation in which Indian teas are held by the buyers throughout the country, that a very much larger quantity, if the standard of quality be high, would rapidly find its way into consumption. Apart from our export trade, the delivery of China tea is about 116,000,000lb. annually. It is fully expected that India will supply us this year with one-third of our total requirements. For many years past Indian teas were only used for the purpose of blending with China, but it is now known that some of the largest retailers are selling them pure, with advantage to their trade, their customers disliking the admixture.—We are, Sir, yours faithfully,—WM. JAS. AND HY. THOMESON—38, Mincing-lane, July 29."

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

TURKISH LIFE IN WAR TIME.*

THIS book is useful as a collection of "materials for history." It gives, in the form of letters or occasional notes—apparently intended for publication in an American paper—the impressions of an intelligent and observant American resident during the troubled times of the Bulgarian insurrection, the Servian campaign, and the Russo-Turkish war. Several points of great interest are incidentally brought out—e.g., the folly and injustice of the agitation in England that was stirred up by Mr. Gladstone's Bulgarian fanaticism; the skill of the Russian diplomacy throughout, rivalled by its absolute insincerity; and accentuated by the utter feebleness of all English action, which was paralysed by the "Bulgarian atrocity" craze, and by the hatred of the English Radicals for the leaders of the Conservative party then in power. We have heard and read similar testimony, usque ad nauseam, but the authors are generally accused of being demented Tories; here we get it repeated by an author who is presumably a Republican, and whose sympathies are very certainly neither with Turks nor with Tories. But he is an honest and intelligent observer, whose eyes are not blinded by partisanship, and who writes the truth as it appears to him.

HORSE BREEDING.*

MR. LUPTON has brought out an instructive and suggestive little book, which, under the somewhat vague title of "The Horse: As He Was, As He Is, and As He Ought to Be," gives a very good history of horse breeding in England from the earliest times, and shows wherein the system followed here of late is a radically defective one. The author wishes to see some of the care and pains that are now expended on the excessive production of thoroughbreds diverted to the general utility horse; and he thinks that, with this view, it would be well if we went in more strongly for trotting-matches, as the Americans do.

* "The Horse: As He Was, As He Is, and As He Ought to Be." By J. I. LUPTON, F.R.C.V.S. London: Wm. H. Allen and Co. 1881.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MOHAMMEDAN FANATICISM.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In the present excited state of Mohammedan feeling throughout the world, at Tunis, Salonica, Constantinople, and in Central Asia, it is necessary to adopt a definite policy, not only towards the Afghans, but for the purpose of keeping in good order the 40 millions of Mohammedans in India. Since the death of Sir Herbert Edwardes we have had no statesman who has understood how to manage Mohammedans; that great man succeeded in raising an army of them to fight our battles at a time when we were in sore distress. He did not try to bribe them with rupees; he appealed to their love of independence, and knew how they abhorred the idea of being slaves of the Sikhs. We must imitate Herbert Edwardes' statesmanship, his mode of ruling men. The Afghans are passionately fond of independence, and they greatly fear that the Russians, whom they regard as Gog Magog, will enslave them. Let us appeal to this fear; let us declare our fixed purpose to defend them against Russia with the whole power of the British Empire; let the Prime Minister state in Parliament that if the Russians cross the Oxus east of Khojasahl such a movement will be an act of enmity towards us. The Afghans then, in spite of all the provocations we have given them, will become our friends whether Abdul Rahman or Ayub Khan or Yakub Khan be the Ameer. Mohammedans are openly declaring their suspicions of the designs of the French at Tunis, of the Austrians in Macedonia, and of the Russians at Constantinople. None of these nations hold to the faith of Abraham, whom all Mohammedans revere. Let them understand that the English religion is a pure one, which worships God Almighty and God only.—Your obedient servant,

July 29.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

THE NATIVE PRESS ON RUSSIAN INFLUENCE IN AFGHANISTAN.

ACCORDING to Sir Charles Dilke, Lord Dufferin, the British Ambassador at St. Petersburg, was informed on February 7 last that "General Kaufmann had given the ladies of Abdul Rahman's family an escort to the frontier" on their way to Cabul. It would seem as if Sir Charles Dilke was not aware of the previous communications between Cabul and Tashkend, although General Kaufmann's good offices were extended first to the Ameer's son and next to the ladies of the Ameer's family. It is deserving of note that in the few communications which were exchanged between the Ameer and the Viceroy, Abdul Rahman did not think fit to mention for the information of the Government of India that he was arranging or had arranged for bringing down the ladies of his family from Russian territory to Cabul. It is also a suspicious circumstance that, while settling for the return of his family, the Ameer did not suggest that his son and his own ladies might have been placed under the same escort. The motive of these two separate journeys was merely to gain time to concert some plans, which cannot be supposed to bode well to British interests in the East. It has long been our suspicion that the present Ameer, having been protected by Russia during his exile, is likely to be under the influence of a strong bias towards that Power. That he will hereafter be found to have been playing a double game, but in Russian interests, is our firm opinion, amounting to a conviction.—Indian Mirror.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

SIMLA HOUSES.—The Simla Building Committee have recommended the construction, for the accommodation of clerks whose salaries do not exceed Rs.200 per mensem, of thirty cottages, each cottage to contain four rooms and two bath rooms.—Englishman.

A WORKING RAJA.—The Raja of Bijnee has set a good example. He has had his sitting room connected with his office by a telephone. The result is said to be eminently successful, and will, no doubt, attract the attention of many other native notables.—Indian Daily News.

SALVAGE.—Two pilots at Rangoon, named M'Gregor and Simmonds, chartered the steam tug Salween, and visited the wreck of the Nieuw Diepe, and managed to secure a large quantity of property.—Ibid.

SUNSTROKE.—The death is reported at Jubbulpore of Lieut. Williams, of the 39th Foot. He succumbed to the effects of sunstroke, and, though only twenty-three years of age, was both a very promising officer and very popular in his regiment.—Indian Daily News.

CAPT. ANDERSON.—Capt. A. D. Anderson, brigade major to the inspector general of artillery, rejoins his appointment at Simla, from leave, about the 25th July.—Civil and Military Gazette.

THE MERGUI ARCHIPELAGO.—The tin and lead mines of the Mergui Archipelago are again attracting attention. Mr. Hollman, of the late firm of Melosch, Hollman, and Co., at Moulmein, is about to visit the archipelago on a prospecting tour.—Indian Daily News.

THE ROBBERY AT THE LAHORE TREASURY.—Of the Rs.35,000 stolen from the Fort Treasury at Lahore only Rs.9,000 have been recovered. No less than twenty-five sepoy concerned in the matter will be placed upon their trial.—Ibid.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT IN INDIA.—The electric light is gradually forcing its way into more general use in India. Another cotton mill, one owned by Messrs. Mackinnon, Mackenzie, and Co., at Garden Reach, Calcutta, has been lighted by this means. The Indian Daily News thus describes the appearance of the mill on the first night the electric light was at work:—"The lights were lit at dusk, and continued burning for some time with marked steadiness and great success. The light in the rooms is ample for all the different minute manipulations of the blowing, cording, spinning, winding, reeling, packing, baling, and mixing rooms. The light in these latter rooms was specially admirable, as the reflection from the white cotton and yarn aided the light, and the least specks in the cotton could be detected. The arrangement of the light is specially interesting in this mill, and shows the practical experience of the proprietors and the ingenuity of the electricians. A twenty-light machine is driven from the workshop engine, and a similar twenty-light machine is driven from the main engine shaftings; some of the lights of each machine are placed in each room throughout the three stories of the mill. By this means, if there is an accident to one of the machines or engines, there will still be sufficient light in the rooms for ordinary purposes, and the lights of one machine would serve for repairing the accident to the other, or either engine, during the night. The machines revolve at a speed of 1,200 revolutions to the minute, and the power required for the thirty-six lights is only about twenty-eight indicated h.p. Each light represents the power of about forty gas jets, or 500 standard candles; the thirty-six lights in the mill represent, therefore, the power of about 18,000 candles, and the reflection from the white walls and cotton manufacture prevents any of the light being lost. Considerable reductions have taken place in the prices of the candles, and they are half the price they were formerly; each light of about 500 candle power costs now, inclusive of fuel and attendance, less than two annas per hour. Now, at any rate, the electric light is no expensive luxury. The light is extremely mild and pleasant in the opaline globes; the globes are hermetically closed, and consequently danger from fire is reduced to a minimum, and the health and comfort of the workmen considerably profited."—Bombay Gazette.

THE PUNJAB LOTTERIES.—We commend the following to the notice of Sir Robert Egerton and Sir George Campbell:—"Massachusetts newspapers are to be prohibited from publishing marriage notices in future, because marriage is a lottery." We shall probably soon hear that, by order of the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab, marriage has been abolished in that virtuous province.—Indian Mirror.

A DELHI MISSIONARY COLLEGE.—We are glad to hear that a Sikh sirdar has offered Rs.25,000 for an endowment whose interest is to be devoted to scholarships should a missionary college be revived at Lahore. The abolition of the Delhi Government College is about to be followed by the happiest results in that city, where the Cambridge Mission Staff, composed of six graduates of that university, are feeling their way to the establishment of a complete college. At Lahore also there are numerous missionaries distinguished for their literary attainments, and if, unmindful of the various societies to which they belong, they would co-operate in a revived Lahore Missionary College, another step towards the fulfilment of the Educational Despatch of 1854 would be taken and the present Lahore Government College would, of course, be abolished, the Government, no doubt, giving a liberal grant in aid to the new Institution. We trust that other sirdars will follow the good example to which we have alluded, and that the subscribers of Rs.50,000, chiefly on paper, for a revived Delhi College, will similarly devote their subscriptions to the endowment of a fund for scholarships to deserving Delhi students at the Cambridge Mission College, instead of wasting their time and energies on the collection of the remaining Rs.1,50,000, which are still wanted in order to found a second-rate college of their own, when a first-rate establishment is in existence such as could not be surpassed in the quality of its staff by any Government college in Upper India.—Journal of the Anjuman-i-Punjab.

THE NEW REVENUES AND AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT.—Mr. Buck, Director of Agriculture, N.W.P., is appointed secretary of the new department. Pending his return from furlough, Mr. C. L. Tupper will officiate as secretary.—Pioneer.

THE BENCH AND BAR.—At Calcutta, on the 5th, Mr. Justice Cunningham and Mr. Justice Prinsep gave judgment in the Patna Libel Case, refusing to transfer the case. Their lordships animadverted upon the recent dispute between the local bar and themselves, justifying their own conduct in the matter and censuring Mr. Jackson for a "grave breach of decorum."—Times of India.

A NEW COMMISSIONER.—A fourth division has been created in British Burma, to which Col. Street has been appointed as commissioner.—Ibid.

THE PRESS COMMISSIONER.—The question of the Press Commissionership came before the Viceregal Council on the 29th June; it was decided to transfer the office on the same footing as now from the Foreign to the Home Department. The change will be effected in about a fortnight, when Mr. Collin, now in charge of the office, reverts to ordinary employment in Bengal.—Ibid.

THE INDIAN TEA MARKET.—It is satisfactory to learn from Messrs. Moran and Co.'s report on the tea market that "during the past month several orders have been received here for the American and Australian markets, and if these continue the industry will not be as subject as it has hitherto been to the fluctuation of the London market, by which, up to the present, our rates have almost entirely been regulated. Garden advices continue very satisfactory, except from Cachar, where blight is spreading and much retarding plucking."—Englishman.

THE INDIGO CROP.—Concerning the Indigo crop Messrs. Thomas and Co.'s report says:—"Judging from our Lower Bengal advices there has been no improvement in prospects since our last report. Manufacture is in progress at many factories, and a considerable quantity of unripe plant has been cut to save it from inundation by the local rivers. Jessore has suffered much from incessant rain. Tirhoot and Chuprah prospects continue good, sufficient rain has fallen and the plant is yielding fairly well. In Ghumparun the rainfall has been exceedingly heavy, as much as ten inches were registered at some factories on the 29th and 30th, a few of the low lying lands have suffered accordingly, and produce for the present have been somewhat reduced. From Benares our reports are favourable, but in the Doab, we hear, rain is wanted."—Englishman.

THE CHIEF PRESIDENCY MAGISTRATE.—The Englishman understands that Mr. Behari Lal Gupta, joint magistrate of Alipore, who is to succeed Mr. Amir Ali as presidency magistrate, will only be appointed to officiate temporarily as coroner. The combination of the offices of presidency magistrate and coroner frequently leads to delay in the disposal of cases in the police court, as the magistrate has often to adjourn cases which could be disposed of at a single sitting, in order to attend to his duties as coroner, which do not admit of postponement. The question of separating the two appointments of coroner and presidency magistrate is, it is believed, now under the consideration of Government, and Mr. Amir Ali's retirement from the bench, which will take place in a few days, affords a favourable opportunity for making the separation.—Bombay Gazette.

PUNJAB P.W.D.—THE Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab, with the necessary sanction, has formed a special Public Works Division at Simla, under the style of "the Imperial Office Division." Mr. B. Parkes has been gazetted to this division as executive engineer.—Ibid.

MADRAS.

THE BANK OF MADRAS.—Shareholders of the Bank of Madras will be agreeably surprised at the dividend, at the rate of 11 per cent. per annum, which has just been declared for the half-year ended 30th ult.; for although it was pretty well known that the bank had done well with its Government paper, the result of the half-year's working has probably surpassed the most sanguine anticipations. The dividend declared on Dec. 31 last was at the rate of 7 per cent., making the average rate for the past year 9 per cent. That declared for the half-year ended June 30, 1880, was at the rate of 8 per cent., as against 11 per cent. declared now.—Madras Mail.

WRECK.—The Ceylon papers report the capsizing and sinking of the ship Liburnian in Galle harbour. She is an iron vessel of 1,400 tons, commanded by Capt. Kerr, and was under a charter to load a full cargo for London by Messrs. Clark, Spence, and Co. A pipe of oil was being hoisted on board by tackle from the main yard arm, and, being crank, with the assistance of a slightly rough sea, the vessel heeled over and sank at her moorings in deep water, carrying down with her two cargo boats and drowning an apprentice named Moorcroft.—Bombay Gazette.

THE COLOMBO BREAKWATER.—The advantages of the Colombo breakwater are beginning to be fully appreciated. The local Times of June 29 states:—"During the last two days the weather, which had been previously unusually dry and warm, changed to wet, the thermometer falling seven degrees, accompanied by fresh breezes, but without any indication of bad weather. The sea has, however, been sufficiently rough to enable commanders of steamers to appreciate the advantages of breakwater protection. Four steamers of large size, one of them the P. and O. steamer Kashgar, from Australia, have been riding in perfectly still water, secured to the new mooring, and having a rapid despatch unknown in any former south west monsoon."—Ibid.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS.—Our new commander in chief,

Major General Sir Frederick S. Roberts, Bart., has engaged a suite of apartments in the Marine Hotel, North Berwick, for the whole of next month.—Madras Times.

THE LATE MR. COMYN, C.S.—We regret to learn that Mr. William Horatio Comyn, the Collector of South Canara, died in Australia on the 9th May. He was taken ill with liver disease early this year, and as he obtained no benefit from medical treatment, he applied for six months' sick leave, and left Mangalore in March for Melbourne, hoping to be set up by the sea voyage. He was more fond of shooting than of society; yet, being a gentleman, and a good fellow when his reserve broke down, he became popular in South Canara, where memories of that "Ideal Collector," the late McCallum Webster, had given the people, both European and native, a very high standard. Mr. Comyn was educated at Cheltenham College.—Madras Mail.

THE MADRAS DEATH RATE.—From June 25 to July 1, 1 European, 5 East Indians, 10 native Christians, 213 Hindus, and 26 Mahomedans died in Madras, making a total of 255 persons. The average of the corresponding week for the ten previous years was 248. The deaths are thus classified:—40 from small pox, 5 from measles, 55 from fever, 7 from dysentery, 9 from diarrhoea, and 139 from other diseases. The population, according to the last census, being 397,552, the death rate in the week under notice was at the rate of 33·3 per 1,000 per annum. The mean of the ten previous years was 32·5 per 1,000 per annum.—Madras Times.

BOMBAY.

THE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY.—The Madras Mail, writing about the reduction of the telegraph tariff, says:—"The Times of India remarks with truth that in utilising his Australian experiences to insist on the advantages of cheap telegraphy, Sir James Fergusson has been able to confer a valuable boon on the whole Indian public, with whom time is money."—Indian Mirror.

LIBEL CASE.—The hearing of the charge of defamation preferred by Mr. C. M. Thomas, promoter of the Temple Block Wynaad Company, against the editor and manager of the Times of India, began on Friday before Mr. Cooper, chief presidency magistrate. The complainant in cross-examination by Mr. Inverarity said that the mining rights which were to be sold to the company for two lakhs had been purchased by himself and other members of a syndicate for "five, six, or seven thousand rupees," and that of the purchase money he (Mr. Thomas) was to have half a lakh in cash and shares, as well as one-twelfth of the rest. The case was adjourned until to-morrow (Wednesday) afternoon.—Times of India.

THE SIND FRONTIER FORCE.—A notification appears in the Bombay Government Gazette to the effect that, under authority from the Government of India, the separate command of the Sind Frontier Force is abolished from the date of receipt of this order at Jacobabad, when the staff allowances for the appointments of commandant and brigade major of the force will cease. The station of Jacobabad will continue to form a portion of the Sind district command, and the class in which it is graded will be announced in a subsequent general order.—Bombay Gazette.

BARODA.—The Pioneer hears from Baroda that the young Gackwar, after his formal installation at the end of the year, will probably be assisted by a Dewan and Council in Baroda. During the next six months the arrangements for the transfer and the creation of the council will be carefully devised, with a due regard both to the Gackwar's own future and the welfare of the State.—Ibid.

CHOLERA IN BOMBAY.—In consequence of ten cases of cholera having occurred amongst the detachment of H.M.'s 17th Regiment Native Infantry stationed at the native lines, Boree Bunder, the sepoys were on Monday last removed into tents pitched at Cooly Bunder abreast of the Frere-road.—Ibid.

JAMNAGAR.—The Bombay Government have decided against the Maharaja of Jamnugger in regard to his objections to the jurisdiction of the court which has tried him in connection with a postal robbery. An appeal against this decision has been made to the Viceroy.

MILITARY ENTERTAINMENT.—The 28th Bombay Native Infantry, who recently returned to Dharwar from Afghanistan, have been entertained by the European and native inhabitants.

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson state that there are no symptoms of improvement in the markets, which, with few exceptions, remain unsettled, some of the sales effected being at prices in favour of the buyers. Business in coffee is again of limited extent. Common kinds generally have not quite supported their previous value, coloury plantation Ceylon being steady. The same want of confidence is reported from other European markets. Further supplies of new season's tea have arrived. The market shows no alteration, the demand from the trade being inactive. Fine grades of congou are firm, and the finest sell at some advance. The shippers have been buyers. Imports of Indian are fine and meet with strong competition. Rice is quiet. Business has been reported in cinnamon on the spot and to arrive at a recovery on late depressed quotations. Other spice show speculative demand having abated. S. Itpetre maintains the advance already quoted, owing to the small stock here.

THE NATIVE PRESS ON THE LOAN.

Two mistakes have been committed by the Financial Department of the Government of India in connection with the new loan. Fortunately, the more glaring one was rectified as soon as made. The condition in the notification, that Government would reserve to itself the power of allotting such portion of the loan as it chose to native chiefs was really unfair to other intending tenderers. When a loan is publicly invited it is wrong in principle to attach a condition preferential in its nature. It partly detracts from the success of the tender. If Government, for political reasons well understood, considered it wise that native chiefs should be encouraged to invest the savings of their treasuries in Government of India promissory notes, then there was no reason to invite the public to send tenders. The loan might have been, in that case, privately raised from among the chiefs willing to take it up. When the notification, or rather its substance, was first telegraphed by the correspondent of the enterprising Times of India, general disapproval of the condition was expressed in the mercantile community. The Government has, however, acted wisely in promptly withdrawing it. The second mistake is only of a formal character and has a bearing on Bombay only, though here too it must be said that there is something like preference. It was originally notified that the advertisement regarding the loan would be published simultaneously at the Presidency capitals. How is, it then, as the Times of India has pertinently asked, that Calcutta has had prior information by full two days? Somehow, in grave matters of public finance there has been generally observed a great inclination to favour Calcutta foremost. Bombay people have had enough instances of such favouritism, though really to be condemned on public grounds, being shown to Calcutta in times past; and the existence of the branch Bank of Bengal here is the most scandalous instance of it.—Indian Spectator.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 2, 1881.

THE IMPERIAL GAZETTEER OF INDIA.

OF the nine volumes that are to form the "Imperial Gazetteer of India" six are already in the hands of the public, and the remaining three will appear in the course of a few days. These volumes give, in a summarised and easily accessible form and in alphabetical order, the leading results of the first great Statistical Survey of the Indian Empire that has ever been completed. Partial surveys have been made, as everyone knows, both by the British Government and also by its predecessors in India; and there have been attempts at more complete and thorough work. During the greater portion of the period of British rule the supreme need that must always exist for such complete and precise information, under a civilised Government that would legislate for its people and rule the country in accordance with actual facts, has been fully acknowledged; but it has been reserved for the present year of grace to see this great need satisfied. The work, entrusted to Mr. W. W. Hunter, C.I.E., by Lord Mayo's Government more than ten years ago, is now given to the world under the auspices of Lord Ripon; and history will say that its completion is an event of greater import and brighter omen than any that has hitherto occurred, or that is likely to occur, under an administration not otherwise remarkable either for brilliant achievements or for wise conceptions.

Criticism on the literary execution of this grand and truly imperial national record we reserve for another occasion. The public knows well what it may expect in this direction from the accomplished author of the "Annals of Rural Bengal;" and the six volumes now before us—and particularly the admirable and exhaustive article on India, which forms the greater portion of the fourth volume, and which gathers into one sheaf the richest and ripest fruits of the ample harvest—will in no wise disappoint the most sanguine expectations of those who have hoped to see the dry bones of statistics clothed upon with the living flesh and animated with the living spirit. But we desire on the occasion of this first appearance of a full, accurate, authoritative, and detailed account of our great dependency, to direct special attention to the vast administrative importance of the event.

Hitherto, the cardinal defect in our administration of India, keenly felt and bitterly deplored by all earnest men in the country, has been lack of adequate, continuous, trustworthy information. The climate has conspired with our own neglect—or rather, with the hopeless over pressure of work that ever burdens the Indian official world—to efface, or render valueless and inaccessible, the records of one generation long before the next generation has had time to profit by them. It has always been a commonplace in India that, when one takes up a subject of administration for study, one has to take it up absolutely ab initio; the same problems are worked out over and over again in an unceasing round—the same difficulties grappled with—the same improvements attempted—by a long series of official generations, each in entire ignorance of the experiences and the conclusions of its predecessors. And this has been, and is, strictly true of the whole of the Indian administrative machine, from the district magistrate and collector, the administrative unit, up to the Supreme Government of India. Only a few weeks ago Sir Alexander Arbuthnot unearthed and published a large number of minutes and memoranda on various administrative questions, written by an authority of no less ancient date than Sir Thomas Munro; and, on very many points, the effect produced on a reader of the present day is a curiously close reverse of the feelings of Rip Van Winkle on awaking from his long sleep. We know that generations have come and gone, and yet we find ourselves debating the same questions, and hazarding the same guesses, in the same dim twilight of actual knowledge as that in which Munro thought and wrote. Take another instance. A province is threatened with the total failure of the ordinary food supply of its people, and its chief has to make provision in haste for the saving alive of its uncounted millions, under penalty of his own official ruin; until the present time, the difficulty of obtaining the necessary information, and the impossibility of obtaining it rapidly, in accurate detail and in easily-accessible form, have rendered the task one under which the stoutest heart and wisest head might easily fail. And so in everything. A collector and magistrate has barely had time to acquire, by laborious inquiry and research, a competent knowledge of the statistics of his district even after long residence therein. An assistant, who has been moved from one part of the country to another, has found himself at each change in a foreign country of which he has known absolutely nothing, and about which he has had practically no sources of information available.

It is clearly not too much to say of Mr. Hunter's magnum opus that it has changed all that; the system and method of Indian administration takes a new departure from the date of its publication. It is, of course, obvious that a work of this nature, to retain its value even for a short time, must be subjected to the most vigilant and incessant revision—for even while it is being issued a new census is being taken and its results tabulated, which will in time demand incorporation in the "Gazetteer." But in the work now published we have the basis of that standing information in which we have hitherto been so deplorably deficient. For the future the question is the comparatively simple and easy one of keeping that information well up to date. And it is not only the Indian administrator who will be enabled by this "Gazetteer" to approach his momentous task on altogether a new footing, though herein lies the infinite importance and economical value of the work. The advantages that flow from it will be felt equally by the statesman who would legislate for India conscientiously and on the foundation of actual knowledge; by the student interested in the remarkable history of that ancient country, in the unbounded variety of its present aspects, or in the vast social and political problems there being worked out; and by the writer, expounding to others the results of his investigations, and desirous of showing good reasons for the faith that is in him. No one undertaking that we have yet accomplished, in India or for India, has promised such far reaching benefits. Mr. Hunter, handing over to a successor the easy task of keeping his work serviceable and in good repair, will doubtless receive, from the Government which he has served so well, promotion commensurate with the importance of his labours; but he will have the far higher satisfaction of feeling that, in the "Imperial Gazetteer," he has left a monument of his ability and industry more lasting than brass.

LONDON PRODUCE MARKETS.

THURSDAY EVENING.

COFFEE.—Plantation Ceylon has sold at easier rates for pale and grey kinds, from 77s. to 80s. for low middling; and 83s. 6d. to 89s. for bolder sorts; colour steady at 86s. to 89s. 6d. for middling; and 100s. to 103s. for bold; 434 casks, 119 barrels and bags were realised; 2,843 bags foreign partly sold—Guatemala at full prices; ordinary to fine ordinary, 56s. to 61s.; greyish, 72s. to 73s.; Costa Rica easier at 69s. 6d. to 71s. 6d.; 50 half-barrels Mocha chiefly bought in—good garbled, 115s.; 183 bags East India mostly withdrawn.

RICE quiet. A cargo of Rangoon sold at 8s. 4½d. per cwt. for Continent.

JUTE remains steady. About 1,000 bales sold to-day for arrival. For new crop the sales are not extensive, but rather more demand has prevailed for early shipment, via Canal to London, and a fair business has resulted at slightly advanced rates. Calcutta telegrams speaks less favourably of the prospects of the new crop, and complain of drought in certain districts, but at this season of the year we are accustomed to receive reports more or less prejudicial to the crop, and little reliance can be placed on them. The sales for the fortnight are estimated at 20,000 bales afloat, and 10,000 bales in dock, ex quay, &c.

COTTON.—The market continues to improve, and a good business has been done at very full prices to an occasional advance. Sale about 3,500 bales, including Coconada at 4½d., Sind at 4 9-16d., and Bengal at 4 7-16d. to 5d. per lb. For arrival—Tinnevely, August-September, Suez, 5½d. for fully good fair g.f.c. Forward delivery—American, October-November, 6½d.; July 6½d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

FRIDAY EVENING.

SUGAR.—The tone is very dull, prices of West India being 3d. to 6d. lower on the week for the limited quantity sold by auction to-day. The sales to-day amounted to 286 casks, making 622 since Friday last; 243 bags Porto Rico about half sold at full value; 25s. 6d. to 27s. 6d. for good and fine pale grocery; 732 bags dry Bengal, date, part sold at 22s. to 23s.; privately, 900 bags Bengal jagghery sold at 16s.; and floating, a cargo of Cuba muscovado, 395 casks, at 24s. per cwt. for the United Kingdom. A steady business done in the Clyde market this morning, but prices of refined 3d. to 6d. easier on the week.

INDIAN TEA.—About 8,700 packages have been offered at auction and nearly all sold, the larger portion being new crop tea chiefly of excellent quality, for which there has been active competition at full rates. Low grades of old import are in more demand at hardening prices.

COFFEE.—There have not been any public sales, and the next are advertised for August 3.

HEMP.—Steady.

JUTE.—The sales to-day include 1,000 bale cuttings, at £9 15s. to £9 17s. 6d. per ton for Liverpool.

COTTON.—The market continues strong for East India, with a good business doing. American futures opened at 1-16d. advance, but were weak at the close. Sales about 3,500 bales, including Western, at 4 13-16d. to 5d.; Coconada, 4½d. to 4¾d.; and Bengal, at 4 7-16d. per lb. For arrival—Western Madras, July-August, Suez, 4½d. for fully good fair g.f.c.; Coconada, July-August, Cape, 4 9-16d. for fair red. Forward delivery—Bengal, October-November, 4 15-16d. to 5d. for fine g.c.; American, September, 6 15-16d.; August-September, 6½d.; October-December, 6 1-32d. to 6¾d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

HOME NEWS.

CEYLON LOAN.—Tenders for £575,000 Ceylon Government Four per Cent. Debentures were opened on Friday by the Crown Agents for the Colonies. The applications amounted to £2,641,000. Tenders at £103 12s. 6d. will receive about 20 per cent., and those at and above £103 13s. 6d. in full. The average price was £103 13s. 8d.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—A novel feature was noticeable in the sale of Indian Council drafts on Wednesday. According to the new custom, a minimum was fixed at 1s. 7½d.; but the banks and other firms refused to respond to this figure, and no tenders whatever were made. The sum to be disposed of, amounting to Rs. 35,00,000, consequently remains unallotted, and is offered for tender to-morrow (Wednesday). The Times says:—"According to their new method, the India Council fixed the lowest price at which it would receive tenders for £350,000 nominal of India bills at 1s. 7½d., but when the time came for opening the tenders it was found that none had been received. In these circumstances the Council is left with the whole amount of the drafts on their hands. This is a strong contrast to the result shown last week. The Council then met the market as nearly as possible, and practically sold the bills it offered at the minimum of 1s. 7½d. The minimum which was fixed was quite ½d. above the current Indian telegraphic exchanges, and the bills have been left unsold because the Indian banks were not in a position to buy them at such a high rate."

THE SILVER MARKET AND THE EASTERN EXCHANGES.—On Wednesday the silver market was little affected by the absence of any tenders for the Council drafts. Bars were quoted 51¾d. and Mexican dollars 50¾d. The exchanges from the East were telegraphed weaker, at 1s. 7¾d. for Bombay and Calcutta, 3s. 8¾d. for Hong Kong, and 5s. 1¾d. for Shanghai. Rupee Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Paper declined ¼d., to 52¾d. to 52½d. Advices from Shanghai announced that the new Chinese Government Loan had been allotted at the average price of 103¾ per cent.—On Thursday bars were quoted 51¾d. and Mexican dollars 50¾d. per oz. The exchanges were unaltered. Rupee Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Paper declined ¼, to 92½ to 92. On Friday the arrivals to hand by the West India packet were disposed of, the bars realising 51¾d. and the Mexican dollars 50¾d., the latter quotation being ¾d. higher. No reliable exchange rates were received from either India or China, owing to the continued interruption in the telegraph communication. Rupee paper was little dealt in, and closed without change.—On Saturday bar silver was quotably unaltered, but rather weak at 51¾d. per ounce. Mexican dollars remained at 5 ¾d. The exchanges from the East showed no movement, at 1s. 7¾d. for Bombay and Calcutta; 5s. 1¾d. for Shanghai; and 3s. 8¾d. for Hong Kong. Rupee Four and a Half per Cent. Paper improved ½, to 92½ to 92. On Monday the Stock Exchange was closed.

THE NEW GOVERNOR OF MADRAS.—Mr. Grant-Duff has arranged to leave England by the mail steamer on October 5, accompanied by his wife. He has selected Captain Ambrose Awdry, Royal Engineers, to serve as his private secretary, and Surgeon Major John Mackenzie as his medical attendant. Captain Awdry was formerly private secretary to Lord Hobart, Governor of Madras. General Roberts will leave England for Madras a few weeks later.

INTESTATE ESTATES IN INDIA.—On Monday a deputation had an interview with the Marquis of Hartington, at the India-office, for the purpose of presenting a memorial asking the Government to alter the law of 1874, which prohibits the agents and persons acting under powers of attorney from the executors or next-of-kin of deceased persons who leave assets in India from receiving any remuneration for services rendered in the administration of their estates, the administration of such estates being entirely in the control of the Administrator General's office in India. The deputation complained that the law as it stood prevented persons appointing executors of their estates. The Marquis of Hartington, in reply, said the view of the Government of India was that in a country like India, where Europeans often died in isolated positions, at a distance from their relatives and friends, a public officer, such as the administrator general, was required, and that his salary and the expenses of his office should be paid by commission on the estates which he administered, and not out of the revenues of India. The present system protected the interests of the public, and especially of minors, and ensured safety to the property of deceased persons. It had worked well for the past twenty years. Sir Henry Maine had given an equally emphatic opinion, and said that it was to the advantage of the whole European community to maintain the present system. His lordship promised, however, to consider carefully all that the memorial contained.

SIR LOUIS CAVAGNARI.—The City Press states that arrangements have been definitely made to perpetuate the memory of the late Sir Louis Cavnagari, K.C.S.I., by placing a marble bust of him upon a pedestal in the great hall of Christ's Hospital, where he was educated. The sculptor is Mr. E. E. Gellowski, of Bruton-street. A committee of subscribers to the Cavnagari Memorial Fund has been held at Christ's Hospital (Mr. A. Webster, the treasurer of the fund, in the chair), when the amount already subscribed was announced, and also that the Governors of Christ's Hospital had given permission for the bust to be placed in the position the committee desired. The work is to be executed before the close of the current year. Subscriptions may be forwarded to the Rev. J. Harris, hon. secretary, City of London School, Cheapside.

THE PAMIR.—At a recent meeting of the Russian Geographical Society M. Severtzov gave some of the results of his recent visit to the Pamir Mountains, in which he corrects in many important respects the generally received conceptions as to the nature and structure of that range. The Pamir, he finds, is no tableland, and has to the height of some 12,000ft. no steppe region. There are valleys along the rivers up to a height of 14,000ft., but the widest is only twenty verst, and a wider surface is not to be found. This peculiar feature the Pamir has in common with the Tien-Shan and Tibet, where similar valleys of narrow width at considerable heights are found. Real lofty plateaus are not to be found on the Pamir. The mountains rise in lofty ridges to 6,000ft. and 7,000ft. above the valleys. The absolute height of the mountains of the Pamir reaches often to 19,000ft., and three groups of great altitude reach as high as 25,000ft. But these elevations do not alter the generally symmetrical character of the Inner Pamir. Another characteristic feature of the Pamir Mountain region is that the mountain lines stretch in the direction of the meridian, and seldom strike out at right angles. In this respect the Southern Pamir resemble the mountains of Tibet, whereas in the Tien-Shan the tendency is to parallel ranges. In geological character, also, the Pamir seems to differ considerably from the Tien-Shan. M. Severtzov recognises in the lower strata evidence of the ocean gulf which once separated the Pamir from the Tien-Shan. Both are independent mountain systems, even if the elevation of the ground between them is not less than 10,000ft. The oldest formations are found in the Inner Pamir, which, in this respect, is regarded as the groundwork of the system. Evidence was obtained to show that the elevation of this range is still going on. In the course of 12,000 years it has risen 600ft.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY, JULY 26.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

In reply to Mr. Stanhope, the Marquis of Hartington said: It was stated yesterday by the Prime Minister that it would be impossible to name a day for taking the Indian Budget until further progress had been made with supply. I am afraid there is no probability that the Budget will be taken either this week or next. I hope by the end of next week to be able to name a day.

ARTILLERY OFFICERS.

Mr. COBBOLD asked the Secretary of State for War whether artillery officers who were appointed to substantive majorities prior to Oct. 1, 1877, and who completed seven years' full-pay service as majors, were entitled under the Royal Warrant of June 25, 1881, to exercise the option accorded to them in the 50th section of the Revised Memorandum on Army Organisation—viz., the option to accept promotion to be half-pay lieutenant colonels, with the privilege of being eligible for regimental or staff service in that rank.

Mr. CHILDERS: In reply to the hon. member I must admit that the words of the warrant do not express with sufficient clearness the intention on this point of the Revised Memorandum, and I will cause the option which it was intended to give to majors of artillery with seven years' regimental duty to be more plainly given.

RUSSIA IN CENTRAL ASIA.

Mr. STANHOPE asked the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs since what date telegraphic communication with Meshed had been interrupted; whether the Government had taken any steps whatever to ascertain the truth of the report as to the annexation by Russia of the district of Kuchan, in Persia; and whether it was proposed that any representative of this country should be present at any proceedings which might be taken for the delimitation of the new frontier between Russia and Persia.

Sir C. DILKE: When I was asked by the hon. member for Eye to telegraph to Meshed I replied that we had no direct means of telegraphic communication with the British agent at Meshed, who is a Persian gentleman, and that he communicates with the British Minister at Teheran, who forwards his reports to us. We receive full and frequent reports from Mr. Thomson, and there appears to be no truth in the report of the annexation by Russia of the district of Kuchan. The matter mentioned in the third branch of the question is under consideration, but we learn that such proceedings will not take place for many months.

Mr. ASHMEAD-BARTLETT asked when the promised map showing the annexations of Russia in Central Asia would be laid on the table of the library.

Sir C. DILKE said the Foreign-office had not received a map, but it had received a list of names by the aid of which a map was being marked; but further information was required and had been telegraphed for. The map thus prepared would probably be ready before the end of the session.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY, JULY 28.

AFGHANISTAN.

Sir S. NORTHCOLE: I rise for the purpose of asking the Prime Minister whether any information has been received of what we have heard stated to have occurred in Afghanistan, that the forces of Abdur Rahman have been defeated.

Mr. GLADSTONE: Yes, sir, that is the fact. We have received a telegram this afternoon, dated Simla, July 28, and it is as follows:—"Telegram just received from Chaman says that, in action fought yesterday morning at Karez-i-Atta, Ameer's forces were totally defeated, eighteen guns taken, and all baggage. The Kelat Regiment and Kandahar Horse went over to Ayub. Gholam Haider has fled towards Cabul. Sirdar Shamsuddin still in Kandahar with 400 men of Kabuli regiments and some police." It is an important engagement so far as Kandahar is concerned. I will only add that the Anglo-Indian force in the neighbourhood of that country is very considerable.

Mr. COWEN: Is Ayub again in possession of Kandahar?

Mr. GLADSTONE: No, sir. Sirdar Shamsuddin is still in Kandahar with 400 men of Cabulese regiments and some police. That is evidently the force of Abdur Rahman.

Mr. ONSLOW: In what neighbourhood are the Anglo-Indian forces?

Mr. GLADSTONE: In the neighbourhood of the Kandahar country.

Mr. ONSLOW: What Anglo-Indian force is there in Kandahar? We had understood that our forces had been withdrawn from Kandahar. (Cheers.) This action was, I believe, fought on the west side of the Helmand. What Anglo-Indian force is there in that neighbourhood?

Mr. GLADSTONE: None whatever, sir. I never said there was any.

THE DEFEAT OF THE AMEER.

Sir H. TYLER gave notice that on Monday he would ask what was the total amount of assistance in money, guns, and military stores afforded out of British and Indian resources up to the present time to Abdur Rahman, and whether it was intended, now that his army was completely defeated, to afford the Ameer any further assistance. Later in the evening the same hon. gentleman (in the absence of Mr. ONSLOW) asked the First Lord of the Treasury at what distance from the scene where the recent engagement between the Ameer of Afghanistan and Ayub Khan had been fought was there any considerable force of Anglo-Indians, and under whose command.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: The only official telegram which has been received, and which has not been communicated to the Press, is the following, received late last night:—"FROM VICEROY, SIMLA, JULY 28.—Two sirdars have reached Chaman from scene of action, which lasted from 8 to 11 a.m. They say the Cabuli regiments fought at first, but, after action, Khanabad regiment went over in a body to Ayub. The other three dispersed and fled. They heard firing in Kandahar direction last night and again this morning. General Gholam Haider went first to the city before starting for Cabul. They estimate the loss at 300 to 400 on both sides." With reference to the distance from the seat of action of the force of Anglo-Indians, I may say that the headquarters force, under the command of General Hume, is at Quetta and in the neighbouring district. That division amounts to a force of between 5,000 and 6,000 men, but up to the present I cannot say what is the exact distribution of the forces. The most advanced fort which has been occupied—I am not certain whether it is occupied at present or not, but I think it probably is—is Chaman, about 85 miles from Candahar, and where the recent action took place is situated about 25 miles beyond Kandahar. I have received a private telegram from the Viceroy stating that he had directed General Hume to concentrate all the troops at his command at Quetta, so as to be able to cope with any fresh disturbance that may arise there.

Lord R. CHURCHILL: I wish to ask the Prime Minister what impression he meant to produce upon the House by the expression which he used last night, that there was a large Anglo-Indian force in the neighbourhood where the action took place.

Mr. GLADSTONE: I never used the words. (Hear, hear.) I certainly did not say that there was a large Anglo-Indian force in the neighbourhood where the action took place. What I said was "in the neighbourhood of that portion of Afghanistan—namely, Kandahar." (Hear, hear.) That is not where the action took place. (Hear, hear.)

Lord R. CHURCHILL: I beg to ask the Prime Minister to state distinctly what impression is to be drawn from the expression used by him last night with regard to the presence of a large Anglo-Indian force in the neighbourhood. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. GLADSTONE: In my view the question of the noble lord has been answered by the telegram just read by the noble lord. (Hear, hear.)

Colonel STANLEY: Are we to understand that in consequence of the directions given to General Hume to concentrate the forces under his command at Quetta the troops are to be withdrawn from Pishin and Sibi? (Hear, hear.)

Lord HARTINGTON: I cannot give any further information than I have already given; but, if General Hume considers it necessary to assemble the whole of the troops at Quetta, that will involve their withdrawal from Pishin and Sibi.

Mr. STANHOPE: Are we to understand that these places are to be left at the mercy of the enemy, and in a state of anarchy?

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: The Viceroy appears to have considered that any excitement in the district which was likely to follow the report of the victory of Ayub Khan would be best met by the concentration of the forces under General Hume's command. It is impossible for me to state at this moment what is the position in regard to Pishin. No doubt General Hume will take the measures which he considers adapted for preserving the tranquillity of the district now occupied by British troops.

Sir W. BARTELOT: I wish to ask the noble lord whether any application had been made by the Ameer for the assistance of British troops.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: Not that I am aware of.

Sir H. TYLER: I wish to ask the question of which I gave notice at the commencement of the sitting as to the assistance hitherto afforded to Abdur Rahman and the future policy of the Government in that respect.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: I have no further communication to make to the House. If the Viceroy considers further steps necessary he will communicate to her Majesty's Government; but until I have received further information from the Government of India it is not proposed to take any further steps.

Lord ELCHO: What course will the Government take supposing Ayub Khan gets possession of Kandahar and the Khojak Pass, which, as everybody knows, is a most important pass? Will the Government allow the pass to be occupied by Ayub?

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: I really think it would be unnecessary, and probably inconvenient, that I should answer the question. (Cheers.)

INDIAN PENSIONS.

Sir H. WOLFF asked the Secretary of State for India whether, in the year 1869, an Act was passed to enable Lord Napier of Magdala to receive the full benefit of the salary of member of Council for the Presidency of Bombay, or as holding any other office in India, notwithstanding his being in receipt of an annuity, and notwithstanding other Acts of Parliament; if he could state why a similar indulgence was not extended to Sir Frederick Roberts in respect of the annuity granted to him for his services in Afghanistan. Whether a sum of £25,000 was voted to Sir Garnet Wolseley for his services in Ashantee; whether the annuities conferred on Lords Keane, Gough, and Hardinge, and Sir H. Havelock were charged on imperial revenues, though granted for Indian services; whether, in commemoration of the famous exploit of General Roberts, a bronze star is to be or has been given to those who took part in it, whether it has been held that we cannot clearly define as an Indian object the purpose of the Afghan war, and that in consequence a grant has been made from imperial funds towards the expenses of that war; and whether, taking into consideration the foregoing precedents, and also the admittedly composite character of the campaigns in which Sir F. Roberts took part, her Majesty's Government will reconsider their decision as to the £12,500 awarded to Sir F. Roberts, and grant him, either from Indian or imperial funds, a pecuniary reward more in consonance with such precedents.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: It is true, as stated in the question, that an Act was passed to enable Lord Napier of Magdala to receive the full benefit of his salary as a member of Council, notwithstanding his being in receipt of an annuity. It is also true that £25,000 was voted to Sir Garnet Wolseley for his services in Ashantee. It is further the fact that her Majesty's Government have held that the Afghan war cannot be considered to have been undertaken solely for Indian purposes, and that it was just, therefore, to make an imperial contribution towards the expenses of the war. That imperial contribution has been made in the shape of a grant of five millions. It has never been proposed or suggested that any further contribution should be made, or any division of the detailed expenditure of the war should be made, between the Indian and Imperial Governments. There is, so far as I am aware, no more reason why the Imperial Government should undertake a share of the payment of the officers than why they should undertake to pay the commissariat or any of the expenses involved. The hon. member asks why a similar bill was not introduced in the case of General Roberts as in the case of Lord Napier of Magdala. I may say in reply that it is perfectly certain that such a bill could not have passed through this House without considerable opposition and delay. (Hear, hear.) The circumstances would have been in that respect very different from those in which Lord Napier's bill was passed; and I am not prepared to say, even if I could have been certain that the bill would pass without any opposition, that I should have been prepared to introduce, or that the Council of India would have been prepared to support me, in introducing a bill in conformity with that precedent. All I can say in answer to the general question is, that, looking to the precedents which have been published in the return recently moved for by the hon. gentleman, it appeared to the Government that the services of Sir Donald Stewart and Sir Frederick Roberts would be adequately met, in conformity with former precedents, by a grant of £1,000 a year for life, and looking to the exceptional circumstances in which those two officers were placed by their being at the time in high office under the Indian Government, and thereby disqualified for an immediate pension, a grant of £12,500 was an adequate and even a liberal one. (Cheers.)

Sir H. WOLFF said the noble lord had not answered the part of his question relating to Lord Keane and others.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: I believe it is a fact that the annuities referred to were charged on imperial revenues. I have not made any inquiry into the circumstances in which these annuities were granted, but I do not see anything to induce me to modify the general reply I have just given.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY, AUG. 1.

MISSIONARIES IN CALCUTTA.

Mr. DALRYMPLE asked the Secretary of State for India whether it was true that six Protestant missionaries had been or were about to be put upon their trial for open-air preaching in Calcutta; and whether he and Lord Ripon approved the action of the Government of Bengal in endeavouring to suppress this form of work by Protestant missionaries, which had hitherto been unmolested.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said that no official information on the subject referred to had been received at the India-office, but on reference to the Indian newspapers he found that three Protestant missionaries had been prosecuted in the magistrate's court at Calcutta for disobeying an order of the Commissioner of Police prohibiting the holding of open-air preaching in the enclosed square, Calcutta, except by permission in writing. The magistrate, on July 3, decided that the Commissioner of Police was not legally empowered to make such an order, and that in doing so he had acted ultra vires. Other missionaries were summoned on a similar charge, but the cases had not been brought forward. Since that time the Calcutta Missionary Conference had communicated with the Governor of Bengal, and proposed an amicable arrangement on the subject, including provision for the maintenance of law and order during the preaching in the enclosed square. (Hear, hear.) Although he had received no official information, he had heard very fully in an unofficial manner from the Viceroy in reference to those proceedings. The action taken by the police and municipal authorities was in no way instigated by the Viceroy or the Indian Government. The Viceroy, in fact, knew nothing of the proceedings until he read an account of them in the newspapers, and he had done all in his power to promote a friendly settlement of the matter, which he hoped would now be arrived at. (Hear, hear.)

INDIAN ANNUITIES.

Mr. O'DONNELL asked the Secretary of State for India whether it was the fact, as stated in the Statesman of July 1 last, that during the year 1878-9 more than three millions sterling were paid from the revenues of India to persons not resident in India as annuities and furlough pay; and whether the Government would take any steps to diminish that annual drain on the Indian taxpayers.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said the sum mentioned in the question of the hon. member was accurate, but he must point out that, in the case of covenanted servants, a large portion of the pensions had been paid by the persons who received them in the shape of a percentage of 4 per cent. upon their incomes during the whole period of their service. The only way in which this charge could be hereafter reduced would be the further employment in important positions of natives of India. Instructions had been forwarded to the Government of India by the Home Government impressing the importance of this upon them, and he had every reason to believe that those instructions were being carried out. (Hear, hear.)

OUTBREAK IN INDIA.

Mr. O'DONNELL asked the Secretary of State for India whether it was a fact that an outbreak had occurred in the gaol of Gulburga, in which a large number of native prisoners and sepoy had been killed and wounded; and whether he could state the exact number of casualties, and what steps were being taken to ascertain the causes of the outbreak.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said he had received information of the outbreak, but he could not give information as to the exact number of the casualties, inasmuch as the account had not been directly furnished by the Government of India.

BRITISH AID TO THE AMEER OF CABUL.

Sir H. TYLER asked the Secretary of State for India to be good enough to state to the House in general terms the total amount of assistance—in money, guns, military stores, or otherwise—that had been afforded out of British and Indian resources up to the present time to Abdur Rahman, Ameer of Cabul; and whether it was intended, now that his army had been so completely defeated in the neighbourhood of Kandahar, to afford to the Ameer any further assistance of the same description or to employ Anglo-Indian forces in Afghanistan.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said he had no objection to repeat the information which he gave to the House on the 28th of June. The money given to the Ameer was 29½ lakhs of rupees, which included 9½ lakhs found in the treasury at Cabul in October, 1879. A further sum of 50,000 rupees a month was paid to the Ameer as Governor of Kandahar for six months after the evacuation. In addition to this war materials had on various occasions been given to the Ameer—first, four 18-pounder smooth-bore guns, two 8-inch howitzers, four 9-pounder breech-loading field guns, and 22 mountain guns, all of Afghan manufacture; and, in addition to these, a number of rifles and cartridges, together with three smooth-bore batteries of 18 guns, were given to the representatives of the Ameer on the evacuation of Kandahar by the British troops in April last. As far as the last part of the question was concerned he had no reason to believe that the Government of India had any intention to afford to the Ameer any further assistance of the same description, nor had he any reason to suppose that there was any intention to employ an Anglo-Indian force in Afghanistan. (Hear, hear.)

HYAT KHAN.

Mr. O'DONNELL asked the Secretary of State for India whether it was true that Hyat Khan, a member of the Indian Civil Service, was about to be tried on charges of selling his protection to natives of Afghanistan during the occupation of Cabul by General Roberts; whether there had been already a private investigation into the charges against Hyat Khan; whether the trial would be public, and what steps, if any, the Indian Government had taken to obtain evidence in connection with the case.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: The Government have already instituted a confidential inquiry into certain charges of extortion and corruption which have been brought against Hyat Khan, who was in our political employment at Cabul, and they have now decided that the whole matter shall be subjected to a formal and public investigation, which will be conducted by Mr. Smith, judge of the chief court of the Punjab. We have no information as to the steps likely to be taken to secure the presence of witnesses from Cabul. It is not a matter with which the Home Government of India could properly interfere.

Mr. O'DONNELL further asked whether it was true that the charges of corruption and extortion against Hyat Khan were founded on the fact that he had sold his protection as political agent to the natives while Cabul was in a state of siege.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: The charges of corruption and extortion brought against Hyat Khan were various in their character, and I cannot say without reference to papers whether they include the exact point mentioned by the hon. member. They were, however, no doubt of a very serious character. No doubt it is of great importance that witnesses should be brought from Cabul; but, as the Indian Government have determined to have a public inquiry into the matter, I have no doubt that they will take the necessary steps to secure that the inquiry shall be full and satisfactory. It would be obviously improper for me to say anything further on the matter at the present moment. (Hear, hear.)

THE AFGHAN WAR.

Mr. O'DONNELL asked the First Lord of the Treasury whether his attention had been drawn to a proclamation of General Roberts dated October 13, 1879, promising a reward of Rs.50 for every Afghan soldier who had fought against the British troops since the 3rd of the previous month, a reward of Rs.75 for every Afghan captain or subaltern officer, and a reward of Rs.120 for every Afghan field officer; whether he could state what was the total amount distributed in rewards for these purposes; and whether such amount was charged to the British or to the Indian contribution to the expenses of the Afghan war.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: The attention of the Government has been called to the proclamation referred to in the hon. member's question. It was contained in a blue book (No. 1) on Afghanistan, published in 1880. In consequence, however, of the change in the aspect of affairs at Cabul within some days of the issue of that proclamation it was practically never acted upon in the sense of the question of the hon. member. I have the personal authority of Sir F. Roberts to say that no payments were ever made under that proclamation. (Hear, hear.)

In answer to Sir W. Bartlett, the Marquis of HARTINGTON said he had not been informed what movement of the troops under the command of General Hume had taken place, nor whether Chaman was now occupied.

RUSSIA IN CENTRAL ASIA.

Mr. ASHMEAD-BARTLETT, who was precluded by the forms of the House from moving the amendment of which he had given notice, to the effect that the annexation of the whole country of the Akhal Turcomans by Russia in violation of her promises to this country had been encouraged by the unfortunate evacuation of Kandahar and was a menace to the security of British India, said that his resolution was not intended to call in question the evacuation of Kandahar. Kandahar has always been a great commercial emporium. Under British protection its trade had more than doubled, and if the railway which was in course of progress at the time of the evacuation had been continued the position of Kandahar would have been immensely enhanced, and manufactures from England could have been taken to Kandahar and the surrounding districts within three, four, or five weeks. Kandahar had always been on the line by which great conquerors of the East had advanced to Hindustan. We were told that the feeling of the people of Kandahar was against our occupation of it. The noble marquis who made that statement, and others who followed him, were apparently ignorant that the majority of the people of Kandahar were not Afghans. Three fourths of them were Persians. They had been oppressed and plundered, and subjected to every sort of tyranny ever since the rule of Cabul was imposed upon them, and they welcomed our force as a delivering force, and were extremely sorry to see us withdraw. The Prince who defeated General Burrows was now once more master of Kandahar. He had achieved a striking victory over our *prole*ge on the anniversary day, of our defeat at Maiwand. He (Mr. Ashmead-Bartlett) left her Majesty's Government to imagine what might be the effect on Asia and on Hindustan of a victory by a person known to be a bitter enemy of England. Russia had advanced 400 miles nearer to India than before in spite of her promises. It had been admitted by the greatest authorities, political and military, who had to do with Hindustan that Afghanistan could not stand by itself. If Afghanistan was not under English influence it was bound to be under Russian influence. All great authorities, including Lord Lawrence, whom the present Government were always fond of quoting, said that Afghanistan must not be allowed to fall under Russia. What would be the consequences of the present victory? Abdur Rahaman would resume the position he had already held of a pensioner of Russia. Russia might not this year or next advance to Kandahar, but there would exist in Afghanistan civil war, in which Russian intrigue had always found a fertile field for operation, and which would eventually lead to Russian aggression. For what reason did hon. members imagine that Russia made great sacrifices of men and money in the East? Why had she imposed her rule on savage tribes and advanced always in the same direction? It was pretended that Russia had no desire to acquire Hindustan. He maintained that her whole course was distinctly with the view of conquering and acquiring Hindustan. (Hear.) He did not blame her desire in the least. Hindustan had been the Eldorado of all conquerors, and was likely to be so. The rule of Russia, wherever it had been established, was a curse instead of a blessing, and it had been exercised in the interest of the Russians themselves, that was to say, of the dominant class of Russians. Russian officers frankly avowed that they meant to invade and conquer India if they could—(a laugh);—General Skobelev had openly stated that he hoped to lead a Russian army against India, and personages of very high rank had expressed similar sentiments. How did we propose to meet such an invasion? Would the native forces of India be any match for Russian soldiers? It was an axiom of military operations that they should keep their enemy as far as possible away from their central resources; and the necessity of doing that was illustrated by what occurred in the Franco-German war. (Interruption.) He must protest against the discourtesy shown to him by the interruption he experienced from the hon. member for Scarborough while discharging what he conceived to be his public duty. (Hear, hear.) If they waited for Russia on the line of the Indus they might find that they had given her too great an opportunity of entering within their inner lines; while they might also find a discontented population in their rear, on whom and on their native princes Russia knew well how to work. It might be said that Russia had not sufficient resources for so difficult an undertaking as the invasion of India, but no Power which had the spirit and the men required for such an enterprise had ever been held back by the want of money. Englishmen, then, should not think that they could entrench themselves behind their money bags. Iron always conquered gold unless the gold were defended by strong arms and courageous hearts. The hon. member having quoted the opinion of the correspondent of a leading French journal who had lately been with the Russians in Central Asia as to the warlike spirit and the enormous strength of the Russian forces, went on to remark that every race which Russia subdued she turned into fresh fighting material. As to the allegation that she weakened herself by her successive advances and conquests there was, he maintained, no proof of that assertion. The internal state of Russia was, no doubt, bad enough, but there was no evidence that her military strength had been weakened by those conquests, but quite the contrary. He had further to remind the House that when Russia conquered a district she forced many of the inhabitants to migrate and replaced the people by those on whom she could depend, and these men were ready at any moment to repress any assertion on the part of the conquered of their independence. In connection with the recent conquest of the Akhal-Turcomans, he could not help referring to the atrocious cruelty with which the campaign was conducted by General Skobelev. The right hon. gentleman the Prime Minister had often been the apologist of Russia in that House ("No, no," from Mr. Gladstone.) The right hon. gentleman had spoken of the civilising mission of Russia in Asia and elsewhere. Well, he could adduce many instances of the cruelties which were perpetrated under the command of General Skobelev, but he would confine himself to the latest instance. In the entrenchments of the Turcomans the families of the people attacked found shelter, and by his cavalry and artillery the General prevented their escape. He rained shells and rifle bullets upon the entrenchments, and what happened when the opposing force was beaten? They had it in the official report that when the survivors of the defenders sought to retreat across the desert, encumbered as they were by their families, General Skobelev let loose his cavalry upon them and, to use his own words "men, women, and children were hacked by our troops; they were pursued for 17 versts, and at least 8,000 perished." This was the same general who in Roumania had allowed such atrocities to be perpetrated by his troops on 18,000 men, women, and children. These were no exceptional occurrences, for the predecessor of General Skobelev in Asia, in his official report, said of what took place under his command that their cannon "kept up fire upon about 20,000 men, women, and children, and the Turcoman prisoners say that several thousands were killed." That was not the way in which civilised nations conducted warfare. (Hear, hear.) The result of the recent campaign was that the richest districts of Khorasan, the granary of Central Asia, had been annexed by Russia, that she had two roads, which were described by a Russian general as being as smooth as a billiard-board, for the advance of her army, and that the Russian railway, which was intended chiefly for the purposes of war, while our railway was abandoned, was being rapidly pushed forward. (Hear, hear.) In these circumstances, he warned the Government against the danger of retraining from taking the stitch which it was said would, if taken in time, save nine, because by so doing they might prevent a Russian attack on India, by keeping her further away than the line of the Indus or Merv. He had no doubt that in a few years the Turcomans would become either useful allies or dangerous enemies, as the mercenaries of Russia, and he strongly advised that steps should be taken to procure them as allies, instead of allowing them to become the enemies of British power in the East and soldiers of Russia once she got her footing southwards of her present frontier. He was sorry to see the present Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs in the position which he now held, remembering as he did that not many years ago, when in an unofficial position, the hon. gentleman said that a policy such as was now being pursued was neither a peaceful nor a safe policy. The present policy was, in his view, one of shilly-shally, in that the Government at the time when it was evacuating Afghanistan was allowing Russia to annex the Turcoman country. England governed India with enormous advantage to that country, and it was the duty of the former on the highest grounds to preserve her empire over the latter. The trade of this country with India amounted to some £150,000,000 a year in value, but if they abandoned the latter to Russia they would find British manufacturers excluded from her extensive territories. Much had been said about the necessity of maintaining our prestige in India, and he regretted to have heard the prestige of England sneered at. It was not by our material force, by our soldiers, our rifles, and our cannon that we succeeded in ruling India; it was by the belief that the courage of England was invincible, that the word of England was inviolable, and that our foes had never seen the backs of our soldiers in permanent retreat. (Hear, hear.) The action of the present Government was doing much to destroy that valuable belief in the minds of other nations, and was leading them to believe instead that England was ready to make a dishonourable peace, and that she was ready to abandon her bulwarks rather than to undergo a little temporary exertion and to spend a moderate sum of money. He could only regret that the course which was being taken was one that was calculated in the long run to lose us the greatest, the wealthiest, and the most prosperous empire in the world. (Hear, hear.) In conclusion, he intended to deduce from his argument that we should hold an impregnable military position in Kandahar, and tell Russia plainly that her annexation of the Turcoman country would not be acquiesced in by Great Britain.

Sir G. CAMPBELL remarked that the importance of Merv had been greatly overrated, inasmuch as it was not in the way of Russia to India. The late Lord Beaconsfield, while a member of that House, described in the darkest colours the atrocious character of these Turcomans, and it was not for us to complain when Russia, in her own interests, had been forced to make an advance against those enemies of the human race.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: Sir, I find it difficult to deal with the somewhat extensive speech of the hon. member for Eye. The hon. member has evidently given his attention to this question and has collected a great deal of information on it. I should be sorry if he or the House supposed that I mean to treat him with disrespect in saying that I will not attempt to follow him through the whole of that speech. But I should find considerable difficulty in doing so because I am utterly unable to ascertain what was the exact point to which he wished to direct the attention of the House. (Hear.) As the hon. member for Kirkcaldy said, there was not a word in the speech of the hon. member to prove the proposition that Russia's annexation of the Akhal Tekke territory was a violation of her promise to this country. Neither has he said a word as to the second proposition in the motion he had intended to make, that the annexation of the Akhal Tekke territory has been encouraged by the unfortunate evacuation of Kandahar. (Hear.) I think the hon. member was well advised in avoiding that subject, for he would have found it difficult to prove that operations which had been going on for a year before our evacuation of Kandahar were encouraged by that evacuation. There is no connection whatever between our occupation of or advance from Afghanistan and the Russian occupation of the Akhal Tekke territory. Does the hon. member mean to say that if we had resolved to remain in Kandahar Russia would have been prepared to abandon the results of her campaigns and to have retired from the Akhal Tekke territory? (Mr. ASHMEAD-BARTLETT was understood to observe that the Under Secretary of State said so.) The Under Secretary of State said nothing of the kind. I do not think it ever entered the head of any reasonable person that such a result would follow. As far as I could gather from the hon. member's speech, his sole object was to discuss again a subject which was fully discussed months ago—namely, our evacuation of Kandahar, which evacuation was approved by a large majority of this House. I do not think it necessary that I should follow the hon. member into another discussion of that subject. (Hear.) The only matter which I think it may be necessary for me to advert to for one moment is his endeavour to prove that our retirement from Kandahar has led to the victory of Ayub Khan and that that victory is a condemnation of the policy of her Majesty's Government. The Government and the House also, I think, were perfectly aware that the success of Ayub Khan against Abdur Rahman Khan was perfectly possible, and even probable. We have never pledged ourselves or our policy to the success or to the ability of Abdur Rahman Khan to overcome his rival. On the contrary, I remember perfectly well that in the observations that I made to the House in the debate I stated distinctly that the question of his supremacy in Afghanistan could never be decided until there had been an appeal to arms, and that it was impossible to foretell what the result of that appeal would be. No doubt we have given some support to Abdur Rahman Khan; but, if so, we have done nothing more than to discharge what we considered to be a debt to the people of Afghanistan rather than an act in our own interests. We have undoubtedly inflicted a very great injury and mischief on Afghanistan. We have destroyed whatever existed there in the form of government, and we have replaced it in the state of anarchy in which it was before Sher Ali succeeded to the throne. That may have been necessary or it may not; but no doubt great injury was thereby done to the people of Afghanistan. We decided that it was not necessary in the interest of England that we should permanently occupy and undertake the administration of Afghanistan. Having decided to retire from that country, we considered that it was our duty to its people to give them, at all events, a chance of re-establishing for themselves settled government. Whether we selected the best candidate or not, what was done was done not so much in our own interests as in discharge of a debt to the people of Afghanistan, and to give them the opportunity of restoring, if they thought fit, a settled government, such as existed before we destroyed it. The hon. member has informed us that Russia can have no object in conquering these vast and sterile regions, unless it is with the view of invading India. At other times he informed us that she had acquired by those conquests fertile districts and the control of useful, warlike, and also industrial populations. He told us that he had had the privilege of conversing with General Skobeleff, and hundreds of Russian officers, who, with wonderful unanimity, had avowed their intention of invading and conquering India, and that Indian sepoys are quite unable to cope with the Russian soldiers. I wish, when he made that assertion, that somebody on the bench opposite had explained how under those circumstances it entered into the mind of the late Government to bring Indian sepoys from India for the purpose of defeating Russian soldiers in Europe. (Cheers and laughter.) The hon. member told us that the danger which now threatened India from the advance of Russia is only to be compared to a small cloud; but that soon we shall see Russia commanding the services of eight millions of men. He did not inform us by what process the Russian army of half a million men is to be increased to the extent of eight millions. (Hear, hear.) He indulged in an eloquent denunciation of the cruelties practised by Russia in the conquest of the Turcomans. It is no business of mine to defend Russia, and no doubt those campaigns may have been accompanied by some cruelties. But when the hon. gentleman denounced Russia in such warm terms he ought to have adduced stronger proofs than he did of the fact that those cruelties were committed. All that he brought forward was the report that a Russian general had bombarded a fortified place which not only contained soldiers but the families of soldiers. I do not conceive that it is possible, if women and children and property are placed within a fortified enclosure, to avoid the bombardment of such a fortified position consistently with the necessities of war. The hon. member only quoted the correspondent of a newspaper and gave no official authority for the allegation he made in that respect. He had spoken of the annexation of the Akhal Tekke country as a menace and a danger to India. Differing altogether as I do from the views of the hon. member and those who agree with him as to the security of our position in India, I cannot admit his contention in this respect. But if it is any satisfaction to him I have not the smallest hesitation in saying with perfect plainness that I do not think the annexation by Russia of the Akhal Tekke country is a matter of indifference to us. I will not enter into the discussion of the question whether that annexation was consistent or inconsistent with the pledges given by Russia to this country. I think that a good deal may be said on both sides of that question, but it has not been entered upon by the hon. member and I do not wish to enter upon it now. We are not concerned in the independence of the Akhal tribes. But the recent advances and conquests of Russia have, no doubt, had consequences which do affect us in two points very nearly. The extension of Russian territory along the northern border of Persia raises a question of the integrity of Persia which cannot be indifferent to us, and the near approach of Russia to the borders of Afghanistan is not a matter of indifference to us. The present Government have admitted as plainly as any other that the integrity and independence of Afghanistan is a matter to them of vital importance, and that they do not intend to permit interference by any foreign Power with the internal or external affairs of Afghanistan. (Hear, hear.) If Afghanistan were under a settled form of government it might be indifferent to us whether Russia or any other country extended to the very borders of Afghanistan. But that is not the case of Afghanistan. It has not, and perhaps it never may have, what we recognise as a settled form of government. There could be no doubt that, if Russia advanced towards the borders of Afghanistan, a state of things might ensue which would not be of advantage to the good relations between this country and Russia. Such an advance, therefore, could not be a subject of indifference to her Majesty's Government—(hear, hear)—and I have no objection to state that what has taken place in Central Asia is receiving the consideration of the Government. But what does the hon. member ask us to do? I have listened to his speech and I confess I failed to ascertain the conclusion at which he arrived. The hon. member, indeed, said that there was some connection between our leaving Kandahar and the advance of Russia, but so far from that being so, it is my opinion, and it is the opinion of many persons—military men and others of high authority in India—that our continued retention of Kandahar would have been in itself a sufficient reason for the advance of Russia. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. ASHMEAD-BARTLETT wished to explain that what he had said was that it was the general policy of retreat which had been adopted which encouraged the advance of Russia. He had not said that none of the sepoys were a match for the Russian troops. What he did say was that most of them were not.

Mr. ONSLOW expressed his thanks to the noble lord for the reassuring speech he had made. (Hear, hear.) For his part, he did not look at the question from a political point of view. The noble lord said that the Government had always shown Russia that the independence of Afghanistan could not be a matter of indifference to them. The present position of that country was most serious, for if it fell under the rule of Ayub Khan it would be governed by an enemy of ours and a friend to Russia. Her Majesty's Government could not, therefore, too plainly give Russia to understand that there should be no interferences on her part with Afghanistan. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. O'DONNELL said that the noble marquis had stated the broad outlines of the policy of the Government, and it was satisfactory to have to deal with a member of the Government who did not take shelter under evasions. For his part, he would not regret seeing Ayub Khan ruler of Afghanistan. It was true he hated England, and not without cause; but if he kept England out of Afghanistan on one side he might be relied on to keep Russia out on the other. He thought the real danger of the matter was that Russia was advancing near enough to India to be within striking, or at any rate agitating, distance, and in the latter case her action would be sufficient to compel this country to send to India a force which would have a tendency to cripple her power in Europe.

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

The Anglo Indian, from Cardiff to Nagasaki, returned to Penarth Roads on July 23, having sprung a leak off Lundy Island the previous day. She has docked to discharge cargo.

"BY a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us, ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

COLONIAL HANDBOOKS, MAPS, &c.

NOW READY.

CANADA—including Ontario,
North-West Territory, Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia, &c.
With New Coloured Map. Crown 8vo., 288 pp. Cloth, 6s.
"Athenæum," June 25, 1881.—"Full of information and statistics, which ought to prove very serviceable
to any visitor to the Dominion."

"Times."—"Under the above title Messrs. Silver have brought out much more than a mere "Handbook to Canada," an historical, political, social, geographical, and topographical guide for the use of travellers and settlers
over the greater portion of our North-American possessions.
The need of such a work, at once handy, comprehensive,
and trustworthy, has long been felt both by intending settlers and by readers at home, who are surprised, and not unnaturally, at the scanty information about so important a territory which is accessible to them. The volume is illustrated by a map, showing the whole extent of the Canadian Confederation from the shores of the Atlantic to those of the Pacific, and exhibiting all the details of inland communication, whether by Railway or the long chain of inland lakes. Those who have friends in British Columbia, Manitoba, &c., will find this map most useful; and it may be added that the historical chapters are full of materials for the future historian of Canada, or for the writer of an article on that subject in an encyclopædia.

"Manitoba Daily Free Press."—"Comprised in
this book is a mass of valuable information, which cannot fail to impress every reader with an intelligent idea of the great resources and capabilities of our country. In fact, we are convinced that in the words of the preface, a comprehensive, reliable, and at the same time cheap and handy work has been produced, which will furnish the kind of information most sought for in regard to the Dominion, and especially in regard to Manitoba and the North West territories. We have every reason to think that this handbook to Canada is one of the best contributions to immigration literature yet produced. It is also very handsomely got up tastefully bound, and very well
printed."

"Graphic."—"We are already acquainted with Messrs.
Silver's Handbooks to Australasia and South Africa.
They are concisely written, accurate in information,
and full of practical details. The same praise may be accorded to the volume now before us, which comprises
a survey of the whole of British North America, the reader's researches being aided by an excellent map. To the intending emigrant the descriptions of Manitoba and British Columbia will be especially attractive."

more impressively than probably any other kind of publication could the immense activity of our Australian Colonies and the rapid advances they have made since their very recent foundation. . . It is a creditable and useful, and, we believe, trustworthy publication."

AUSTRALIAN GRAZIER'S
GUIDE No. 1, Sheep. Crown 8vo. Limp cloth. 2s. 6d.

"Field."—"This little work is intended to supply, as fully as may be in a small compass, an admitted want in Colonial literature, and is indeed exactly the sort of 'Guide' for the assistance and instruction of those who propose to try their fortunes as stock-raisers abroad, and who so frequently inquire of the Field for such help as is

KIRKMAN AND SON,

ESTABLISHED NEARLY 150 YEARS.

3 and 9, SOHO-SQUARE, LONDON, W.

KIRKMAN AND SON'S

PATENT STEEL FRAME

SHORT GRAND PIANOS,

SIX FEET LONG, IN ELEGANT ROSEWOOD
OR WALNUT CASES,

Are considered by all who have heard them to combine greater amount and resonance of tone, consistent with adaptability of size, shape, and elegance of appearance than those of any other manufacturer.

KIRKMAN AND SON'S

OVERSTRUNG

GRAND AND COTTAGE PIANOS,

It being considered by some competent judges that the German method of over or cross-stringing Pianos is attended with great advantage, Messrs. Kirkman and Son are now manufacturing both Grand and Cottage Pianos on the principle, the latter having the plain Sticker Action, which is not the case with Pianos of this class manufactured by other makers; in fact, the extreme simplicity of the action used by Messrs. Kirkman and Son in all their Pianos render them eminently suitable for exportation to the Colonies, where skilled workmen are few and far between.
All useless checks and complications are carefully avoided
thus enabling any tuner, with however superficial a knowledge of the business, to regulate them or repair any damage they may sustain.

KIRKMAN AND SON

Have a reputation extending over nearly a Century and a Half.

There are now in the possession of the house Harp-chords and Virginals dated 1758 and 1778, manufactured by Jacobus and Abraham Kirkman.

The present members of the firm beg to call the attention of shippers and exporters to the fact that in ordering this house they are dealing with a firm who manufacture principles derived from experience of this almost unprecedented length.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed for the purpose of introducing the Electric Light into India and other Eastern Countries, where an extended field presents itself for its profitable application. The Company will undertake the supply of Dynamo and other electric machinery, lamps, generators, and apparatus for the production of light, the transmission of power, the extraction of metals from ores, and similar operations.

The Company will not limit its operations to the production of light only, but will undertake the supply of Electric Power, which can be produced and transmitted by the same machinery as is employed for the production of the Electric Light.

As the Electric Light gives off but little heat compared with other sources of light, it is pre-eminently adapted for the climate of India, where the existing modes of lighting are open to many objections. A large number of lights can now be produced from a single machine and the connecting wires can be extended for many miles; a circumstance which is essential for the effective lighting of the large cities and straggling cantonments of India.

In order to attain the objects for which this Company is established, the Directors have, under the agreements after referred to, contracted for the purchase of the Indian Patents of the Brush system of Electric lighting, with the right also of manufacturing in England for use in India the Brush machines, lamps, carbons, &c., and are thus enabled immediately to introduce into India the most perfect and efficient system of Electric lighting at present known.

The Brush system has been adopted both in America and England on an extensive scale and with great success; and the aggregate of Electric illumination under this system is believed to be in excess of the total amount of Electric lighting under other systems.

In addition to the Brush Patents it has been deemed advisable to enter into an agreement to acquire the exclusive rights for India of the incandescent system of lighting, known as the Lane Fox System, which is especially suitable for domestic purposes, and comprises lamps, regulators, exhaust pumps, &c. The Company will thus at once enter upon its operations with two of the most complete and efficient systems of Electric lighting hitherto employed.

The soft and beautiful light produced by the Lane Fox lamp is peculiarly adapted for the lighting of bungalows and the interiors of the palaces of the Indian Rajas, while the Brush lamps are equally well suited for the illumination of their pleasure grounds; and both lamps are worked by the same machine.

Major Strutt has entered into the undermentioned agreements with the Anglo-American Brush Electric Light Corporation (Limited), and with Mr. Lane Fox, and with Messrs. Latimer Clark, Muirhead, and Co., and has contracted to pay the purchase moneys for the above patents and licenses, and transfer them to this Company; and to pay all costs of registration, advertising, and other preliminary expenses, including legal expenses and brokerage, up to the date of allotment, for the sum of £32,000 in cash and £38,000 in fully paid up shares, thus leaving out of the £112,000 now offered for public subscription an available working capital of £80,000, the balance of which will be called up only as it may be required.

The agreement with Messrs. Latimer Clark, Muirhead, and Co., Electric Telegraph Engineers, of Westminster, provides for the manufacture by that firm, at cost price, of the machinery and patented material required by the Company for working the above patents, the firm depending for their profit on a division of the net profit realised by the Company on the sale of such machines and apparatus. This arrangement saves time and capital and obviates the necessity of the Company engaging a manufacturing staff and undertaking the erection or purchase of extensive buildings, plant, and machinery.

The profits of the Company will be derived from the sale of Dynamo machines, lamps, carbons, &c., the letting or leasing of lights and Electric power worked from central stations, contracts with municipalities, public bodies, firms, and private individuals, and from licenses which the Company may grant and royalties to be paid thereunder.

The following agreements have been entered into:—

- (1) An agreement, dated 30th June, 1881, between Charles Henry Strutt of the one part, and the Anglo-American Brush Electric Light Corporation (Limited), of the other part, being an agreement for the purchase of the Indian patents of the Corporation, together with some Dynamo machines, &c., available for the immediate commencement of this Company's operations, as also for the grant of a license to manufacture in England the machines, &c., required for India.
- (2) An agreement, dated 1st July, 1881, between Charles Henry Strutt and St. George Lane Fox, for the purchase of the patent rights of the latter in India relating to Electric lighting, together with a license to manufacture in England the machines, &c., required for India.
- (3) An agreement, dated 11th July, 1881, between Charles Henry Strutt and Messrs. Latimer Clark, Muirhead, and Co.
- (4) An agreement, dated 15th July, 1881, between Charles Henry Strutt and the Eastern Electric Light and Power Company (Limited), for transfer of the above agreements to the Company, and making provision for payment of preliminary expenses, as above stated.

Where no allotment is made the deposit will be returned, and if a smaller number of Shares be allotted than applied for the surplus of the deposit will be applicable to the payment of the amount due on allotment. If any instalment is not duly paid the allotment will be liable to cancellation, and payments previously made to forfeiture.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 9, 1881.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, July 19; Madras and Allahabad, July 17; Calcutta, July 16.

THE official report on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending July 5, says that agricultural prospects have improved during the week, as there has been more or less rain in almost all parts of India. In British Burma, Assam, and Bengal the wet weather continues. In Northern India, from the Bengal frontier onwards as far as Sialkot, showers are reported, though both in the North Western Provinces and Oudh and in the Punjab some districts need more rain. In one or two of the States of Rajputana, also, the rainfall has, as yet, been insufficient; but in others, in several of the Central Indian States and in Berar, there have been seasonable falls. The rain on the Bombay coast, in Coorg and in the Central Provinces, has been heavy, and in parts of the territories last mentioned the autumn sowings have been somewhat retarded by too much wet. On the other hand, the slight rain reported from Mysor has not yet sufficed to prevent prospects from being doubtful; and in Baroda, Ahmednagar, the Southern Mahratta country, and the southern districts of the Madras Presidency, further rainfall would be beneficial. On the whole, the improvement in the season is principally apparent in the centre of the country and in the eastern and central districts of the Punjab. The accounts, however, from Mysor are distinctly better than they were last week.

WE regret to observe, from a Calcutta telegram to the Times, dated August 7, that the latest reports from Mysor are far from favourable. The want of rain is much felt; the crops are withering and prices are rising. The crops have not been sold in some parts of the country and the pasture is failing, while in certain villages water for the cattle is becoming scarce. On the whole, prospects are decidedly gloomy, and unless rain falls within a week a large portion of the crops will be irrecoverably lost and severe scarcity be inevitable. The harvest reports from Coorg are also unsatisfactory. The accounts from all parts of India are fairly good. The season's outturn of indigo is likely to be unusually short, so far as Bengal and Behar are concerned; but more favourable reports come from the indigo-producing districts of the North West Provinces. The quantity of tea available for export will probably be below expectation, owing to the bad weather in the early part of the year; but the quality is said to be excellent, and good prices have been obtained at all the public sales which have been held this season.

THE telegrams of the week have kept us fairly au courant with events in Afghanistan. In the official and semi-official telegrams there is still evident the feeble hoping against hope that Ayub may yet be beaten; we have, as is now usual, to look to press correspondents for rational explanations of the changing positions.

THE following are the Viceroy's telegrams:—

"Report of Shams-ud-din's capture is confirmed. He was made prisoner by Cabuli soldiers when they saw themselves deserted by their commander. The report of nineteen persons having been mutilated in Kandahar streets is denied. The city and country are now said to be quite tranquil. All quiet about Pishin."

St. John telegraphs:—"No direct communication from Kandahar. Ayub has formed two regiments out of the Ameer's troops who went over to him. A party of horse is stationed at Takht-i-pul, twenty-five miles south of Kandahar, to guard road and examine travellers. Road unguarded between Takht-i-pul and Chaman." Chaman, 5th:—"Achakzai messenger sent to Ayub's army a fortnight ago, has arrived; he was present at action, and states that defeat of right of Ayub's army at commencement was so complete that fugitives did not rejoin for four days; part of Herati horse plundered Ayub's baggage; Khanabad regiment went over to Ayub's before close of action, thereby deciding it; Ayub's loss much heavier than that of Ameer's army. Sirdar Muhammed Hassim Khan, son of Sharif Khan, has been made Governor of Kandahar; all is tranquil and orderly; the Duranis are flocking in large numbers to pay homage to Ayub! Sartip Nur Muhammed Khan has quarrelled with Ayub on account of Hashim's appointment; preparations are being made for advance on Cabul, but it was not known in Kandahar that Kelat is held in force by Ameer's troops; all quiet here."

NEXT we have a series of telegrams from the Times correspondent at Lahore. On August 4 he says:—

"Traffic is resumed on the Kandahar road. The city district is reported to be perfectly quiet. It is announced at Quetta that Shams-ud-din was delivered up to the Cabuli soldiers. They are themselves annoyed at being deserted by Governor Muhammed Hassim Khan and the leading officials."

SHAMS-UD-DIN's fate is made more clear presently. He doubtless paid the penalty for his friendship to us, though the Chaman correspondent of the Times says that he suffered for an indignity offered to the corpse of Abdullah Khan.

ON August 5 the Lahore correspondent telegraphs:—

"The Cabul Envoy left Lahore on the 3rd inst., and was to arrive in Simla to-day. His suite is comprised of nine persons, including his nephew, Hafiz Gholam Hamed, son of the present commander in chief in Cabul, and Afzul Khan, in the British service, who followed the Prince of Wales to England and negotiated between Sir F. Roberts and Abdur Rahman. The Envoy arranged a special post of three days' run between Cabul and Peshawur. The Envoy left Cabul on the 19th of July. I am assured that he comes at the suggestion of the Viceroy, and bears a message in which the Ameer reminds the Viceroy that he had earnestly and repeatedly begged the Government to hold Kandahar for one year in order to enable the Ameer to make his position secure. It is clear from the Envoy's account that the Ameer began to lose heart at hearing the news of the evacuation of Kandahar. Ayub was at Farah. He denies that the Ameer sent treasure to Tashkend, explaining that the money was only intended for the use of the family, but this account will hardly be satisfactory in India. As regards the aid now asked for, the Government will simply follow the Lawrence policy of 1863 and 1868. I am assured of this emphatically. With regard to my telegram concerning the warning of a brigade it is quite correct, but the idea has been abandoned. General Hume is satisfied that the position is sufficiently strong—a decision which events will justify. Mahomed Jan is dwelling in a village near Cabul. He is now in constant intercourse with Mushki Alam, apparently with a view of declaring for the Shere Ali family. There can be little doubt that Mahomed Jan's influence with the Cabul people will be decisive. About fifteen hundred of the men who went over to Ayub at his late battle with the Ameer's troops have been formed by him into regular regiments. Ayub's troops now occupy Takht-i-pul, for the purpose of guarding the Kandahar-Chaman road. No disturbances are reported on that road, and the ordinary traffic has been resumed. Chaman is abundantly supplied with grain and forage by the tribes."

REFERENCE to our parliamentary intelligence will show that Lord Hartington last night contradicted that part of the above statement which refers to a positive request on the part of the Ameer for our retention of Kandahar for a year. But, however, that may be, the surpassing folly of the evacuation is most fully demonstrated by current events, whether the Ameer can taunt us with "I told you so," or whether he cannot.

THE same correspondent, under the same date, gives an account of the Afghan mission; also, of what is supposed in India to be the policy, or no policy, which Lord Ripon intends to follow:—

"General Mir Ahmed Khan, the envoy who visited Calcutta last winter, has again arrived in India on a mission to the Viceroy, but he left Cabul before the battle. His object has not been disclosed; probably it is the same as that of his last visit—namely, to ask for arms and money. It is to be hoped that the Government will not listen to any such request, and, as it is not prepared to reoccupy Afghanistan, that it will not throw any more good money after bad in a fruitless attempt to bolster up its luckless protégé. No official declaration has been made regarding the British policy. It is generally supposed that the Government at present intends to do nothing, save to hold the Pishin frontier steadily and to watch events. Rumours, however, are current of uneasiness among the tribes on the Peshawur frontier, which may possibly develop into something serious and force the Government to take active measures; and it is reported that, in view of such a possibility, a strong brigade, consisting of one regiment of native cavalry, three regiments of native infantry, and three batteries of artillery, has been formed on paper, and the regiments have been warned to hold themselves in readiness for active service on the frontier. An order has been published in the official Gazette announcing that the Viceroy has been pleased to allow the native corps which took part in recent Afghan campaigns to bear on their colours the same distinctions as have been awarded to the British regiments engaged. The trial of Mahomed Hyat Khan, who is charged with taking bribes while assistant political agent in Cabul last year, is expected to commence at Lahore this week."

We have also an interesting telegram from the Times correspondent at Chaman, under date of August 7:—

"The latest accounts of the battle of Karez-i-Atta, fought on the 26th and not on the 27th ult., as stated in the Indian papers, show that it would have gone hard with Ayub had it not been for the defection or misconduct of a regiment of Ghilzais recently raised in Kandahar, which refused to advance when ordered and then went over to the enemy. Of the four purely Cabuli regiments, three broke and the fourth made its submission. Most of the men of the others came in afterwards and surrendered. They all accompanied Ayub to Kandahar, but it is said that two days later one regiment marched off during the night to Kelat-i-Ghilzai, since which Ayub has disarmed and dismissed 400 men and distributed the rest among his Herati regiments. His loss was much heavier than that of the Ameer's army, and his baggage was entirely plundered by his own men during the action. Next morning Shams-ud-din Khan, the Deputy-Governor, was preparing to defend the city, when Sirdar Muhammad Hassim Khan, the Governor, and the other officials opened one of the gates and fled towards Cabul. The soldiers then mutinied and prevented Shams-ud-din leaving. On the arrival of Muhammad Hashim, Ayub's lieutenant, he took refuge in the shrine of the prophet's cloak. Three days later, when Ayub himself reached Kandahar, Shams-ud-din was induced by an oath sworn on the Koran to leave the sanctuary; but on being taken into Ayub's presence he was severely beaten and thrown down from the durbar-hall on to the pavement below, by which his arm and leg were broken. This was done on account of the indignity with which the corpse of Abdullah Khan had been treated. It is said that a few Farsiwans and Hazaras were killed in the streets by the mob before Ayub's arrival, but this is doubtful. No other disturbance or act of violence took place. Hassim Khan has been appointed Governor. The places of the Cabul officials who have fled have been filled up mostly by men who were in our service. No other change has been made in the Administration. With the exception of three sirdars, no one has taken refuge in Pishin. The Duranis are flocking into Kandahar in crowds to make obeisance to Ayub, after whose arrival a salute of 101 guns was fired and the city illuminated for three nights. The road to Pishin was closed by robbers for a time, but traffic has now recommenced. On reaching Kelat-i-Ghilzai General Gholam Hyder found there reinforcements from Cabul, consisting of one regiment of cavalry, one regiment of infantry, and six guns. He accordingly halted there, and is laying in provisions. Ayub had announced his intention of going on to Cabul at once, and had sent his tents out a mile on the Cabul road; but he was then under the impression that Kelat was empty, and the fact of its being now held in force will necessitate a delay. If the Ameer is able to hold his own at Cabul and bring any considerable number of troops from Turkestan his cause is by no means hopeless, though it must be confessed that the odds are against him. The lucky retention of Kelat gives him the means of confining the struggle to the Kandahar territory, and if he comes down himself with 5,000 or 6,000 good troops Ayub will have hard work to retain his recent conquest. If Abdur Rahman wins he should have no difficulty in driving Ayub across the frontier into Persia, but if he loses a battle at Kelat he will never be able to maintain himself at Cabul, and will have no resource but to fly to Turkestan, whence Ayub would probably make no attempt to oust him. I see that the Pioneer is discussing the advisability of an intervention between the combatants and the partition of Afghanistan into north and south. Unless the Ameer falsifies the prediction, he very possibly may beat Ayub after all and establish a reunited Afghanistan. If Ayub wins we should have the country divided into unequal parts—one, Turkestan, bounded by the Hindu Kush and under purely Russian influences; and the other and larger fairly amenable to British rule and shut off from Russian influences by a bitter enmity. If we step in now and stop the quarrel we should have Afghanistan divided into approximately equal halves—one, Kandahar and Herat, a Durani State, comprehending all that we need care for strategically and commercially, and with a future very much what we chose to make it; the other, a Ghilzai kingdom to whose doings the empire at large might be indifferent, but which would form an excellent diplomatic playground for Simla and Tashkend to amuse themselves in."

FURTHER telegrams from the same correspondent are as follow:—

"Ayub is preparing to advance on Cabul. Meanwhile, the leading Duranis in great numbers are paying him homage. Ayub has appointed Hassim Khan, son of Sharif Khan, to be Governor of Kandahar. Shams-ud-din had fled to a sanctuary, which he left under a promise of protection, but was nearly killed before Ayub's eyes. During and after the battle much of Ayub's baggage was plundered by his own men. It is reported at Quetta that a regiment which had deserted the Ameer for Ayub Khan has deserted the latter and has marched in the direction of Kelat-i-Ghilzai. Gholam Hyder holds Kelat-i-Ghilzai with one regiment of infantry, three regiments of cavalry, and six guns. Several sirdars are with him. Ayub sent a small force to occupy Kelat, which returned, seeing that the country was in the hands of the Cabul troops. On his entry into Kandahar the city was illuminated."

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times, telegraphing on the 7th, gives us the substance of one of Lord Ripon's press communiqués, and an interesting account of the views of the Afghan détenu, who are now apparently at Simla instead of Masuri:—

"Full details of the battle of Karez-i-Atta are still wanting, but the accounts, such as they are, all point to the conclusion that the treachery of his troops was the main cause of Gholam Hyder's defeat. An official press communiqué, issued yesterday, states that Ayub's right wing had been completely routed and driven off the field when the defection of the Khanabad regiment turned the fortune of the day. Kandahar has fallen without a blow being struck in its defence, and Ayub is now the sole master of Southern Afghanistan. He has reorganised the deserters into two regiments, and has marched for Cabul in considerable strength. Another fight is expected at or near Kelat-i-Ghilzai, where the Ameer has a strong brigade which is said to be loyal; but the desertion of the Khanabad regiment, one of the most trusted of his corps, shows how little trust can be put in the fidelity of Abdur Rahman's army, and it is only too likely that the battle of Kelat-i-Ghilzai, if a battle does take place, may be a repetition of that of Karez-i-Atta. Daoud Shah and other Afghan refugees at Simla have expressed their opinion that with such generals as the Ameer has nothing but defeat can be expected; that Ayub will be enthusiastically received as far as Ghazni, and that, if he gains one more victory, the whole country will rise in his favour. We have not heard how the news of the defeat was received at Cabul, nor is anything definite known as to the Ameer's doings or intentions."

"Following from St. John, dated Chaman, August 2.—'Report of capture of Shams-ud-din Khan confirmed. General Gholam Hyder Khan has sent message from Kelat-i-Ghilzai, that he found on arrival a regiment of infantry and two of cavalry on the way from Cabul, and has halted there. All quiet here. Loch reports same of Kakar country.'"

WE have already noticed the official complexion of the telegrams received by the Times from Lahore. The Viceroy's telegram given above was sent from Simla on August 3rd. On the same day the Times correspondent at Lahore telegraphs as follows:—

"It is ascertained that Shams-ud-din has been captured. Colonel St. John has heard from Gholam Hyder, the latter arriving at Kelat-i-Ghilzai, where he found one infantry and two cavalry regiments on their way from Cabul. All quiet in the Pishin and Kakar country."

It is evidently not for nothing that Lord Ripon has abolished the Press Commissioner. Oh, sly Lord Ripon!

THE following telegrams from the same correspondent have appeared:—

"Ayub occupied Kandahar on the 30th. A statement has reached Quetta that Shams-ud-din was captured. No action is reported at Kandahar. One wing and headquarters of the 63rd and 9th Bombay Infantry respectively left Quetta for Peshin on Saturday. Part of the 9th Bengal Cavalry follows from Kishdil Khan. Ayub's force, consisting of infantry, artillery, and cavalry, occupied Kandahar citadel and cantonments. Nineteen Hazaras and others were murdered. There were street riots by Afghans before Ayub's arrival. Ayub's force, composed of three arms, has occupied the citadel and cantonment of Kandahar. Nineteen Hazaras and others were murdered in street riots by the Afghans before Ayub's arrival."

IN the opinion of the Indian Daily News it is difficult to understand the supineness of the Government of India in the matter of acquiring fairly trustworthy information from Afghanistan. It has no agents at Cabul or Kandahar, and the result is that the information it does receive represents rather the bazaar reports of the two cities than any record of the development of affairs. Why this should be no one outside the Foreign-office seems to know. It is stated that things are very far, indeed, from being creditable to the Foreign Department, and it may easily land the Government in some awkward situations. The sooner the want is remedied the better will it be, not only for the Government, but for the public of India. The Government, indeed, have no right to leave India at the mercy of the thousand and one stories that are now set on foot as to what is going on in Afghanistan.

THE Englishman to hand by the present mail has some interesting articles—apparently based on exclusive and authentic information—on recent Russian intrigues in Persia, said to be carried on through the Sepah Salar, Azim Husain Khan. The Englishman thus concludes one of its articles:—

"In view of a further advance eastward it will be seen on reference to the map that the possession of a strip of the country south of Abiverd would be of great advantage to Russia, otherwise a considerable detour to the north is rendered necessary through the desert. Although there are questions of frontier demarcation here again there is but small doubt that this part of the country is genuine Persian territory. The theory is not improbable that the Russians have occupied the north bank of the Attrek as far as Kushan with the intention of presently effecting an exchange for this strip about Abiverd. The arrangement will be that Russia will magnanimously modify her views in regard to the treaty of 1869, finally abandoning all claim to the Attrek frontier line, and in return for the concession receiving in full the right and title of the above noted strip of territory. The report that the Shah's cousin, the Sepah Salar, who was once a warm friend to England, but is now entirely Russian, has been appointed Governor of Khorassan, appears to be correct, and the appointment will be found, in all likelihood, to be greatly due to the Russian intrigue at Teheran, as a first step to the more effectual accomplishment of the above arrangement."

THE Bengalee does "not like the man," referring to Mr. Grant Duff. Our contemporary gives, as his reason, the fact that he has no "sympathy for the people."

It is, on the face of it, obvious that there must exist many inducements that may at any moment cause Lord Ripon to resign the Viceroyalty; whilst the ties that bind his lordship to his office are not likely to be either numerous or strong. The "rumours," to which the Calcutta correspondent of the Times refers in the following telegram, have, we believe, never amounted to anything more than the statement of the probability of an event which seems a priori to be a likely one to happen:—

"For some months past rumours have been circulated in England that Lord Ripon intends to resign the Viceroyalty at the end of the year. I am in a position to assert positively that these rumours are absolutely devoid of foundation. His lordship's health has long since been quite re-established, and he has no intention of retiring from his post. I believe that the report which has been circulated that Lady Ripon purposes to return home next winter is equally groundless."

WE are informed by the Times of India that the Viceroy says he is "reluctantly compelled" (sic) to veto the Game and Fish Preservation Bill recently passed by the Bombay Legislative Council. The Times of India evidently wants to know why "compelled"—and, if compelled, why "reluctantly." There is an air of weakness about these apologies that is to be regretted. So, again, with the Afghan honours; we are now told that a third supplementary list has been sent home by Lord Ripon! The Viceroy forgets the maxim, especially applicable to such rewards, Bis dat qui cito dat; his Excellency seems to require, or at any rate to be open to, pressure.

Elsewhere we give a summary of a clear and intelligent statement of the present attitude of the Brahmo Somaj towards the Government on the one side, and towards Hinduism on the other. This statement was made in a lecture at Simla by Babu—or, as the Brahmo Padres are now called, Bhai—Pratap Chunder Mozoomdar, who is Keshub Chunder Sen's first lieutenant; and next to Keshub himself the leading apostle of the "New Dispensation." It is interesting to observe that the reverend Bhai deplores, in strong terms, the spread of what he calls "Bradlaughism" at the present day; let us hope he will learn more charity towards that "ism" when he reads Mr. Bright's impassioned appeal of last Wednesday on behalf of its martyred hierophant.

THERE has been great excitement among the Vaishnavas of Bombay on account of the imprisonment of the Maharajah of Jamnagar, noticed in another column. The holy man has been allowed certain privileges in gaol to permit him to continue some of his necessary religious exercises. The Governor, in reply to a request to receive a deputation in his favour, has declined on the principle followed by English Home Secretaries, that in matters concerning the prerogative no personal interviews should be permitted. He has, however, promised to give due consideration to any memorials which may be submitted to him on the subject.

THE following officers of the Indian Medical Service have been selected for the appointment of brigade surgeons, subject to her Majesty's approval, with effect from Nov. 27, 1879, viz.:—Surg. Majors A. J. Dale, M.B.; B. Simpson, M.D.; R. F. Hutchinson, M.D.; J. Picthall, M.D.; G. V. Currie; T. Ringer, M.D.; P. W. Sutherland; A. Eteson, M.D.; W. Watson, M.B.; A. J. Cowie; W. J. Palmer, M.D. (since retired); J. H. Loch, M.D.; R. Rouse; J. R. Jackson, M.D.; A. M. Garden (since retired); J. Brake; A. Garden; W. Walker, M.D.; G. A. Watson; T. Mathew, M.B.; J. Fairweather, M.D.; C. J. Jackson (from Jan. 10, vice Brigade Surg. W. J. Palmer, retired); R. Bird, M.D. (since retired, from Jan. 26, vice Brigade Surg. A. M. Garden, retired); J. M. Coates, M.D. (from May 12, vice Brigade Surg. R. Bird, M.D., retired).

CAPTAIN A. AWDRY, Royal Engineers, has been appointed private secretary to the Right Hon. W. E. Grant Duff, the newly-appointed Governor of Madras. Captain Awdry served in a similar capacity on the staff of the late Lord Hobart. Surgeon-Major J. Mackenzie, Army Medical Department, has also been selected for the office of surgeon on the staff of the new Governor.

"TRUTH" has the following about the ex-Viceroy of India:—

"Lord Lytton has just given up the home farm at Knebworth, and it has been taken on a ten years' lease by a farmer from the north of Scotland. The conditions, which are very liberal, and, in some respects, quite novel, may be commended to other landlords. The tenant receives house, buildings, fences, &c., in good order, and, when they require repair, the landlord is to furnish materials. During the last three years of the lease the landlord is to pay for half the artificial feeding stuffs and manure bones, and at the end of the lease the tenant is to receive compensation for improvements. The farm consists of 220 acres, four-fifths arable. The rent is £280, landlord paying tithes and taxes."

WE are glad to learn from the Indian Herald—which has good authority for the announcement—that Sir George Couper will continue in office for another year.

THE Maharaja of Maisur has appointed his late tutor, Mr. W. A. Porter, M.A., of the Madras Educational Department, to be his private secretary. Mr. Porter is one of the most distinguished university graduates in India, having been Second Wrangler and a Fellow of St. Peter's, at Cambridge. The present appointment is another instance of the friendly and cordial relations that so generally subsist between the officers of the Indian Education Departments and their pupils.

THREE new mill companies have been started in Bombay during the fortnight preceding the departure of the mail.

A SCHEME for the transliteration of Burmese words has received the general approval of the Government of India. The spelling of all the well-known places in Burma is not to be altered.

THE trade and navigation returns for the three months (April, May, June) of the current financial year have just been published in Calcutta. The Times correspondent, telegraphing on August 7, says that they show a slight increase in imports and a slight falling off in exports, as compared with the corresponding period of last year, and a large increase, both in exports and imports, over the first three months of 1879. There is a decided increase both in the number and the tonnage of vessels entered and cleared over the last two years.

Messrs. T. Thomas and Co.'s price current for the week ending July 16 has the following about the Calcutta tea market:—

"The usual weekly sales were held on the 7th and 14th instant, when 15,185 packages were offered, and 14,633 found buyers. We have again to report a good inquiry, more particularly for teas under twelve annas, and at somewhat better prices, while for fine and finest the demand has been less active and prices easier. From the manufacturing districts we have reports of rather better weather both in Assam and Darjiling, but in Cachar blight seems unusually prevalent for this time of the year, and has done considerable damage."

Of indigo, the same authority says:—

"Our advices from Lower Bengal continue unsatisfactory, and the season is now so far advanced that but little improvement can be looked for, even with favourable weather. Both in Tirhoot and Chuprah a good fall of rain is much required to improve the small plant, for, although the vat produce is fair, the plant generally cuts out badly; in Chumparun the weather is fine after the late heavy rain, but so far produce has not improved. Rain is still required in Benares, where manufacturing should commence almost immediately; while in the North West prospects have improved after the late rain."

THE number of visitors to the Indian collection at the South Kensington Museum for the month of July amounted to 10,988; total from the opening on May 15, 1880, 230,068.

BENGAL GAOLS.

WE are glad to find from the report on the gaols of Bengal for the past year that an economical and efficient system of gaol administration is as consistent with a decrease in the number of corporal punishments as an economical administration of our hospitals is with a decrease of mortality. The net profits of gaol manufactures in 1880 was Rs.4,16,445, as compared with Rs.3,11,500 in 1879, Rs.3,69,400 in 1878, and Rs.3,61,800 in 1877, while the average cost of maintaining each prisoner in gaol was only Rs.62 8-8, against Rs.66-3-0 in 1879, Rs.71-9-6 in 1878, and Rs.66-15-8 in 1877. One of our Bombay contemporaries has tried to show a connection between the profitable labour exacted from prisoners in Bengal to the relief of the tax-payers, and the large number of corporal punishments in 1879, and it will be interesting to see how the argument will be maintained when it is seen that last year there was an increase of 33 per cent. in the profits of gaol manufactures, while the number of corporal punishments per cent. of the total number of punishments for breaches of gaol discipline has fallen from 18.7 in 1875, 13.4 in 1876, 14.2 in 1877, 15.1 in 1878, and 16 in 1879, to 7.5 in 1880. It is right that the public should protest against any ill treatment of prisoners in gaol, but their sympathy appears to us to be somewhat misplaced when on an average each convict is only held to have committed one breach of discipline during the whole period of his incarceration, and in the vast majority of cases the penalty incurred is only a loss of marks or some other petty punishment.—Englishman.

A NEW MILITARY HISTORY.

Messrs. Allen and Co. are about to publish a Military History of the Madras Engineers and Sappers, by Major Vibart. These corps were raised in the last century by the H.E.I. Company. As the power of the company increased, these bodies were enlarged. Up to 1740, the company being mere traders, it was, of course, unnecessary to call in the assistance of engineers. Shortly after that time, however, it was found imperative to obtain engineers to enable the company to hold its own in contests with the French of the native powers. Up to 1770 the company found it sufficient to obtain engineers from any sources which were from time to time most convenient to them; but in that year, it was considered necessary to establish the corps of engineers on a strictly military basis with an experienced officer of Royal Engineers as commandant. It is proposed in this compilation to trace the gradual increase of the corps, and in doing so to detail the manner in which it has been utilised to assist in extending the dominion of the company. After the great Indian Mutiny the power of the company merged in the Crown, and since then the Madras Engineers have become a part of the distinguished corps of Royal Engineers. The officers of the Madras Engineers are still retained in separate lists, but their complete absorption is merely a matter of time. It seems, then, appropriate that, before this occurs, a record of their services should be drawn up. In recording the campaigns and sieges in which they have been employed, the reports of the engineers themselves will be made use of as fully as possible. At first no regular sappers were employed, but bodies of men were, as occasion required, trained as pioneers to assist the engineers. In 1780 a regular body of pioneers was formed, and up to 1831 this body was employed with considerable success in both civil and military operations. In 1831 the pioneer organization was altered and the regiment became the Madras Sappers and Miners. From 1831 to 1876 they retained that appellation.

In 1876, when H.R.H. the Prince of Wales visited India, their title was altered to the Queen's Own Sapper and Miners, while H.R.H. was appointed honorary colonel. The corps had greatly distinguished itself in many campaigns, and, being still in a highly efficient state, is as ready as ever to do good work for the country. In this publication it is intended to incorporate their services with those of the Madras Engineers, a corps with which they have naturally been closely connected throughout their career.

STAFF CORPS AND INDIAN ARMY FUND.

WE have been asked to publish the following correspondence:—

"My Lord,—The committee whom I represent desire me to ask you if you will do them the favour and honour of receiving them, or some of them, as a deputation, to lay before you their views on the subject of staff corps and Indian army retirement regulations. The committee are well aware that their position is one which may expose them to some prejudice, owing to their being the apparent exponents of what are perhaps deemed the selfish and improper complaints of individual officers; but they wish to submit that the question, as they have entered upon it, goes far deeper. It touches directly and immediately the efficiency of the native Indian army and the pockets of the taxpayer. The committee believe that they could throw considerable light on subjects which do not permeate readily through official channels, and that in the absence of a royal commission to inquire into the whole subject they could furnish most useful information. That five or six field officers should be attached in many cases to native regiments must unquestionably conduce to the inefficiency of those regiments, besides being a severe financial burden on the State. The officers themselves wish to retire, and it is a matter of great public interest that they should do so. The object aimed at is, therefore, the same, whether the motive be private or public, and it is for this reason that the committee do not hesitate to ask you to hear what they have to say. I enclose a list of the committee, and have the honour to remain, your lordship's obedient servant, W. ALLISON, secretary."

"The Right Hon. Lord Hartington."

"India Office, July 20, 1881."

"SIR,—In reply to your letter of the 16th inst., I am desired by the Marquis of Hartington to inform you that he does not consider that any advantage could arise from his receiving a deputation of retired officers, for the purpose of hearing their views on the existing Staff Corps and Indian Retiring Regulations. The subject has already received very full consideration, both here and in India, and Lord Hartington hopes shortly to be able to make known the decision of the Government respecting it.—I remain, faithfully yours, W. Allison, Esq."

"R. H. HOBART."

Wodehouse, M.P. The only toast, with the exception of "the Queen," was the health of the guest of the evening, which was proposed by the chairman and responded to by Mr. Grant-Duff in the following speech:—

Lord Northbrook, my Lords and Gentlemen—It is not unnatural that when I rise to thank you for the way in which you have received this toast, and for all the kind words that have been spoken, I should think of that Greek maxim which tells us that one of the greatest blessings in life is to grow old with our friends. There come back to me as I look round so many and such varied scenes in which one, or more, or many of those who have gathered round me to-night are prominent figures—walks in Oxford, mornings in pleasant country houses from the shores of the Moray Firth to the English Channel; gay little dinners, and perhaps even gayer breakfasts, in London, in Paris, and in most of the capitals of this quarter of the globe; travels in many lands in Europe, and Asia, and Africa; electoral and academic struggles, where great causes were well smitten and well defended; historical words we have heard, and historical moments we have passed together; the lobbies of the House of Commons, where so many bright things are said, which repeated all over the town for a few weeks, then vanish into space like the comet on which we gazed the other day; weary hours, when from five to dawn a bill was to be passed or stopped; so many minutes of tension and anxiety when the question was what will the numbers be; so many thousand cheers by which, through nearly a quarter of a century of parliamentary life, we have proclaimed victory together, to say nothing of some by which we have wished ourselves better luck next time in defeat. There is, I think, no one, or scarcely any one, present, with whose life mine has not been mixed up in a hundred ways, and there are not a few present by whose affection I have been supported or by whose wisdom I have been guided again and again, to whom, indeed, I owe much of whatever has been least imperfect in all I have said and written and done. It is an occasion on which I may well be grateful for good wishes and encouragement, since the task I have undertaken is assuredly no light one. In the first place I succeed, and shall necessarily be put in comparison with, a man who concealed under a quiet exterior a very rare sagacity, and who had a power of conciliating the good will of all sorts and conditions of men, which is one of the most enviable of gifts, and one which I have never in my wildest dreams imagined myself to possess. When it is further remembered that this man, so genial, so kindly, died almost at the commencement of his period of office, and before that ebb tide which occurs, I suppose, in the popularity of all Viceroys and all Governors, to be succeeded by another flowing tide only in the case of the most fortunate, it will be clear that the path which I have to tread is not altogether a flowery one. But apart from these accessory and accidental considerations, how serious is the task in itself! For what is the mandate that I have received? Is it not this? Go forth from the ranks of our home public life, from familiar scenes and familiar companionships, to be for five years the most important individual factor in the weal or woe of thirty millions of men, of other creeds, other races, other thoughts, living under other stars, thousands and thousands of miles away. Go forth to write another page in that action, reaction, and interaction of the East and the West which forms the strangest and most poetical volume in human history. The task is, no doubt, a heavy one, but I have, in undertaking it, some helps and comforts which it would be foolish to ignore. To begin with, I have the example of my noble friend in the chair, who, having exchanged a position in the administration at home similar to that which I have filled, for the tremendous responsibilities and work of the viceroyalty, performed a much heavier task with sustained and brilliant success. Then it has been my good fortune to serve under two chiefs, both in the first rank of British statesmanship, but yet so different in their ways of looking at life and in their methods of transacting business as to supplement each other in a quite remarkable manner. Under the first of these chiefs I served in the India-office, where I had to consider any problems analogous to those with which I shall have to deal at Madras, and became acquainted with the thoughts and ways of that great bureaucracy by which India is governed. Under the second I served at the Colonial-office, where I saw cognate problems treated in a manner which not unfrequently suggested much matter for thought and comparison. In both offices I was lucky in my colleagues as well as in my chiefs. In the India-office I worked for a long time by the side of Herman Merivale, who was, indeed, no longer the man he had been, but who still retained much of that power which made the last Lord Lytton say of him, when he was his permanent under secretary at the Colonial-office, "the leading characteristic of his mind is massiveness, and it is the massiveness of gold." He was succeeded by my old and intimate friend Sir Louis Mallet, on whom fell the mantle of one of the most original of English statesmen, the mantle of Richard Cobden, and who inherited from his grandfather, the great publicist—Mallet Dupont—who, by the way, lies buried close to the place where we are assembled, a certain grace and felicity of statement which have enabled him to win admission for the views of his master in quarters where that master was not himself as successful. At the Colonial-office I worked by the side of Mr. Robert Herbert, from whom, after watching his victorious career at Oxford I parted, to find him again in Downing-street, turned into what I may call the ideal colleague; for he is a man in whose geography the hill difficulty does not exist, and who would, I am persuaded, if all the heads of department came to him in turn on a Monday morning and told him that a political crisis or a rebellion had broken out in each of the half hundred colonies under their care remark, "That it was undoubtedly unfortunate, but might have been worse," and proceed forthwith to deal with each of the fifty cases with perfect calmness and entire success. Then I go to act in India under a statesman with whose methods and views long observation has made me well acquainted, and with whose ideas on politics I feel myself, if I may be permitted to say so, as much in harmony as I do with those of any man in English public life. Further, by the Royal Warrant I am bound to be subject to the controlling powers of the Viceroy, a duty which, if all tales are true, governors of Madras and Bombay have not always found it very easy to discharge. In my case, however, my tyrant is an old friend, so old that I do not remember when we first became acquainted, but I know that it is more than three-and-twenty years since he proposed me as a member of what someone very happily described as the pleasantest bit of Bohemia in Europe, the Cosmopolitan Club. It is, too, a fortunate circumstance that I have another personal friend in Major Baring, the financial member of the Viceroy's Council, and, as such, I suppose, in a sense, my natural enemy. I shall further have the assistance of very able men at the seat of government, including that of one of the most distinguished of English soldiers, Sir Frederick Roberts, and of men, not a few of them equally able, scattered over the face of the country and in immediate contact with the rural population. It will be my endeavour gradually to come to know all these men, who form the nerves of our administration, and to learn their views as to their own districts, not from official reports alone but from their own life. The place to which I am going has, by the way, sometimes been called the "Sleepy Presidency." Well I never hear that phrase without remembering the saying "Happy are those nations whose annals are silent." But if there is any substratum of truth in the reproach implied in it, I should like to try whether there, as elsewhere, the best way of getting good work done by those under you is not to show that you take a personal interest in all departments of that work. Then I have spent the best part of a quarter of a century in the House of Commons, and one certainly ought in that time to have got some wrinkles as to a matter in which governors who have not passed through that discipline are apt to be misinformed, the way, that is, in which the representatives of the people and the electorate will look at particular facts and groups of facts. All these are considerable helps and comforts, but I have one which is greater than any, that all my life I have lived amongst the kind of men who are represented by those I see around me to-night. When I first went up as a boy to Oxford I promised myself that I would do my best to live with those who were superior to me in character, or intelligence, or knowledge, or in all three. I have, like most people, broken a great many promises I have made to myself, but that one never. I have always endeavoured to have friends, my attitude to whom was half affection and half admiration. It is no light thing to part from such friends even for a time. It is no light thing to give up such a constituency as I have had, to say good-bye to the Athenæum and the Literary Society, the Dilettanti and the Breakfast Club, and to those Saturday to Monday gatherings, whether at Hampden, or Knebworth, or York House, which I owe to the kindness of many friends whom I see around me, and to that of many more of both sexes whom they represent. It is no light thing to forego that bath of new ideas which a single day's travelling brings to one who, living in London, has always studied to keep up frequent and close relations with friends on the European continent. Doubtless there will be times of depression when one will only too well understand what our great Indian poet meant when he called India the "Land of Regrets;" but there will, I trust, as I know you trust, be a great many more of useful work and keen enjoyment of what is, after all, one of the great positions of the world, for how seldom in all the long, long history of this planet has it happened that it was in the power of any country to give to one of its children, taken out of the general mass of its educated society, such a stately and magnificent piece of work to do as is the government, even in the quietest times, of one of these great Indian provinces. Five years, though a long time to look forward to, does not seem very long when one looks back, and I dare say when the hour strikes, if strike it does, for falling back into old haunts and associations, all will appear much simpler and easier than it does now. I would fain hope that the changes will be few, and that I shall have nothing sadder to say than what Lord Ellenborough replied when Mr. Disraeli asked him on returning to London after being governor general, what change struck him most, "I have come back to a fatter world." One may, in that case perhaps, feel oneself inclined to begin a conversation, as Louis de Leon actually did begin a lecture after having been silenced for twenty years by the Inquisition, and as Rénan told me he meant to do after having been long silenced by the Imperial Government, "As I was saying yesterday." I am sure if I do not some one else will. Proconsular experiences as to the small amount of attention which matters that have been engrossing their thoughts excite at the centre of affairs are as old as Cicero, and I know a most eminent person who returned from India and entered the Oxford and Cambridge Club, when a rather intimate acquaintance stepped up to him and recommenced a conversation which had been interrupted by his departure for the East two years and a-half before. I owe much gratitude to those who organised this gathering, in that they have given me an opportunity of expressing my feelings to each and all of you, and they have done me a further service in preventing its assuming the character of a political demonstration, and in making it impossible for me to make a political speech. The persons amongst whom I am going to live know perfectly well my political connections and antecedents, but few of them can know anything about my private life, and as noscitur a sociis is a good proverb in all parts of the world, I cannot imagine that anyone could take a better introduction to all that is best in India than by carrying thither the approbation and good wishes of such a gathering as this, comprising as it does so much that is most distinguished and most powerful in so many departments of English life. To all then who are here present I return my sincere thanks, and not less to some who are not here present, but who have in various ways expressed to me their good will, and amongst these to Mr. Gladstone, to Mr. Forster, to Mr. Lefevre, to Mr. John Morley, to Sir James Stephen, to Mr. Morier, to the Master of Balliol, to the Dean of Salisbury, to Sir Henry Maine, and to Mr. Matthew Arnold, last, not least, to that distinguished man, the most famous English ecclesiastic who has lived in our times, one whose name naturally rises to our minds when it is a question of the "parting of friends," and who wrote to me the other day to wish me everything that is bonum, faustum, fortunatumque in the great office which I am going to undertake. Nor on such an occasion is it possible for me to forget that one of the most interesting letters which I received came from one who, if he could have been with us to-night, would have been the oldest friend whom I have here, for my relations with him were older by a few months even than my relations with Professor Henry Smith, which have continued undimmed by any shadow for close upon four-and-thirty years. I allude to him by whose grave so many of us stood ten days ago, in the great abbey which he loved so well, and who, in writing to me about Madras, recalled to my mind the curious facts that our acquaintance had arisen out of the answer which I made to a question about India in a history paper set by him in an examination at Oxford in the spring of 1847. "How many waters," he added, "have flowed under the bridge since then?" Of course, there is a certain risk; no one goes to work in the tropics at fifty-two without incurring a certain risk. Lord Napier and the Duke of Buckingham returned, Mr. Adam and Lord Hobart did not. I hope, of course, and you hope, that I shall draw a favourable number, but in all such cases we can only fall back upon the famous words:—

"If we do meet again, why we shall smile,
If not, why then this parting was well made."

To say that I shall watch with deep interest the fortunes of those here present would be to use an absurdly inadequate expression. Every educated Englishman will do that, for there is a great part of the history of England for a good many years to come collected round this table. What I wish to express is something much more intimate and affectionate, which I think I had better not try to put into words. One thing at least is certain, that whether I come back with my shield, or on my shield, I shall have done all that can be expected of me if I have brought no discredit to such a company of friends.

THE NORTHBROOK INDIAN SOCIETY AND CLUB.
A MEETING was held on Friday at the official residence of the First Lord of the Admiralty to consider the affairs of the Northbrook Indian Society and Club. There were present Sir Barrow Ellis, Sir Henry Norman, Sir Frederick Halliday, the Right Hon. M. E. Grant-Duff, Mr. Fawcett, M.P., Sir Thomas Brassey, M.P., Mr. Bryce, M.P., Mr. Chenery, Mr. Maclean, Dr. Birdwood, Mr. W. G. S. Fitzgerald, Mr. R. S. Wyllie, Mr. E. G. Jenkinson, and Capt. McNeile.

The Earl of Northbrook, who presided, explained to the gentlemen present the object of the meeting, and described shortly how the society had been formed, and what its objects are. He stated that in 1879 some gentlemen connected with the National Indian Association considered it desirable that the work of the association in London should be further developed. Consequently (but chiefly on the suggestion of Mr. W. G. S. Fitzgerald) a conference took place, at which it was decided that a sub-committee should be appointed, consisting of Sir Barrow Ellis, Sir Henry Davies, Sir Arthur Hobhouse, Mr. Fitzgerald, and Lord Northbrook. This sub-committee considered whether something might not be done to assist natives of India of good family whose parents send them over to England for education, and whether such young men (whether going to a university or studying in London) might not be helped in respect of directing their studies, and to any extent giving them information as regards lodgings, &c.; also whether some assurance might not be given to the parents or guardians of these young men. This was the first and main object of the society. The sub-committee at the same time thought that it might be desirable to start a reading-room, and a place where these young natives might meet English gentlemen whose company would be of use to them—in fact, to establish a club. In consequence of the report of this sub-committee, a club was opened in February, 1880. As far as it has gone this club has been a success. About sixty or seventy young natives have become members, and about twenty Englishmen. But, unfortunately, the situation of the club in Bedford-row is inconvenient and rather inaccessible. The native members manage the affairs of the club themselves, and those who have taken a part in its formation do not in any way interfere with the management. Another point on which all were agreed was that this was not a matter in regard to which large subscriptions ought to be invited from people in England. The club was formed for the benefit of a class of natives who could well afford to help themselves. Only small subscriptions have been asked for from people in India. Great caution was exercised, and the subscription was therefore limited to Rs. 100. It is now, after the expiry of a year, thought to be absolutely necessary to put the society on a more permanent footing, and for that purpose endeavours have been made to increase the numbers of the committee, and it is proposed to send out a circular to India asking the natives of India for subscriptions for the purpose of putting the society on a more permanent basis. The original committee consisted of the Earl of Northbrook, Sir Richard Temple, Sir A. Hobhouse, Sir Barrow Ellis, Sir Henry Davies, and Mr. W. C. S. Fitzgerald, with Mr. F. R. S. Wyllie as treasurer. From the commencement Capt. McNeile has acted as secretary. Recently Sir Bartle Frere, who expressed great interest in the objects of the association, Col. Keatinge, an officer well known to many present, Mr. Thornton, and Mr. E. Jenkinson, who has recently returned from India, have consented to join the committee. It would be desirable, also, to get some gentleman from Lower Bengal. Mr. Chapman has been communicated with, but he declined, as he does not intend to reside in or near London. His lordship then read to the meeting the circular which it is proposed to send out to India, explaining the objects of the society. His lordship then mentioned that Mr. Adam, late Governor of Madras, took a great interest in the society, and one of his last acts before his death was to send a subscription of £25. The accounts at present show a balance in hand of about £82. It is quite clear that until more natives join the society, it will have, to a great extent, to depend upon subscriptions, but when once in working order the society ought to pay its own expenses. Before despatching the circular to India, it was thought advisable to call a meeting, in order to obtain influential support, and to hear any advice or suggestions that might be given. The Earl of Lytton had expressed his concurrence, and had promised to attend the meeting, but, unfortunately, had not been able to do so. It was well known that Lord Lytton, when Viceroy of India, had taken a great interest in the advancement of natives, both in his public despatches and in other ways. His lordship further said that he had thought he might, without impropriety, communicate with his royal Highness the Prince of Wales, who had been kind enough to say that he would have attended the meeting had he been in London. His lordship then read the following letter from Mr. F. Knollys, Private Secretary to his Royal Highness:—

"Dear Lord Northbrook,—The Prince of Wales's attention has been called to the Northbrook Indian Society and Club, His Royal Highness, as you are doubtless aware, takes a great interest in the welfare of Indian gentlemen who come to England to pursue their studies, and I am desired to inform you that if a sufficient response is received from India to enable the committee to carry out their proposed object, which is fully approved of by the Prince, His Royal Highness will be happy to become the patron of the society." His lordship explained that he had not thought it right to ask his Royal Highness to associate himself with the society until the result of the appeal to the natives of India for subscriptions should become known. He was glad to see present Mr. Henry Fawcett, M.P., who had taken such a deep interest in the natives of India, and who is looked up to by them with affection and respect. His lordship concluded by saying that the object of the society seemed to him to be simple and practical, and thought that perhaps there was no more quiet or sensible way in which the natives of India could be brought into friendly intercourse with Englishmen. The work of the society has been kept separate from that of the National Indian Association, but of course continues in friendly communication with it.

After a few remarks from Mr. H. Fawcett, Sir Frederick Halliday, Dr. Birdwood, and Sir Barrow Ellis, the meeting separated.

THE WEARING OF DECORATIONS.

THE following letters on this subject have been addressed to a contemporary:—

SIR,—With reference to your excellent suggestions that officers when in evening dress should wear the ribbons of the decorations they possess, after the custom of foreigners, will you kindly permit me to observe that at present it is voted by civilians—jealous, of course, of the distinction—bad form to exhibit them on such an occasion. I have, however, frequently at the opera observed certain officers in plain clothes in attendance on royalty wear their "miniatures." If they do it, why, therefore, should it be set down as bad form? More than once, when abroad, I have been asked by foreign officers why, as I had seen active service, I did not wear my ribbons?—my explanations about my country's customs being frequently received with dubious credulity, hinting mortifying suspicions as to the right to wear them. Moreover, in a few days, numbers of officers will be retired and deprived for ever of again wearing the medals they have earned, unless, as you suggest, her Majesty will graciously be pleased to order all officers, when in full evening dress, to wear the "miniatures" and ribbons of the decorations which have been conferred upon them.—I am, &c.,

AN OLD CAMPAIGNER.

SIR,—The feeling of the service generally on the subject of wearing miniature decorations in evening dress was well expressed in your last issue, but I fear nothing will be done unless the authorities take up the matter. If they were to intimate that the present custom is an insult to the Queen—and it certainly is so—it would at once be discontinued.—I am, &c.,

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE SEEBPORE ENGINEERING COLLEGE.*

THE Journal of the National Indian Association for August is a particularly good number. The two opening articles on "Paper and Paper-making as an Industrial Enterprise for Southern India," and on "The Building Arts of India," show that the association is alive to the supreme importance of fostering industrial enterprise in the country. We notice also that the Madras branch of the association has set on foot a movement for an annual exhibition of needlework, which will aid the good work in another line. The most interesting and valuable article in the present number is one by Mr. J. B. Knight, C.I.E., on "India's Duty to England;" which contains, inter alia, some conciliatory remarks on the recent unfortunate disputes regarding the management of the Seebpore College at Calcutta. We entirely concur with what Mr. Knight says as to the propriety of "letting the dead past bury its dead" in this quarrel:—

"The bitterness of feeling produced by occurrences of this character must exercise a most unhappy influence upon the relation between the two races, and we appeal earnestly, both to the English friends of India and to the Indian friends of England, to minimise their differences and to seek for points of contact, cherishing that charity which 'thinketh no evil;' and, in the particular case before us, we trust that even yet a way may be found of healing differences without, on the one hand, any relaxation of discipline, or, on the other, any forfeiture of true manly independence."

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE WEARING OF DECORATIONS.
TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I am glad to see the correspondence and remarks in your paper on the subject of wearing well-won decorations in after life, amongst our civilian society, and on special festive occasions when military uniform is not required. The mock modesty of the present day has risen to a farce, and the sooner a better understanding is arrived at the better. I attribute the present disinclination of military men to wearing miniature orders, or the ribbon, in mufti, to a supposed contempt of such a practice by the great dons of the Horse Guards. Any expression in favour of officers showing a decoration in large public assemblies, when in mufti, by the Commander in Chief, and by generals in command of divisions, would soon settle the practice; or, if his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, who is so strictly military in all he does and thinks, and who is the grand arbiter of dress in the army, would set the example, or intimate his wishes on the subject, the thing would be done. At present there seems to be a very remarkable habit of knights wearing their collars at public parties, when companions of orders seem tabooed from showing their decoration! Why is this? It is altogether a false system and wrong in principle. At a late regimental dinner at Willis's Rooms I particularly observed this marked difference between knights and companions. If it is etiquette for the former to show their colours in such a marked way it must be equally proper for companions to do the same. There certainly should be one law or custom for both, one and all alike, and I would put it to the highest powers to settle the point by a declaratory statement by which all retired officers scattered over the world might be guided. Society in general would, I think, highly approve of a fixed habit of men sailing under their own legitimate colours, to which they are so fairly and honourably entitled.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

A BRAHMO LECTURE.

ON Monday last we had a treat of an unusual character—I mean a lecture by Baboo Protap Chunder Muzoomdar, one of the leaders of the Brahmo Somaj, whose arrival here I announced some time ago. The lecture was given in the assembly rooms, and was attended by a very large and attentive native audience, besides a considerable number of Europeans. Probably the European attendance would have been greater but for the concert which was going on at the same time, and, unfortunately, the Baboo was unable to get the use of the assembly rooms for any other night except Monday. The lecture, which was a defence and exposition of the new faith, was delivered with great energy, considerable eloquence, and an excellent command of English, and, I think, a brief summary of some portions of it will be interesting. Referring to the undenominational character of the Government, the lecturer said he admired it, and even from a moral point of view he thought the system of undenominational teaching had its advantages, but it had disadvantages too. Idolatry had been undermined, but in its place "let us eat and drink for to-morrow we die" was the only law in the minds of many of the educated natives. If some moral restraints had been taken away and others put in their stead he would not complain, but with the education our young men received there was scarcely any moral teaching. But worse than this, men representing western materialism had taken into their hands the task of educating the people, and though the Government interdicted the teaching of religion, it did not interdict the teaching of modern materialism and scepticism and Bradlaughism, which was spreading and doing havoc among the tens of thousands of the rising youth of Bengal and other Indian provinces. He believed the Government was pledged to observe that no arrant infidelity was taught in the name of that neutrality which was intended only as a pledge of safety to the national religion of India, and he trusted the mischief would be removed before long. He had great faith in the present Government of this country, and he had no doubt that when the evils were once exposed they would be gradually removed. Again, not only in Bengal, but in other parts of India, though our educated men were sharp they were not profound. He was ready to call them clever; they had a liking for the English language; they had read its literature to a great extent; some of them were philosophical students. But the real value of education lay in observation and original thought, and in both of these the educated classes were sadly deficient. They could neither think nor deeply see what was going on around, and he did not wonder at it. When the conscience was not opened, when the great faculties of the soul were not stimulated, when there was no faith in man's being, when his emotions did not rise in lofty and solemn impulse, he was an utter stranger to original thought and real observation. The attitude of the Brahmo Somaj with regard to education was that it was high time some moral teaching was combined with secular teaching. Amongst the educated natives there was a feature which to him was disagreeable. He did not like political agitation; he believed the country was not ripe for it. It only spoiled the people who took part in it, without getting for them any of the benefits which they sought. He believed in calm and composed and respectful representation, but not in stump oratory and radicalism and disloyalty, and the Brahmo Somaj most emphatically repudiated all connection with the agitation which was spreading so much mischief throughout the country. Those who were educated ought to have the common sense to see the advantages which they had under the existing system of rule. In the East authority was always honoured, and power was believed to be derived from one source only, and that was from the Supreme Ruler, and he believed the government of the British in this country was providential.

The lecturer spoke with some warmth against certain Hindu practices, especially that "utter abomination," the caste dinner. The food was altogether too much for the human stomach, the noise was so great that no one could get what he wanted; they had to eat in the blazing sun or the pouring rain; and last, but by no means least, there was the great chance of losing one's shoes! What mortal agency could take care of 400 pairs of shoes, and so people left these dinners wishing to be excommunicated from the bottom of their hearts. At the same time, though he himself was excommunicated, he had much more influence with his people than an Englishman could ever have, and whenever there was a marriage procession, or a caste dinner, the best of everything was always sent to him. But, on the other hand, there were some good restrictions in caste customs, and these ought not to be too suddenly removed. The caste man could not drink liquor, and they knew what dreadful progress drunkenness was making in Bengal, and in the Punjab, too, he was sorry to say. When caste restrictions were suddenly set aside, men had no fear of God, they had no fear of idols, they had no fear of the elders, and the result was that they soon went to ruin. The Zenana was, no doubt, an evil; but here, too, he objected to too great and sudden changes. He did not think Hindu women should ride on horseback, or ride the bicycle, or dance the tight rope, or fight for constitutional rights. The Brahmo Somaj strongly set its face against a common standard of education between men and women for the present at least, and before Hindoo women could freely and safely mix with men, the men would have to learn to be chivalrous, and generous, and noble and pure.

With regard to the attitude of the Brahmo Somaj towards other religions, the Baboo, while admitting that the prophets of Nazareth was the greatest of prophets, said the wilderness of Christianity was far too great for him to find the truth in it alone; he, therefore, was obliged to follow all the prophets—Zoroaster, Buddha, Confucius, Mahomed, &c. Whether such a faith was likely to end in a wilderness or not he did not say. The lecture lasted an hour and a half and the Baboo was frequently applauded throughout.—Times of India.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

THE DARJILING TRAMWAY.—The Darjiling tramway was successfully opened to-day. The Hon. Mr. Prestage in proposing the Lieutenant Governor's health said that the scheme was entirely owing to the Governor's help. He referred to the prosperity of Bengal, and to the Public Works undertaken, all owing to Sir Ashley Eden. The Lieutenant Governor, in returning thanks, said it was a matter of congratulation that he had had a share in furthering the undertaking which was conceived and constructed during his incumbency of his present office. Mr. Prestage laid the scheme before him, and experience enabled him to place confidence in Mr. Prestage's plans. Darjiling has great reason to feel proud of having set such an example. Of all the Hill stations of India it has first completed a good system of water works, and now is the first to make a railway up the hills into the heart of a Himalayan station, seven thousand six hundred feet above the sea. Not only has the railway done good service and an example been set to other stations, but it has solved a problem never before solved on a large scale in the history of railway and which is of universal interest. The line is perfectly unique in some points, and will prove a pioneer of many useful and interesting works of a similar kind elsewhere. Sir Ashley Eden knows no other line which ascends seven thousand and four hundred feet in fifty miles, which mounts gradients of one in twenty-one round curves of seventy feet. The line with all difficulties only cost three thousand pounds per mile, while the East India line cost twenty-one thousand. Yet if the engines only haul up ten tons, which they are now doing with ease, the earnings would be much in excess of those of the guaranteed lines. The public had heard much in the press of singed babies, lost carpet bags, and the horrors of loops, but had not heard of the facility, speed, and convenience with which invalids and visitors were now brought up from plains. "I congratulate the directors on the completion of this great undertaking, also Mr. Prestage especially, to whose fertile brain, sound judgment, energy, persistence, and pluck the public are entirely indebted for the line. If it had not been for him the line would never have been thought of." The speech was greatly applauded by over three hundred guests at tiffin. The weather was unusually fine.—Englishman.

THE VICEROY.—His Excellency the Viceroy will visit Agra at the beginning of November, when a camp of exercise is to come off. His Excellency then makes a tour to Gwalior and in Rajputana, and probably the Central Provinces. The tour, as at present proposed, would last from six weeks to two months. This will probably necessitate the appointment of a president in council; but nothing on this point has as yet been settled, nor has it been decided whether the Government offices will leave Simla for Calcutta when his Excellency starts on tour, or whether they will remain for a later period. It is likely, however, that they will leave at such time as to be settled in Calcutta by the time of his Excellency's arrival here, and not earlier.—Ibid.

MUSA JAN.—News appears to have been received by the Afghan detenus at Masuri that Musa Jan, Yakub Khan's eldest son, has been left at Herat by Ayub Khan, under the charge of Khushdil Khan.—Ibid.

CALCUTTA PORT DUES.—Under the provisions of the Indian Ports Act of 1875 the Lieutenant Governor has directed that the rate of port dues payable on sea-going vessels of twenty tons burthen and upwards be reduced from four to three annas per ton from October 1 next.—Ibid.

A NEW COMMISSIONER'S DIVISION.—The new fourth Division in British Burma, the creation of which was announced in the Government Gazette of the 9th ult., is to be called the Irrawaddy Division, and will comprise the districts of Henzada, Bassein, Thonegwa, and Thayetmyo.—Pioneer.

THE CENSUS.—Mr. W. Chichele-Plowden, the Census Commissioner, has left Simla for a tour in the North West Provinces and Madras, where the backward state of the returns has rendered further inspection necessary.—Ibid.

THE MILITARY DEPARTMENT.—It is believed that considerable reductions have been ordered in the staff of the Military Department, which has never resumed its original state, although the exceptional work connected with the Afghan war has long since come to an end.—Ibid.

HONOURS.—Regarding the announcement that another honours Gazette will probably be issued, it is stated that the Commander in Chief and the Government of India forwarded to England, a fortnight ago, a new and supplementary list of deserving officers.—Times of India.

MR. COLLIN.—The services of Mr. Collin, who has been acting as Press Commissioner since Mr. Lethbridge left India, have been placed at the disposal of the Bengal Government.—Ibid.

EURASIANS.—It is stated that the Government of India have under their consideration a scheme for giving employment to Anglo-Indians and Eurasians. The idea is to organise a couple of battalions from these classes, equipping and arming them like British infantry.

CALCUTTA FREIGHTS.—At date of departure of mail the unfixed tonnage in port amounted to 17,000 tons. London via canal: wheat, 57s. 6d., 58s. 6d., 60s.; jute, 61s. 3d., 62s. 6d.;

tea, 65s., 67s. 6d., 70s.; London via Cape: wheat, 52s. 6d.; linseed, 55s.; rapeseed, 56s. 3d., 57s. 6d.; poppyseed, 60s. Liver-pool: linseed, 50s.; wheat, 47s. 6d.; castor oil, 57s. 6d.

COMMUNICATION WITH THE TEA DISTRICTS.—Every one interested in the tea industry or the general development of Assam, will be gratified to learn that the Government of India has under its serious consideration the question of establishing a cheap and expeditious system of river communication with that province. Though, under ordinary circumstances, such a course of action would be foreign to the proper functions of the Government, the circumstances in this case are not ordinary.—Englishman.

MADRAS.

THE LATE MR. F. GUY CLERK.—We regret to record the death, from typhoid fever, of this promising young officer of the Madras Police Force, which occurred at Ramnad on July 10. The disease was contracted in camp at Muduculatur on June 9.—Madras Mail.

MR. HUDLESTON.—The Acting Governor of Madras, the Hon. W. Hudleston, will resign the service next June. A local paper says he will be "seen off the premises by dry eyes."—Times of India.

MYSOR.—Mr. J. D. Sandford has been appointed judicial commissioner of Coorg, but will continue to hold his present office of chief judge of Mysor. Sir James Gordon goes to Europe on three months' leave shortly.—Ibid.

THE COUNCIL.—There has been another change in the Madras Council. It will be remembered, says the Mail, that when Mr. Hudleston succeeded to the Governorship of Madras, and filled the temporary vacancy in the Executive Council by the appointment of the Hon. R. Davidson, the Chief Secretary, we gave expression to what we had reason to believe was the general feeling of dissatisfaction with the suppression of Mr. H. E. Sullivan. The slight to the present first member of the Revenue Board was palpable, and it seems to have been resented, for the Secretary of State has now informed the Government of Madras that her Majesty's Government have been pleased to appoint the Hon. H. E. Sullivan to be temporary member of the Council of Fort St. George. Mr. Davidson accordingly reverts to the Chief Secretaryship; and Mr. Sullivan will remain temporary member of council until Mr. Grant-Duff has relieved Mr. Hudleston and the latter has resumed his appointment of senior member in the council.—Times of India.

BOMBAY.

THE MONSOON.—There has been some very heavy weather along the west coast during the past week. Two steamers have had to put back from sea; and one of them—the s.s. Calder, belonging to the Bombay and Persian Steam Navigation Company—which was bound for Karachi and the Persian Gulf, had a very narrow escape of being completely wrecked by the violence of the storm. In Bombay considerable damage to trees, walls, and house property has been done by the strong winds that have prevailed. There have been very high tides also, and the large stones piled up along the sea face were washed inwards as far as the B.B. and C.I. Railway line, and the line itself was flooded, near the Colaba bridge, for some time.—Bombay Gazette.

SIR JAMES FERGUSSON.—The Governor goes from Puna to Sholapur on Thursday next to open the new Sholapur waterworks. From Sholapur his Excellency will go on Friday to Admednagar, whence he will return to Puna by road via Sirur, starting from Nagar on Monday morning.—Ibid.

WADHWAN.—The young Thakore Saheb of Wadhwan was formally installed in full charge of his State by Major Nutt, assistant political agent, on Wednesday. The Thakore is one of the young princes educated at the Rajkumar College.—Ibid.

CHOTA UDAIPUR.—The Raja of Udaipur Chota died on the 7th ult. His son, who was brought prominently before the public last year in connection with a trial before Mr. Birdwood at Godra, is, we believe, his successor.—Ibid.

THE "TIMES OF INDIA" LIBEL CASE.—When the Times of India libel case was called on at the Fort police court on Wednesday the prosecutor's solicitor announced that his client did not intend to proceed any further, and the magistrate dismissed the summons.—Ibid.

A VAISHNAVA HIGH PRIEST IN TROUBLE.—The judgment of the judicial assistant of Kattywar in the postal banghy case has caused great excitement in the Vaishnav community, the Maharaja of Jamnagar, who was charged with receiving the stolen property, having been sentenced to two years' simple imprisonment in addition to being fined Rs.2,000. For two days the Bombay Vaishnavs kept their shops closed and all business was suspended. At the temples prayers and offerings were made to the idols to secure the release of the incarcerated Maharaja, and a general fast was observed. The Governor of Bombay has refused to receive a deputation from Bombay, but promises to carefully consider any memorial on the subject that may be forwarded to him.—Times of India.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 3.

THE OPIUM TRAFFIC.

Sir W. LAWSON asked the Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been called to a letter from the Chinese Grand Secretary Li in the Times of July 29, stating "That the single aim of his Government in taxing opium is to repress the traffic; never the desire to gain revenue from such a source;" and whether the Indian Government was taking any steps thoroughly to review our position with regard to the opium revenue according to the promise of the noble lord the Secretary of State for India.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said he had seen the letter from the Chinese Grand Secretary Li in the Times referred to in the question of his hon. friend, and he must say that a great many statements and arguments in that letter appeared to him to be open to a great deal of question. It was, of course, quite impossible for him to attempt to reply to those statements in the course of an answer to a question, and he did not think his hon. friend would desire him to do so. In reply to the latter part of the question, he had to state that a despatch had been sent to the Government of India on the subject of the opium revenue, which, he thought, contained all the instructions which were necessary in support of the statement he had made and which was referred to in the question. (Hear, hear.)

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY, AUG. 4.

THE CASE OF JADHAVRAI HARISHANKAR.

Sir G. WEDDERBURN asked the Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been directed to the petition of Jadhavrai Harishankar, now a prisoner in Panna Gaol, praying for a new trial, or for the revision of his case by an independent judge; whether the principal witness against Jadhavrai had been subsequently tried and convicted, and, in the course of this subsequent trial, certain missing documents relied upon by Jadhavrai to prove his innocence were actually produced; whether the judge and sessions judge of Tanna reported to the Bombay Government in favour of a review of Jadhavrai's case by an independent judge; and whether he would lay upon the table of the House the reasons assigned by the Bombay Government for refusing to grant the petition for a new trial or a revision of this case.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: My attention has not been previously directed to the petition referred to. It appears, however, from the political proceedings of the Bombay Government that Jadhavrai Harishankar, a prisoner under sentence for forgery, has submitted to that Government two petitions in which he has alleged that fresh evidence has been discovered which went to establish his innocence, and he prayed to be released. It appears that Mr. Coghlan, the Sessions Judge of Tanna, did represent to Government, "as an official visitor of the gaol," that the case of the prisoner Jadhavrai Harishankar appeared to him to be one which deserved consideration. Several reports have been made on the case by the two judicial officers, Mr. Candy, who had tried and sentenced the prisoner, and Mr. Aston, who had tried and sentenced one of the witnesses against the prisoner, and by the political officer of Kattiarwar. The Bombay Government resolved, on both occasions, stating no reason, "not to interfere with the sentence appealed against." The Government of Bombay appear to have acted entirely within the limits of their authority, and no doubt on legal advice. There was no obligation on them to state the reasons for their decision, and it would have been unusual for them to have done so. As at present advised, I do not see that there is on the face of these proceedings any ground for calling for further explanation from the Government of Bombay.

THE NEW ARMY WARRANT.

Sir A. GORDON asked the Secretary of State for War whether it was the case, as had been stated, that by Article 66 of section 1, part 1, of the new Army Warrant, commanding officers of battalions of infantry would be unable to exchange with other commanding officers (as hitherto allowed when such exchanges were approved by the Commander in Chief) without losing their position as commanding officers and becoming subordinate officers under the command of the newly created second lieutenant colonels, and whether he would alter the warrant so as to rectify so great an injustice.

Mr. CHILDERS: Yes, Sir, my hon. and gallant friend has rightly interpreted the new warrant, but I have no intention to amend it in the way he suggests. We deprecate, on the score of efficiency, exchanges between lieutenant colonels commanding battalions of different line regiments, and I have no wish to make such exchanges more easy.

COOLIE EMIGRATION.

Mr. ERRINGTON asked the Under Secretary of State for the Colonies whether the "décret" for the protection of the Indian labourers in the Island of Réunion had yet been received by the Colonial Office; and, if so, whether he could make any statement as to the views of the Colonial Office with regard to the "décret," and as to the expediency of sanctioning further emigration from India to La Réunion.

Sir C. DILKE: The "décret" has been communicated to her Majesty's Government by that of France, and is now under the consideration of commissioners appointed on the part of the Foreign and India offices to discuss the question of coolie emigration to Réunion with the French Government.

INDIAN COURTS MARTIAL.

Mr. GRANTHAM asked the Secretary of State for India whether he had received any communications from India as to an alleged refusal on the part of the Government in India to reimburse Lieut. Col. Malcolmson, C.B., and Major Currie, the expenses they were respectively put to in defending themselves at the trial by court-martial, ordered to be held in consequence of charges made against them by Brigadier Generals Burrows and Nuttall, which charges were disproved at the trial on which Col. Malcolmson and Major Currie were honourably acquitted.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said no communication or application had been received of the character mentioned in the question. If, however, such application was made it would be considered, although it would be contrary to precedent.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

Mr. ONSLOW asked when the Indian Budget would be taken, and whether it would be taken before facilities were given for bringing on the Welsh Sunday Closing Bill.

Mr. GLADSTONE replied that the Indian Budget, being a matter of Imperial concern, must undoubtedly be taken into consideration before the Welsh Sunday Closing Bill was brought on. At the same time, there was no reason why, if the promoters of the latter measure found themselves in a position to bring it on previously, they should not do so.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY, AUGUST 5.

MORTALITY IN INDIAN PRISONS.

Sir G. CAMPBELL asked the Secretary of State for India whether it was true, as stated in The Times of August 1, that the mortality in the gaols of the principal provinces of India had for two years averaged 8 to 11 per cent. per annum; and, if so, whether, considering that after many years' discussions and great expenditure the mortality was still so large, he would take steps to make very searching inquiry into the subject.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: It is true that the mortality for years 1878 and 1879 in the gaols of Bengal, Madras, Bombay, the Punjab, and Central Provinces ranged from 8 in Bengal to 12 per cent. in the Punjab. My attention has already been directed, among other matters, to the mortality of Indian gaols. I have communicated by telegraph with the Viceroy, and am now awaiting a promised despatch on the subject. Meanwhile, I have requested a committee of the Council of India to consider the matter.

MADRAS CIVIL SERVICE.

Mr. GIBSON asked the Secretary of State for India whether he had received a copy of the reply of the Government of India to the communication of the Government of Madras of April, 1880, forwarding the memorials of certain members of the Madras Civil Service, complaining of their present position and future prospects; and, if so, whether he would state the nature of the reply; but if no copy had been received, whether, with regard to the delay which had already taken place, and to prevent further delay he would communicate with the Government of India by telegraph, so that the desired information might be furnished at an early date.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: Further correspondence on the subject has been received. It appears that the Government of India are awaiting further information from the Madras Government asked for so long since as January, 1879, and on its receipt promised to lose no time in considering whether any, and if so, what measures should be adopted to meet the complaints preferred by certain members of the Madras Civil Service.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

In answer to Mr. OTWAY and Mr. MACFARLANE,

The Marquis of Hartington said he could make no further statement on the subject of the day on which the Indian Budget would be taken than that which had been made by his right hon. friend the Prime Minister. He hoped that they might take it next week, but he could not say positively, nor could he even say whether it would be taken the week after. He would take care that the usual papers incidental to the subject were laid upon the table of the House before the discussion came on.

AFGHANISTAN.

Captain AYLMER asked the Secretary of State for India whether he had received any recent news as to the movements of General Hume's force on the frontiers of Afghanistan.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: No. The Viceroy of India has informed me that no important movements have taken place on the Afghanistan frontier.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY, AUG. 8.

AFGHANISTAN.

Lord G. HAMILTON asked the Secretary of State for India whether he could give any information as to the accuracy or inaccuracy of a telegram from Lahore, which had appeared in a morning newspaper, to the effect that an envoy of the Ameer of Afghanistan, passing through that place, had stated that the Ameer had repeatedly asked the British Government to hold Kandahar for one year in order to enable him to secure his position.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: I have not received any information to that effect. I do not know what the envoy may have said; but, referring to the correspondence, I am able to state that it is not the case that the Ameer repeatedly asked her Majesty's Government to hold Kandahar for a year in order to enable him to make his position secure.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 9, 1881.

INDIAN PUBLIC OPINION ON THE ENGLISH RETREAT FROM AFGHANISTAN.

INDIA owes a heavy debt of gratitude to the conductors of the Times. The weekly Indian telegrams have unquestionably had a large share in bringing about that awakening of English interest in Indian topics which, if rightly directed, is likely to be productive of so much good to the weaker country; and it is universally acknowledged that the authors of those telegrams have discharged their very important and responsible task with rare ability and impartiality. Removed altogether from the evil influences of English party spirit, writing solely in the interests of the country and the people with whom their lot is cast, and possessed of local knowledge and experience that no amount of polemical skill can confer on the London leader-writer, the Indian correspondents of the Times have done their duty conscientiously and successfully; and, so long as the Times itself was content to be guided in the main by the sure light of the facts thus obtained, its influence on English public opinion in regard to Indian matters was altogether beneficial. It is, therefore, a matter for the deepest regret that of late it has chosen to forsake this safe guidance on all points where it might lead counter to the view of Indian politics now unhappily fashionable in England; and in nothing has this unfortunate perversity been more obvious or more pernicious than in regard to the general question of our retreat from Kandahar. The most urgent expostulations and warnings of the local correspondents are ignored or pooh-poohed in the editorial columns as the views of "alarmists." In a leader published on Monday last the Times said:—

"Public opinion in India may surely be relied upon as better informed than alarmists suppose it to be. The strength of England is brought into no question by anything that has happened in Afghanistan. There is no doubt about her power to interfere decisively. If she holds her hand, it is because she can discover no good reason for interference. If the occasion were to arise, her stroke would be dealt promptly. Her real strength is so great that she has no need to be for ever anxious about keeping up appearances among those who know her and have had experience of her. India is sufficiently impressed with a belief in English power."

Now, the opinion here expressed is directly in opposition to the evidence of all the correspondents' letters; and we do not hesitate to affirm that it is directly in opposition to the experience of all those who are most competent to speak of native public opinion from personal knowledge. That experience—and we are confident that our readers will bear us out in this—teaches us two things. First, the public opinion of the natives of India, so far from being so preternaturally "well informed" as to believe all that we ourselves believe of our strength in Asia, is only too apt to disbelieve and even to ridicule those notions. The native Press, and even well disposed native gentlemen, are never tired of pointing out that we conquered India, and still hold it, largely by native aid. A very considerable section of the Press goes a step further; pointing out that we rule only through the disunion among natives, and inculcating unity. And native public opinion is certainly not so "well informed" as to feel perfectly certain that we are sure to come off victorious whenever we meet the Russians, as they firmly believe we shall have to meet them. Only last week the well-known Amrita Bazar Patrika of Calcutta published the remarkable statement that the Russian Government had endeavoured to open direct relations with its conductors! and that they were well and fully acquainted with the nature of Russia's designs on India long before the publication of Professor Nishikant's recent statement on the subject. It is of course true, as the Times says, that we have taught the natives of India that we can readily conquer Afghanistan—at any rate with the aid of the native army. But this has never been in question; and we have signally failed in convincing them that we are able to hold Afghanistan, or any other region, in defiance of the advance of Russia. This is the point on which Indian public opinion is honestly sceptical, even among the most highly-informed classes; this is the point about which, what is merely philosophical scepticism among the educated becomes seditious agitation among the lower and more inflammable classes. With this scepticism, and with this seditious agitation, we shall certainly have to reckon; for we have given not only colour, but almost certainty, to such views by scuttling out of Afghanistan at the moment of Russia's most determined advance. These are the dangers—and not any alarms about an actual invasion by Russia, as often attributed to us—against which all true friends of India are constantly, but vainly, warning the British public. And, secondly, native public opinion in India—though not "well informed" in the direction in which the Times supposes it to be—is far too well informed to believe the statement of the Times that England "holds her hand" in Afghanistan only "because she can discover no good reason for interference." The natives know full well that our non-intervention, even on the showing of Mr. Gladstone himself, is due mainly to our fears of financial embarrassment, to our horror of further entanglements, and to similar sentiments of timidity, or at least of prudence. They know full well that there are few, if any, leading English statesmen who have not explicitly confessed the importance to us of our preponderance in Afghanistan. All our policy for generations has taught them that we wish for preponderance in Afghanistan. Is it likely, is it possible, that they should believe, if we do not secure that preponderance, when Russian supremacy is fully secured up to the very slopes of the Hindu Kush, that we refrain from securing it merely because we "can discover no good reason for interference?" They naturally ask, "Why, then, if this be so, has Lord Ripon been giving Abdur Rahman lavish presents of money, arms, and ammunition?" They say, "You seem anxious to secure preponderance in Afghanistan, when it is only a question of giving subsidies out of the revenues of India; but when it is a question of fighting you see no good reason for interference! Credat Judæus."

THE NEW ANGLO-INDIAN CLUB.

In future, we have little doubt, the leading rendezvous in London for Anglo-Indians, whether retired or on furlough, will be the Empire Club. This club was originally started as the "Indian and Colonial," and its constitution was based on a happy recognition of the fact, learnt by most of us long ago on board the P. and O., that there must usually be much in common between those who have served in India and those who have passed much of their lives in the colonies. In both classes alike there grows, not unnaturally, a pride in the consciousness of belonging to a dominant race—victorious here over nature, there over man, but everywhere in the highest and fullest sense capax imperii. At home, in the more circumscribed life that falls to the lot of most Englishmen, and amidst the keen competition of Englishmen with Englishmen, the untravelled are apt to become insular, or even parochial. We are apt to forget our glorious birthright as citizens of no mean city, to attach more importance to the interests of a parish in Surrey than to those of a province at the antipodes, to sneer at the Palmerstonian Civis Romanus sum as idle sentiment or snobbish arrogance, and to regard "British prestige" as the fetish of foolish Jingoism or the excuse of interested officials. Foreign travel does something to mend all this; but the Briton of "Greater Britain" sees these things with altogether different eyes. He sees nothing to sneer at, or even to deride, in the fact that he is proud of being a subject of an Empire "whose morning drum-beat, following the sun and keeping company with the hours, circles the earth with one continuous and unbroken strain of the martial airs of England." In the club that has now been founded under such powerful auspices we have a clear recognition of the sentiment of Imperial Federation which we trust will long bind in an indissoluble union with the old country all those vigorous communities and States that promise to make the English tongue the lingua franca of the world.

The numerical strength and the importance of the Indian Services make them naturally the leaders of such a movement as that which has produced the Empire Club; and the remarkably strong committee list that has been published shows that those Services have warmly taken up the idea. Not the least valuable development of the general plan has been the inclusion of many English statesmen of distinction who, though neither Anglo-Indians nor colonists, have been long and intimately associated with the same interests in England. The first election of ordinary members took place yesterday. The club has found, for the time at any rate, a capital habitation in the fine house at 4, Grafton-street, Piccadilly, formerly the residence of Lord Brougham. We have little doubt that the house will soon become the common resort for Anglo-Indians in town; the committee list affords an ample guarantee that the management of the club will be such as to render it most attractive to all who are eligible for membership. The following are eligible for election as members:—

Knights and companions of the Orders of "the Star of India," "St. Michael and St. George," and "The Indian Empire." Officers of the army, navy, marines, and reserve forces who have served, or are serving, in the colonies or India; officials, past and present, of the Colonial-office and India office services; members, past and present, of colonial Ministries, Parliaments, Legislative Councils, and Assemblies, and gentlemen who have served, or are serving, in the various departments under the local administrations of the colonies and India; gentlemen of good social position who are, or have been, connected in professional or commercial pursuits with the colonies and India, as well as those who, for purposes of scientific research, business, or pleasure, have visited or travelled in the colonies or India.

HOME NEWS.

SIR F. ROBERTS.—Mr. Henry Harvey has just finished a bust in terra cotta of General Sir Frederick Roberts, who gave the sculptor several sittings.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.—The following is a list of candidates for commissions as surgeons in her Majesty's Indian Medical Service who were successful at both the London and Netley Examinations:—H. T. Griffiths (gained the Herbert Prize and Martin Memorial Gold Medal), 5210 marks; A. Milne (gained the Parkes Memorial Bronze Medal), 4710; F. D. Caesar Hawkins, 4485; J. A. Cunningham, 4465; A. G. E. Newland, 4456; H. C. Hudson, 4290; R. J. Baker, 4290; A. Silcock, 4071; P. Mul-lane, 3925; J. W. Rodgers, 3920; W. A. Corkery, 3900; R. G. Cooper, 3885; M. B. Braganza, 3875; A. T. L. Patch, 3835; J. F. Maclaren, 3715; S. T. Avetoom, 3705; H. W. Stevenson, 3680; R. Ross, 3630; C. Adams, 3483; E. R. Da Costa, 3265; J. K. Kanga, 3205; A. J. O'Hara, 2990.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—The tenders for Rs. 35,00,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England. The amount allotted was Rs. 2,00,000, to Bombay, at an average rate of 18.7-687d. Tenders on that Presidency at 18.7-11-16d. received in full. The council cannot be said to have really met with any greater amount of success than was the case last week, for out of a total of Rs. 35,00,000 offered only Rs. 2,00,000 were sold. The present is a time, however, when they do not much want money, and when remittances are not much in demand. The smallness of the tenders, then, in no way shows that the plan of fixing a minimum price is inexpedient, the results being, in truth, rather favourable to the change of plan. Rs. 35,00,000 are announced to be put up for tender next week.—Times.

THE SILVER MARKET AND THE EASTERN EXCHANGES.—A trifling amount of bar silver was sold on Wednesday at 51¼d. per oz., showing no change. The market was, however, very barely supplied. Mexican dollars were also taken in very small quantities at 50½d., the previous price. The advices received by the Indian banks again showed no change in either the Indian or China rates of exchange. Rupee paper was a shade easier, the Four-and-a-Half per Cents. being quoted at 92, sellers. On Thursday the bars to hand by the Pacific steamer, amounting to some £12,000, were sold at the previous price of 51¼d. per ounce. Mexican dollars were also unaltered, but the quotation was firm at 50½d. There was no change in the Eastern Exchanges, excepting in the Bombay, which rate was reported dull. Rupee Four and a-Half per Cent. Paper closed steady.—On Friday the market was a little firmer, so far, at least, as fine bars were concerned, a small quantity having been sold at 51 5-16d. per oz., showing a fractional advance. Mexican dollars, however, were not dealt in to any extent, and the price for them remained unaltered. Nothing fresh can be said about the Indian and China exchanges, but Rupee Paper was still flat, the Four-and-a-Half per Cents. being quoted at 91¾ to 91½ and the Four per Cents. at 85½. In India the current quotations were easy, business on both sides being very inactive.—On Saturday the market was unusually active. Several parcels in bars hitherto held back were disposed of at the improved prices of 51¾d., the demand being understood to be both for the Continent and India. In Mexican dollars there was again no business, and the price remained at 50½d. The exchanges from Bombay and Calcutta were ½d. higher, at respectively 18.7 13-16d. and 18.7½d. per rupee. At Hong Kong the rate was unchanged, but the Shanghai quotation declined ¼d., to 58.1½d. Rupee Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Paper was ½ easier, at 91½ to 91.—On Monday little business was done, owing to the absence of supplies, but prices were firm both for the coined and uncoined metal. Bars were quoted 51¾d., and Mexican dollars 50½d. per ounce. The exchanges from the East were telegraphed 18.7 13-16d. for Bombay, 18.7½d. for Calcutta, 38.8½d. for Hong Kong, and 58.1½d. for Shanghai. Rupee paper was unaltered.

CALCUTTA TRAMWAYS COMPANY.—The directors have declared an interim dividend at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, from the date of allotment to the 30th June, payable on and after the 11th inst.

THE LATE INDIAN LOAN.—A bill has been issued with respect to the loan of £2,000,000 to the Indian Government, authorising the Treasury to convert the Consols which were created to provide the money for this loan into terminable annuities, running for not less than twenty-five years. The bill provides that the annuities so to be created are to form part of the permanent annual charge of the debt, the opposite of what was provided, it will be observed, respecting the stock to be created for the £7,500,000 exchequer bonds as provided for in the National Debt Bill. Altogether the permanent charge of the debt, according to the present bill, is to be fixed at £28,920,000 for four years, from April 1, 1881, and, thereafter, during the currency of the terminable annuity now to be created, at £28,120,000. These different bills, we may say, add to the necessity for Mr. Gladstone making a new exposition of the subject. It will not be convenient to have two items for the debt in the Budget, one forming part of what is called the permanent annual charge, and another which is differently described. The object apparently is to ensure the maintenance of the new sinking fund in its integrity, and to provide in addition for a further reduction of debt; but the distinctions are confusing, and we doubt if these circuitous arrangements for extinguishing debt are necessary or expedient. It would be better, we think, to appropriate a large specific sum explicitly to the extinction of debt, and such an appropriation would have a far better effect on the national credit than the present methods.—Times.

THE INDIAN EXCHANGES.—The following is an additional communication on the subject of the Indian exchanges:—"Gresham-house, August 2.—Sir,—When I stated in my letter of the 28th ult. that the excess of exports over imports of merchandise was £24,000,000 sterling I meant twenty-four crores of rupees, and in this I followed the conventional practice adopted by the Secretary of State for India in his budget statement to Parliament, by the Times, and other financial papers, of computing at ten rupees a pound sterling. If I had placed in juxtaposition any other figures differently calculated I would justly have been charged by your correspondent 'B. K. R.' with deliberate evasion. Your correspondent more than supports my statement when he puts down the excess of exports at 25 1-3 crores of rupees. But when he enters into particulars, in his hurry to score a poor victory over my figures and to have his fling at the obliquity of vision of the Indian Council, he falls into an error, I believe of an unintentional, though a very serious omission. He says:—'There is a balance of about three million sterling to be filled up by specie, gold, and silver, and to cover family remittances and profits which are alone estimated to exceed £3,000,000 per annum.' As a set off against these your correspondents 'B. K. R.' ought to have put in fairness an item of equal amount, and more, for remittances from here for private enterprises in tea and coffee plantations, and other investments, to which a scrutiny of the share lists of Calcutta and Bombay Presidency will furnish your correspondent a clue, and to which must now be added the mining adventures and private railway enterprises. These remittances promise to double, treble, and quadruple in proportion as the fields for English investments are narrowed by the growing wealth of the United States and the colonies, and the gradual establishment of confidence in the steadiness of Indian exchange. It is not true that India has of late years absorbed any silver for ornaments. During the years 1874 to 1880 the net imports of silver to India amounted to £39,910,000, and the coinage of the same metal amounted to £47,400,000 (vide Economist, May 28, 1881), which means that India, instead of absorbing silver for ornaments, as has been generally supposed, let out the accumulated hoards of former years for coinage purposes. Under such circumstances export of silver to India was possible only so long as Germany was an eager seller of silver below the price of Council bills, but which is not likely to happen in the absence of Germany as a seller, and so long as Council bills are kept on a parity with the price of silver. These are facts which to carefully observe and to take advantage of your correspondent 'B. K. R.' will credit with that much abused body the India Council.—I remain, Sir, your most obedient servant, S. B. B."

LONDON PRODUCE MARKETS.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

TEA DELIVERIES.—The quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London for the week ended with Saturday last was 4,594,818lb., showing, as compared with the return of the previous week, an increase of 1,013,584lb., or equal to $27\frac{1}{4}$ per cent. Of the total, 2,574,688lb. was for home consumption, 1,360,210lb. was exported, 595,307lb. was sent coastwise, 60,776lb. was sent coastwise for exportation, and 3,837lb. was for ships' stores. The duty received was £64,367, being £3,109, or 5 per cent. higher than in the week ended with the 23rd ult.

SPICES.—The auctions have been small, and have shown little if any change in prices.

SAGO.—Of 9,461 bags dull Surat pearl, two or three lots sold at 14s. 9d.; 405 bags bullet pearl tapioca bought in at 17s. to 18s. per cwt.; and the greater part of 652 bags flour at 2d. to 2½d. per lb.

COTTON.—The market is unchanged excepting for American futures, which are about 1-16d. easier at the close. Sales about 1,000 bales, including Tinnevely at 5½d. and Bengl at 4½d. to 4-11-16d. per lb. Forward delivery, American, September-October, 6 11-32d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

THURSDAY EVENING.

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson state that for coffee there has been more inquiry, chiefly for foreign descriptions, the low rates attracting attention, quotations showing 1s. to 2s. advance. Of Ceylon only small lots have been offered, and these have met brisk competition, the coloury sorts at a rise of about 2s. per cwt. Indian teas still meet with great favour, and command extreme rates. These are largely used by the lower classes in this country, and in Manchester and other places they are preferred to China teas, and even to a mixture of China and Indian. They are, however, hardly, if ever, exported from this country. Nearly all the finest chops of China Ning Chow and Moning congous are shipped from this country to Russia. The total deliveries of tea in Great Britain last year amounted to 212,613,000lb., and of this quantity 43,835,000lb. was Indian tea. The total quantity of all kinds taken for home consumption during the year was 158,570,000lb. The proportion of Indian tea consumed in this country to the total duty paid was therefore about 27-6 per cent., while of the total quantity delivered—that is to say, including the exports and transshipments from this country it was little over 20 per cent. We have already pointed out that the exports duty upon tea in China is two and a-half taels of Haiquan's sycee per picul at the shipping ports, which goes to pay the interest of the Chinese loan; besides, there is the Lekin, or squeezes up country as they are called in China, while there is no duty whatever charged in India upon the teas exported thence. To this, to a great extent, we attribute the rapid expansion of the Indian trade. The deliveries of Indian teas in Great Britain in the 1870 were 13,500,000lb.; in 1875 they had nearly doubled, having been 23,219,000lb.; and last year they had nearly doubled again, having reached 43,835,000lb.

COFFEE.—The public auctions have reopened, with an improved tone all round; 436 casks, 219 barrels and bags plantation Ceylon realised 1s. to 2s., and on fine coloury 3s. advance. Small to low middling, 71s. to 84s.; middling grayish, 87s. to 89s.; ditto, coloury, 90s. to 91s.; good to fine middling, 95s. to 102s.; bold, 106s. 6d. to 109s.; superior, 115s. to 116s.; 311 bags East India, medium to bold grayish, 80s. to 93s.; 1,862 bags Guatemala sold well, at 1s. advance; ordinary brownish, 56s. to 57s. 6d.; fox to fair greenish, 60s. to 66s. 6d.; coloury, 70s. to 80s. 6d.; 2,050 bags other foreign were chiefly held for higher rates and withdrawn.

JUTE.—About 5,500 bales sold, for arrival, at steady prices.

COFFEE.—Small public sale:—viz., 181 casks, 119 barrels and bags, went at yesterday's advance. 339 bags washed red dearer, at 67s. 6d. to 78s.

RICE.—qu'et. 2,000 bags Madras by auction bought in at 8s. The Brokers' Association Circular reports market firm for cargo SALTPETRE again dearer. 600 bags on the spot at 23s. 9d. to 24s. for 7½ lb. to 5½ lb., refraction. For arrival, 350 tons, via Canal, at 23s., August-September shipment.

COTTON.—Hardly anything doing, either on the spot or afloat. Prices unchanged. Forward delivery, American August-September, 6 13-16d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

MONDAY EVENING.

COFFEE steady. Business of limited extent, at full prices.
TEA.—There have been some small public sales of new season's. China teas have sustained late value; Indian teas have sold at firm rates.

COLONIAL HANDBOOKS, MAPS, &c

NOW READY.

CANADA—including Ontario,
North-West Territory, Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia, &c
With New Coloured Map. Crown 8vo., 288 pp. Cloth, 5s.
"Athenaeum," June 25, 1881.—"Full of information and statistics, which ought to prove very serviceable
to any visitor to the Dominion."

"Times."—"Under the above title Messrs. Silver have brought out much more than a mere "Handbook to Canada," an historical, political, social, geographical, and topographical guide for the use of travellers and settlers
over the greater portion of our North-American possessions.
The need of such a work, at once handy, comprehensive,
and trustworthy, has long been felt both by intending settlers and by readers at home, who are surprised, and not unnaturally, at the scanty information about so important a territory which is accessible to them. The volume is illustrated by a map, showing the whole extent of the Canadian Confederation from the shores of the Atlantic to those of the Pacific, and exhibiting all the details of inland communication, whether by Railway or the long chain of inland lakes. Those who have friends in British Columbia, Manitoba, &c., will find this map most useful; and it may be added that the historical chapters are full of materials for the future historian of Canada, or for the writer of an article on that subject in an encyclopaedia.

"Manitoba Daily Free Press."—"Comprised in
this book is a mass of valuable information, which cannot fail to impress every reader with an intelligent idea of the great resources and capabilities of our country. In fact, we are convinced that in the words of the preface, a comprehensive, reliable, and at the same time cheap and handy work has been produced, which will furnish the kind of information most sought for in regard to the Dominion, and especially in regard to Manitoba and the North West territories. We have every reason to think that this handbook to Canada is one of the best contributions to immigration literature yet produced. It is also very handsomely got up tastefully bound, and very well
printed."

"Graphic."—"We are already acquainted with Messrs.
Silver's Handbooks to Australasia and South Africa.
They are concisely written, accurate in information,
and full of practical details. The same praise may be accorded to the volume now before us, which comprises
a survey of the whole of British North America, the reader's researches being aided by an excellent map. To the intending emigrant the descriptions of Manitoba and British Columbia will be especially attractive."

Colonies and the rapid advances they have made since their very recent foundation. It is a creditable and useful, and, we believe, trustworthy publication."

'Guide' for the assistance and instruction of those who propose to try their fortunes as stock-raisers abroad, and

THE "PISTON" FREEZING MACHINE (ASH'S PATENT)

The "Piston" Freezing Machine Freezing and Moulding Dessert Ices, Icing Wines, and making Block Ice.

Ash's "PISTON" FREEZING MACHINE is the most effective and economical method of freezing known. It is rapidly becoming a part of the "cuisine" in the establishments of the aristocracy of this country; it has received the highest patronage, and is used in all parts of the world. By this process Ice Creams are frozen in shapes ready for table—an operation never before accomplished—entirely superseding the use of ice pots and moulds; it also forms a Wine Cooler and produces Blocks of Ice. When not used with the usual ice and salt mixture, as on board ships, in the Tropics, &c., Ash's Freezing Powders are most effective, and guaranteed to succeed.

Price of the Machines from 50s. each

The "Piston" Freezing Machine (without the Fittings) forming a complete Wine Cooler.

ASH, 1872.

By this invention Economy in Ice, increased space, an uniform low temperature, and a ventilated dry atmosphere are attained. Whether the ice placed in these safes be much or little, the same low temperature is produced, and, moreover, the lowest temperature generated by any given quantity of ice is maintained day by day until the ice is dissolved.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE,

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say had been sworn to.—See Times, 18th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s., 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanied each bottle.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 16, 1881.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, July 26; Madras and Allahabad, July 24; Calcutta, July 23.

THE official report on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending July 12 states that the distribution of rainfall in Southern, Western, and Central India, including the Central Provinces, Hyderabad, Berar, Mysor, and Coorg, has, with a few exceptions, been much the same as it was last week. The want of more rain is still felt in the southern districts of the Madras Presidency and in the eastern districts of the Mysor State; but in the western portion of the Mysor territory prospects have much improved. The rainfall has also been sufficient in most districts of the Bombay Presidency and in Baroda, though more is still needed in parts of the Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country. In Northern India, and more particularly in the Punjab, agricultural prospects have been much improved by a more general rainfall. In some districts, however, of the North Western Provinces and Oudh the monsoon has as yet been weak, and the weather has continued to be too dry. There has been a break in Assam, and in a few Bengal districts the transplantation of the late rice would be facilitated by more plentiful rain. In British Burma prospects continue favourable. On the whole, it may be said that the rainfall of the week has been copious and widespread. General prospects are good, though they would be improved by more wet weather in the Deccan, in parts of the Madras Presidency, of the Mysor State, and of the North Western Provinces and Oudh, as well as in one, at least, of the States of Rajputana.

ON August 9 the Times correspondent at Lahore telegraphed as follows in reference to the threatened famine in Mysor:—

"Light showers have just fallen in Bangalore, but the crops are fast withering, and prices are rising. In Mysor the prospects are very bad."

THE total fall of rain in the "light showers" above noticed does not seem to have been anywhere more than a quarter of an inch. The Times Calcutta correspondent, telegraphing last Sunday, gives some further account of the very serious state of affairs:—

"The official weather and crop report from Mysor published yesterday in the Gazette of India is somewhat more hopeful, or at least less desponding, than private advices from that province led us to expect. The reports state that 1-16 of an inch of rain fell in Bangalore on the 11th inst.; that there had been a smaller fall on the previous day; that about a quarter of an inch fell in other districts, and that fears of the total failure of the rice crops, the chief food staple, are believed to be somewhat abating. The report, however, goes on to admit that the crops are withering, prices are rising, and more rain is wanted within the next ten days. The Supreme Government says that it is kept fully informed and is carefully watching the situation.

"The Pioneer has published a telegram, dated Bangalore, the 9th inst., to the effect that the Maharaja has issued an order stating that the prospects have now become decidedly unfavourable, and that unless there is abundant rain within the next few days there must be a local famine of some severity. It is proposed to make a railway from Bangalore to Tunkur and Siptur as a relief work, and the district officers have been instructed to prepare all necessary relief measures."

THE Government of India has resolved to equip and maintain, in the Punjab, a brigade of all arms, with transport animals and everything ready for marching at a moment's notice. This is the most important news of the week, telegraphed from Calcutta on Sunday, August 14; and is in the direction of the fulfilment, to the letter, of all we have predicted as the certain results of the masterly inactivity policy. Funk and masterly inactivity beyond the frontier mean enormous military expenditure behind the frontier. This has been the consistent doctrine of those who have advocated a manly and English policy in India, who have been overwhelmed with opprobrium by Midlothian and the Radicals, as Jingoese, Russophobes, and so on. This standing armament on a war footing in the Punjab, we are expressly told on what is clearly official authority, is "meant as a general measure of precaution, and has nothing to do with the complications in Afghanistan." If this be the case, things are evidently come to a pretty pass in India. Here we have, in the Punjab—a province that is already one huge encampment, with the vast military cantonments of Umballa, Meean Meer, Rawul Pindi, and elsewhere—the ruling power standing as it were with its loins girded and its lights burning. That a cowardly policy would turn out infinitely the most costly in the end we have always prophesied; we can only hope that the cost will only be the money cost of such armaments as that which is now announced. The Times telegram is as follows:—

"The Indian Government, acting on the recommendation of the Commander in Chief, has issued orders that a brigade of all arms, consisting of troops stationed in the Punjab, shall be fully equipped, with transport animals, on the Cabul scale, and shall be always kept in readiness for active service. Its present composition will be as follows:—M Battery 3rd Brigade and C Battery 4th Brigade, Royal Artillery; the Prince of Wales's Royal Canadian Regiment; the 11th Bengal Lancers; the 14th Sikhs; the 21st Punjab Native Infantry; and the 1st Company of Sappers and Miners. This is meant as a general measure of precaution and has nothing to do with the complications in Afghanistan; nor is it true, as has been reported, that the brigade is intended to reinforce the Quetta garrison."

In combination with the above telegram, we would ask our readers to consider another of the same date from the Times correspondent at Chaman, who says of Ayub Khan that "he has also written to Colonel St. John professing his desire for the friendship of England; but he has begun to persecute and despoil some of our Kandahar friends, mostly the Farsiwans. Contributions of money are also being extorted from the principal merchants, and the Hindus have been obliged to return to the red turban and the black girdle, badges of inferiority, which they had abandoned since our arrival in 1879. This proceeding is likely to please and pacify the hundred and fifty millions of our Hindu fellow-subjects whose honour and safety are confided to the guardianship of the present Government of India. And the equipment of the Punjab Flying Column suggests that masterly inactivity has at least one advantage: it can employ in 'police' duties the forces that it is compelled to equip 'as a general measure of precaution.'"

On Afghan affairs the Calcutta telegram of the Times, dated August 14, has the following:—

"There has been very little news from Afghanistan during the past week. The report that Ayub Khan had set out for Cabul turns out to be premature. Up to the date of the latest advices he was still at Kandahar and showed no signs of moving. He is said to be busily engaged in recruiting and searching for arms, and his requisitions appear to be enforced with a strictness which is going far to diminish his popularity. The Ameer's soldiers who deserted to Ayub Khan at and after the battle of Karez-i-Atta are reported to be deserting back again to the Ameer and going off nightly in small parties. One entire regiment marched out of Kandahar during the night to rejoin the Ameer's force at Kelat-i-Ghilzai. Mahomed Hasan Khan has been appointed Governor of Zamindawar, but there is not yet any appearance of his having succeeded in conciliating that province. On the other hand, the Ameer has a large and increasing force—some reports say 5,000 regulars—at Kelat-i-Ghilzai, and the envoy at Simla states that his master has a strong army at Cabul, quartered, for the most part, in the Sherpur cantonments, and that he is in no want either of money or arms. On the whole, the Ameer's prospects look more hopeful than they did a week ago, and, if only his troops remain faithful and the Cabul chiefs and people remain quiet, it is by no means impossible that he may yet succeed in retrieving his fortunes. The longer Ayub Khan remains inactive the better will be the chance of such a result. It seems strange that the latter should make so long a delay in following up his victory. Possibly he may be waiting till after the Ramazan, the Mahomedan Lent, which ends next week. The Ameer's envoy at Simla has not yet had an interview with the Viceroy, and the object of the mission is still kept a secret."

THE Ramazan is causing a lull in Afghanistan, which Lord Ripon probably thinks is caused by the returning activity of the Ameer or the ebbing valour of Ayub. The Chaman correspondent of the Times, telegraphing on August 14, says:—

"There is little to record from here this week, the interest now being transferred to Cabul, whence as yet no news has arrived. As predicted last week, any idea Ayub may have had of an immediate advance on Cabul has been completely checked by the news of Khelat-i-Ghilzai being held in force by the Ameer's troops. All the principal officials, except the unfortunate Shams-ud-din, are now collected there, and are said to have two fresh regiments of infantry from Cabul, one of those defeated on the 26th ult., a thousand or more regular cavalry, and six guns, while further reinforcements are on the way. On the other hand, reports have reached here that the southern Ghilzais have declared for Ayub Khan, and that communication between Ayub Khan and Cabul is interrupted. If they rise in force, as they did against General Stewart last year, Khelat-i-Ghilzai will hardly hold out, and Ayub will have a clear road to Cabul. He is, therefore, waiting quietly in Kandahar organising his army and collecting money by fair means or foul. It may be presumed that he is doing his best to excite the northern tribes against the Ameer."

The road to Kandahar is safe, but the traffic is still very scanty.

The following telegram has been received at the India-office from the Viceroy, dated Simla, August 13:—

"Following from St. John:—'The signs of a move from Kandahar to Cabul have ceased. Ayub's entire force is in the town. He is recruiting troops and distributing advance pay. The Cabuli soldiers continue to desert in small parties. Fifteen of the guns captured at Karez-i-Atta have been sent to Herat. Ameer's officers at Kelat are collecting supplies, but communication between Kelat and Cabul is said to be not open.'"

The Lahore correspondent of the Times telegraphs on August 14:—

"The news from Chaman tends to show that Ayub Khan has much difficulty in pacifying the Herati, Kandahari, and Cabuli troops. They are constantly quarrelling. This is a repetition of the state of things at Herat. The Cabulis are still deserting. The popular confidence appears to be slightly restored. Ayub has ordered the Hindus to wear a distinctive dress and he forbids them to ride on horseback. Ayub's efforts to levy money have been so far successful that he has been able to give some advances to the troops; but it now seems certain that he does not consider himself strong enough to march to Cabul. The Government has been informed that most of the guns captured at Karez-i-Atta have been sent to Herat; also, that the Ameer is continuing his efforts to strengthen his position in Central Afghanistan."

The latest telegrams about Afghan affairs are dated yesterday, August 15, from the Viceroy at Simla, from Reuter's agent at Bombay, and from the Times correspondent at Lahore; and they are all clearly only versions of the same official message. The Viceroy's telegram is as follows:—

"It is said that the Taraki Ghilzais in country east of Kelat have declared for Ayub and their chiefs gone to Kandahar. Report from Kandahar says that three regiments which accompanied Ayub from Herat have been disbanded in consequence of their refusal to march towards Cabul. Three fresh regiments have been ordered from Herat to Kandahar."

The Lahore recension of this intelligence is:—

"A report has reached Simla that Ayub Khan's Kandahari troops have refused to march to Cabul, and that, therefore, three regiments have been disbanded. However this may be, it is certain that parties of Ayub's forces have been deserting."

Whilst the Reuterian version is:—

"It is reported that Kandahar soldiers who accompanied Ayub Khan from Herat have refused to advance toward Cabul. Three regiments have consequently been disbanded."

In the words of the Eton Latin Grammar, Utrum horum mavis, accipe. When they do agree, their unanimity is wonderful.

An earlier telegram from the Viceroy to the India-office, dated August 8, was:—

"Following from St. John:—'Messages from Kandahar report all quiet there. The bulk of Ameer's infantry had eventually joined Ayub after battle, and accompanied him to Kandahar two days later. A complete regiment deserted and went off to Kelat. The Cabuli troops were afterwards kept in city. Merchants who arrived Chaman on 6th report Ayub had distributed Cabul regiments among his own infantry; also reported that 400 Cabuli soldiers have been disarmed and dismissed. Ayub sent a Durani chief with sowars to take possession of Khelat-i-Ghilzai. The chief returned, having met Cabuli horse foraging. Sahib Khan and Alizai chief of Zamindawar are at Kelat-i-Ghilzai with Gholam Hyder Khan, who has one regiment of infantry, three of cavalry, six guns. The principal maliks of Kadanai have been summoned to Kandahar. All quiet at Chaman and towards Kandahar, and in the Hurnai, Marri, and Kaker country.'"

And on August 9 the Times correspondent at Lahore telegraphed:—

"The plans for the prompt despatch of a brigade to Quetta in the event of necessity are now complete. All accounts point to the possibility of Ayub Khan being himself unable fully to sustain his authority, in which case the frontier might become affected."

The semi-official Journal de St. Petersburg, commenting upon Lord Hartington's reply on the 1st inst. in the House of Commons to Mr. Ashmead Bartlett's question respecting the annexation of the Akhal Turcoman country by Russia, says:—

"Lord Hartington might have been more explicit, inasmuch as the Russian Government has entered into no engagement with regard to Merv, and had not to give any such undertaking. The Russian Government has had due consideration for the anxiety manifested by the British Cabinet on this point, and has very frankly and amicably made known its intentions, which it had no motive in concealing, seeing that they were perfectly loyal and dictated solely by Russia's legitimate interests. Russia has no interest to serve in those regions beyond guaranteeing the tranquillity and security of her frontiers, but it is certain that this tranquillity and security may require precautionary measures of a more or less extended character in proportion to the danger created by the political situation in the immediate vicinity of Russian territory. Now, the openly hostile spirit of the late Lord Beaconsfield's policy in Europe and Asia necessarily increased Russia's legitimate apprehensions in the direction of the Turcoman steppes, and it was at that time that the Russian Government decided to undertake the expedition thus imposed upon it by circumstances. As regards the possible results of the expedition, the Russian Government was not called upon to make any engagements. Russia was resolved to establish on a solid basis the security of her possessions in those regions. This sole object of the expedition in no way, however, prevents due regard being paid to the interests of a Government which shows itself to be animated by friendly and pacific sentiments. We are persuaded that this loyal course will not only result in terminating a fatal antagonism which has no raison d'être, but will also establish the conviction of a complete solidarity of interests between the two Powers."

A good illustration of the irony of fate is to be found in the fact that our Radical contemporary, the Daily News, appears to have imposed on it by fortune the task of keeping English readers au courant with the progress of Russian intrigue in Central Asia. The enterprising special correspondent of that journal telegraphs from Meshed, August 15, 5.20 p.m., as follows:—

"Tekme Serdar, the Akhal Tekke military commander, who has lately returned from St. Petersburg, has arrived at Merv on a mission from the Russian Government to arrange terms of submission for the Turcomans. The success of his mission is very doubtful. A party of thirty Russian and Persian cavalry are surveying the course of the Keshef road, the proposed new boundary."

It is sometimes very difficult indeed to believe in the conscientiousness of the Radical blindness to the Russian menace; and it is, consequently, very cheering to get any confession, from a Radical source, of even the slightest perception of the importance of these Russian movements. The Daily News of this morning, in an editorial paragraph on the above telegram, demurely observes:—

"Merv is, as we have already pointed out, a much less suspicious object for Russian enterprise than Meshed, where our correspondent now is. The continued anarchy in Afghanistan fixes for the moment English interest in Russian movements upon the direct route to that unfortunate country."

If this goes on, we shall soon have Saul among the prophets.

The Times Calcutta correspondent announces that Sir Alfred Lyall, the Foreign Secretary, will leave India on furlough shortly, and will be succeeded by Mr. Charles Grant, Home Secretary. It has not yet been settled who will take the latter gentleman's place at the Home-office, but it is rumoured that it will be Mr. Mackenzie, now secretary to the Bengal Government.

WE have already stated the reasons why Col. Bradford, Mr. Henvey, or Col. Henderson ought to have been preferred to Mr. Grant for the Foreign-office. It is satisfactory, however, to know that the injustice—characteristic of the present regime in India—will not in this case be accompanied, as it has been in some other cases, by injury to the public interests, for Mr. Grant is likely to do credit to any appointment that may be conferred on him. And no better appointment could be made in his place than that of Mr. Mackenzie, Sir Ashley Eden's trusted lieutenant. Bengal has been so systematically slighted by the present Viceroy that we shall be glad to hear that this preferment has been given as an amende to the province, as well as a recognition of Mr. Mackenzie's great abilities and acknowledged success.

THE many friends of Sir Richard Meade, both in this country and in India, will read with indignation the attack on the reputation of that high-minded and gallant officer that has been dragged from the obscurity of an eccentric Anglo-Indian magazine by Mr. Richard's question in the House of Commons last Thursday. The Indian Services will be grateful to Mr. Onslow for his manly and straightforward question to Lord Hartington last night—"Whether the noble lord or the Indian Government thought there was the slightest foundation for the allegations against Sir R. Meade." It was of course impossible for the Secretary of State, before whom the case must sometime or other come for decision, to make any further statement than that which he had made in reply to Mr. Richard, for otherwise he might lay himself open to the accusation of being biased in favour of Sir Richard Meade. But the cheer that greeted Lord Hartington's statement on Thursday that "Sir R. Meade was a very distinguished officer, and hitherto of unblemished character," may be taken as a manifestation of the determination of all Englishmen that against such an officer, who has passed the best years of his life in devoted and successful service to his country, charges shall not be brought with impunity unless they can be fully maintained. It is, of course, clear that the case cannot rest where it is, and therefore we shall not presume to prejudge it in this place; but we may, without impropriety, say that there is not a man who knows Sir Richard Meade who does not feel perfectly certain that he will be able triumphantly to vindicate a reputation that stands as high as that of any of the greatest and best of our high-minded Indian administrators.

MORE troubles on our North East Frontier. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times on Sunday telegraphed:—

"News comes from Munneepore of the outbreak of a serious insurrection. No details have yet been received as to its cause or the names of the leaders; nor is it known whether it is in any way connected with the recent disturbances on the Munneepore and Burmese frontier. The Maharaja is putting it down with the utmost severity, and he is said to have already executed seventeen men and imprisoned 300."

WE are now informed of the reasons by which the Viceroy was "reluctantly compelled" to veto the Bombay Game Protection Act:—

"The Game Protection Act, lately passed by the Bombay Legislative Council, has been disallowed by the Viceroy. The main reason given for this step is that the public interests involved in the protection of birds and fish are not, in his Excellency's opinion, sufficiently strong to warrant any interference with the habits of the rural population in the manner contemplated by the Act."

WE believe that Lord Ripon is right: times are too ticklish in India, thanks to our own recent follies and weaknesses, to allow of any unnecessary troubling of the waters.

WE understand that the proposal which emanated from the Army Commission, lately assembled at Simla, that the offices of Commander in Chief of the Bombay and Madras Armies should be abolished, and that India should in future be divided into four army corps, under lieutenant generals who would be subordinated to the Commander in Chief at headquarters, is likely to be carried out early next year, all difficulties which stood in the way of the change having now been overcome. Under this arrangement Lieut. Gen. the Hon. Arthur Hardinge, C.B., will remain, as at present, at Bombay, Major General Sir F. S. Roberts, V.C., G.C.B., will have command of the Madras Army Corps, and Lieut. Gen. Sir Robert O. Bright, K.C.B., will be offered one of the vacancies in Bengal, the fourth being reserved for a general officer of the local army or Indian Staff Corps.

THE committee on Mountain Batteries now sitting at Simla have agreed to recommend that all European mountain batteries should be furnished with screw guns without delay. The experience of the Afghan campaign is said to have clearly proved the superiority of that weapon to the nine-pounder horse artillery gun.

ANOTHER triumph for women's rights, this time in Madras. But the Times correspondent at Calcutta, in telegraphing it, seems to be ignorant of the fact that Miss Pogson's nearest relative is the distinguished Government astronomer of Madras, Mr. Robert Pogson, C.I.E.; and since the meteorological reporter necessarily works under the shadow of the wing of the Government astronomer, the Madras authorities have not run any very great risk in making the new appointment. The correspondent telegraphs:—

"It has been reserved for Madras, the so-called benighted presidency, to be the first to recognise the claims of women to important official positions. The Gazette announces the appointment of a lady, Miss Pogson, to be meteorological reporter to the Government of that presidency. Miss Pogson has for some years discharged with great ability the duties of assistant Government astronomer."

THE Times publishes the following mysterious telegram from its Lahore correspondent, dated yesterday, August 15:—

"Sir Donald Stewart leaves Simla in the first week of November for Assam direct, accompanied by Generals Greaves and McGregor and Col. L. F. Chapman. Sir D. Stewart will return to Calcutta by the 8th of December."

It may be imagined that the Commander in Chief's journey to Assam has some connection with the Manipur insurrection, noticed in last Sunday's telegrams; but if the outbreak is of such importance as to suggest a visit of the chief military authorities in India to the neighbourhood during the coming cold weather we surely ought to have heard more about it ere now. It may be that it is thought likely that the Manipur disturbances may spread along the Burma frontier; or it may be that Sir Donald is only going to Assam to settle with the Chief Commissioner the question of the Kohima outpost and other small details of our sempiternal north east frontier troubles.

THE Pioneer of July 16 says that the Commander in Chief is going to visit Assam and Cachar, only for the purpose of inspecting the garrisons and cantonments "in that remote part of India." But it appears doubtful whether the Pioneer, in assigning such an inadequate reason for a journey announced with so many flourishes of trumpets, can have learnt the whole truth about it.

MANY of our readers will sympathise with the Archbishop of Canterbury in the logical and temperate appeal he made to Lord Kimberley last night on behalf of the small endowments of the Anglican and Presbyterian Churches in Ceylon. His Grace showed clearly enough that the Government made an invidious distinction between Buddhist endowments and Christian, in hostility to the latter; and this hostility is far more unreasonable in Ceylon, where such a large share of the wealth and intelligence of the country belongs to English and native Christians, than it would be in India, where the Christians are an insignificant minority. But the influence of Bradlaughism in the present Ministry is strong, and the two Christian endowments are doubtless doomed. Even the Lord Chancellor seems to be too much bound by the ties of party to enter his protest; and Lord Carnarvon was compelled to content himself with a warning of the dangers and difficulties that must attend any sudden measure of disestablishment.

It appears from the recent census that of the total population of Calcutta and its suburbs, amounting to 684,658 souls, two-thirds are males, and that of these the great majority belong to the middle period of life. Mr. Beverley, the special census officer, observes that the number of females in the city remains pretty constant, while the young under twenty years of age have almost invariably increased from census to census, showing that the resident population is growing, and that the decrease in the population (the numbers were in 1876 about 686,684) is more apparent than real. So far as it is real, the causes suggested are the displacement of the poorer classes by the improvements effected by the municipality and the Port Commissioners, and the prevalence of drowsical fever in the southern suburbs in the beginning of last year.

THE report of the Government cinchona plantations in Southern India indicates the astonishing progress made since slips of this valuable tree were first planted in that district, twenty years ago. The number of trees now planted out is more than 4½ millions. At present the greater part of the bark produced appears to be consumed in supplying the medical depots at Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras; but upwards of 3,000lb. was last year sold to the public, and the annual yield is rapidly increasing with the growth of the trees. The actual profit last year on the capital of the plantation is stated to have been 8 per cent. There can no longer be any doubt that India is destined to take a leading place in the production of bark and quinine, so long a practical monopoly of the Peruvians.

THE development of the gold mining industry in Southern India has attracted the attention of English capitalists to the rich promise of that industry in other parts of the world; and it seems very likely that the discoveries in the Wainad will tend to a revival of gold mining generally, that may lead to important results in the Exchange Market. One of the most promising schemes that have been started under this impetus is the Tapada Gold and Antimony Mining Company, whose prospectus appears to-day in our advertising columns. The mines which are to be worked by this company are in the immediate vicinity of Oporto, in Portugal. As an antimony mine of great wealth the concern has for some time been worked with much success—last year a sum of £7,500 was obtained as net profit from this source alone, after paying all expenses of working, &c. Recently a cargo of quartz from the mine has been assayed by Messrs. Johnson and Sons, assayers to the Royal Mint, and the result on a crushing of about forty-four tons was a yield of 2oz. 5dwt. per ton. Mr. Bidder, the consulting engineer, states that he has ascertained, from an invoice dated July 2, that about six tons of quartz were sent to the King of Saxony's Halsbruckner Smelting Works, at Freiberg, Saxony, and the payment for the gold extracted amounted to over £15 per ton of quartz, representing about four ounces of gold to the ton. On these magnificent results the company has been formed, and we wish it all success. The direction seems a strong one, including, as it does, a director of the Richmond Company, one of the most successful of the day.

THE Englishman says it is finally determined that Sir George Couper makes over charge of his office and leaves India in April next.

THE Government of India is reported to be at present considering the advisability of rescinding the rules under which a member of the Civil Service retains a lien on his appointment when he goes on furlough, it having been found that, under the rule as it at present stands, changes are constantly occurring among the holders of various appointments.

MESSRS. CARRITT AND Co.'s fortnightly market report gives the following on the Calcutta tea market:—

"The two public sales held during the fortnight, on the 14th and 21st instant, aggregate 19,112 packages, all of which found buyers. There was a good assortment from all the producing districts, although from Assam the teas still continue to arrive but slowly. The quality throughout was good, last year's teas leaving no room for comparison with this season's production, which is most noticeable perhaps in Assam kinds. At the first of the above sales prices must be quoted about 2d. lower for finest grades, excepting Assams, and about 1½d. for other descriptions, except common Souchongs and broken teas, at which rates there was a good demand. At the latter sales former rates were well maintained in most instances. We would call the attention of planters to the uselessness of sending down broken descriptions packed in boxes, as they are not now realising higher values than when packed in chest."

THE Times of India gives the following obituary of the week ending July 26:—Mr. Charles Lazarus, Dr. B. L. Dutt, and Mr. A. A. H. Davidson.

ASH SHUFAAH: THE MAHOMEDAN "RIGHT OF PRE-EMPTION."

THE following letter on the above subject has been addressed to the Editor of the Times:—

"SIR,—It may interest some of your readers to know that the Shufaa, which Dr. Badger has so well explained, is a survival of the early stage of society known as the village community. The early village was simply an association of persons—usually blood relatives—banded together for mutual assistance. Out of this arose various privileges and duties, and among the former the "right of pre-emption." In Germany the right is shown by Von Maurer, in his "Dorfverfassung," to have extended not only to houses and lands, but to the produce of the soil. Sir Henry Maine, in his "Village Communities," states that in India the village property cannot be divided without the consent of all the members of the family, and I recollect similar rules in the older Indian law books. Every one will remember the right of pre-emption exercised by the Hebrew next of kin, or goel; and the feeling that prompts the rule is indicated in Burckhardt's remark that in Arabia a man usually marries his deceased brother's wife in order to keep the family property together. It is true that the Mahomedan law, in its present shape, shows no connection with family relationships, but depends entirely upon contiguity of habitation; yet this fact only lends it additional interest, because it illustrates the law enunciated by Sir H. Maine in his "Early History of Institutions," that consanguinity tends to give way to land as the basis of social life.—Yours faithfully, JOHN FENTON, 20, John-street, Adelphi, W.C., August 4."

THE INDIA COUNCIL DRAFTS.

A CORRESPONDENT writes to the Times as follows on the above subject:—

"It is stated on good authority that the India Council disposed yesterday of 10 lakhs (say £100,000 nominal) of their bills, and it is felt that public announcement should have been made of the fact. It would seem only reasonable that the Indian banks, who are the habitual takers of these drafts, should be informed on the subject, as it might influence their tenders to know that a certain amount had already been taken up, presumably by one of their number, at a given price. Should the India Council continue to base their minimum on the price of silver, the bills will be liable to remain unsold when silver is in demand for other quarters than India at enhanced rates, or when the Indian demand is for the bazaars only."

Commenting on the above letter, the City Editor remarks:—

"Our correspondent is a qualified exponent of the market opinion as to the conduct of the Indian Council in its sales of council bills, and his observations will no doubt receive attention in the proper quarter, but we believe the advisers of the council in this matter are well satisfied with the results of the plan they have adopted in fixing an official minimum, and are confident that the market will be compelled to conform to the new system. The contention between the council and the Indian banks is really a case of the 'higgling of the market,' and there can be no doubt at least that on public grounds the Indian Council is justified in seeking to allot its bills at the best possible rate. That applications are made for bills and allotments made in the period between the days when tenders are officially received would seem to show that persons in the market refrain from tendering when they really want the bills. The Indian Council is, of course, under no obligation to announce to the world what it sells irrespective of the allotments made upon 'public tenders.' It is entitled to make the best bargain it can in any way it likes."

THE ASIATIC SOCIETY.

A MEETING of the Asiatic Society of Bengal was held on July 6; C. H. Tawney, Esq., M.A., vice-president, in the chair.

Dr. A. F. R. Hoernle exhibited a sealing wax impression of a curious old seal of baked clay found by Mr. F. S. Grouse at Bulandshahr. It is of all oval shape and is divided by two parallel lines into two compartments, in the upper of which are two devices, one appearing to be a conch shell and the other a wing, possibly intended for a chakwa. In the lower compartment is a name in early characters, probably about the 5th century A.D., which Mr. Grouse reads as "Sattila."

Mr. V. Ball exhibited a stone implement made of magnetic iron ore which has been forwarded to him by Mr. W. G. Olpherts, who had received it simply as a specimen of iron ore. Its history has not yet been fully ascertained, but it is believed it was obtained somewhere in the Nerbudda valley. It is the only known specimen in which the magnetic oxide of iron has been made into a chipped instrument.

The following papers were read :—

1. The revenues of the Mughal Empire, by Edward Thomas, F.R.S. In this paper the author refers to Mr. C. J. Rodgers' paper on the copper coins of Akbar (published in Part I. of the Journal Asiatic Society for 1880), in which Mr. Rodgers gives his reason for believing that Mr. Thomas is mistaken in his estimate of Akbar's revenue, and that instead of its being £32,000,000 it should be £3,200,000. Mr. Thomas showed that the reading of the inscription on a coin upon which Mr. Rodgers based his view is erroneous.

2. Description of a new species of butterfly belonging to the Genus Dodona, by L. de Niceville. This paper describes the eighth known species of the genus Dodona. All the species occur in India. This species being remarkable for the length of the tail. Mr. de Niceville proposes to name it Dodona longicaudata.

3. Sketch of the history of the fossils of the Indian Gondwana system, by O. Feistmantel, M.D., palæontologist Geological survey of India. The fossils of the Indian Gondwana system, the most important of the series of sedimentary rocks in Peninsular India, have now been under examination for several years. Various memoirs have been published from time to time treating of the fossils of this rock system in stratigraphical order, but no general review of the fossils in biological order has as yet been written. This paper is an attempt to supply the deficiency, and is on a similar plan to that adopted by Mr. R. Lydekker in his "Sketch of the History of the Fossil Vertebrata," which was lately published in the Journal of the Asiatic Society. A general review of the literature referring to the Gondwana fossils is given, and a review of the various groups of the system with regard to the occurrence of fossils. Then follows the enumeration of the fossils (vegetable and animal) in a systematic biological order with indications of their geological distribution.

4. New or little known mollusca of the Indo-Malayan Fauna, by G. Nevill, C.M.Z.S. This paper contains complete descriptions of certain species of mollusca which were only briefly described in the author's "Handlist of Mollusca in the Indian Museum." In addition to these there are descriptions of many new and important species lately discovered by Surgeon Major R. Hungerford at the Philippines, in Formosa, &c., as well as some new Rissoina which are being figured by Dr. Weinkauff for the new edition of the "Conchylic Cabinet." There is also described a new species of the brackish water genus Fairbankia discovered by Mr. Fedden.

Mr. Fedden made some remarks regarding the locality in which he found the rissoid shell described in Mr. Nevill's paper.

5. Additional remarks on the identification of ancient diamond mines in India, by V. Ball, M.A., F.G.S. In this paper the author finally adopts the view that the mine called Raolconda by Tavernier is identical with the modern Ramulkota. With the aid of Mr. King, the localities mentioned by Tavernier as intervening between Golconda and Raolconda have been fully identified with places between Golconda and Ramulkota, where there are still traces of former extensive mines.

INDIAN ARMY PENSIONS.

WE have received the following memorandum from the India-office for publication :—

"The Secretary of State for India in Council has had under consideration the question of revising the scale of military pensions for European commissioned officers of the Indian army, and a despatch has been sent to the Government of India instructing them to issue a general order announcing the changes which have been decided on by him.

"For officers who entered the Staff Corps prior to or on Sept. 12, 1866, and for officers of the late Indian cavalry and infantry who have not joined the Staff Corps (commonly known as officers of the local service), both classes being entitled to succeed to colonel's allowances after twelve years of service as lieutenant colonel's, the revised pensions are :—

After a service of 20 years	... £288 pension yearly.
Do. 24 do.	... 420 do.
Do. 28 do.	... 571 do.
Do. 32 do.	... 783 do.

"For officers on what is called the general list i.e., those who entered the service under new conditions of appointment, and who have not subsequently joined the staff corps, and for officers who have entered the staff corps since the 12th September, 1866, both of which classes attain, after 38 year service, to a pension of £750 a year, with a further prospect at uncertain dates of succession to colonel's allowances on an establishment of one colonel's allowance to every 30 officers, the revised pensions are :—

After a service of 20 years	... £250 pension yearly.
24 "	... 365 " "
28 "	... 500 " "
32 "	... 700 " "
38 "(as now)	... 750 " "

"Furlough service for these pensions will continue to be governed by the furlough regulations under which each officer may be serving.

"Officers will be allowed, under rules to be hereafter laid down, to commute at any period, on or after retirement, a portion, not exceeding one-third, of their pensions; the capitalised sum being payable in rupees in India, the sterling sum being converted at the official rate of exchange for the year in which the payment is made.

"Full power is reserved to the Secretary of State to temporarily suspend or limit retirement, whenever it may appear to him necessary in the interest of the public service to do so.

"After the present year the special terms of retirement for lieutenant colonels of twenty-eight years' service and upwards will not be renewed.

"The new pensions come into effect from July 1, 1881.

"The scale of pensions for officers thereafter joining the Staff Corps will shortly be issued.

"Regulations limiting the tenure of regimental commands and regimental service will also be notified at a very early date."

On the above, the secretary to the Defence Fund Committee writes as follows :—

"Sir,—I believe many of your readers are anxious to know what course the committee whom I represent proposes to take with reference to the new Indian pension rules? Will you permit me to inform them through your columns that the committee has decided to accept the new scale, for, though it may not satisfy all, it is none the less a very substantial concession, and one that it would be useless, if it were becoming, for the committee to attack. On the other hand, the committee will devote their utmost energies towards procuring an overwhelming representation of the necessity for change in the new scheme where it perpetuates the abuse of penalties on account of leave. They will also endeavour to obtain for officers in the Staff Corps due recognition of all their service in British regiments out of India. A report and other documents will be ready very shortly, and every officer interested will then be able to procure full instructions. Nothing can more clearly show the absurdity of the system of penalties on account of authorised leave than the example actually given in paragraph twenty-two of the 1868 Furlough Regulations. There, in computing the service for pension of an officer whose total service from date of arrival in India is thirty years, his supposed amount of leave during that period is given as ten years, of which he can reckon only four for pension, leaving him with a penalty of six years—that is to say, only twenty-four years' service to pension. Now, it is absolutely impossible for a man in this position to qualify for the thirty-two years' pension without being thirty-eight years in the service, as he would have these six years to make good before he could count thirty-two towards pension. But with his thirty-eighth year would come the higher annuity towards which all leave counts. It is easy to see these penalties on account of leave are in effect a premium on senility.—Yours obediently, W. ALLISON, barrister at law, secretary. 22, Grosvenor-mansions, August 15."

ASSAM RAILWAYS AND TRADING COMPANY.

UNDER the above title a company has been formed, with a capital of £350,000, in 35,000 preferred shares of £10 each, entitled to a preference in capital and to a cumulative preferential dividend of 8 per cent. per annum (accruing from the date of each call), and payable off at 20 per cent. per annum, as provided by the articles of association, and £43,750 deferred shares of £1 each, entitled to surplus profits. Of these £43,750 will be allotted as fully paid to the vendors, and the remaining 35,000, also credited as fully paid, will be issued to the holders of the preferred shares so soon as £3 per share shall have been paid on the latter. Subscriptions are now invited for the preferred shares, of which 25,000 have already been applied for. The object of the company is the construction and working railways under guarantee by the Secretary of State for India in Council, also for the working coal, timber, petroleum, &c., in Assam for establishing a service of steamers on the Brahmapootra River, &c. The company has agreed with the view of effecting these objects to acquire the following concessions under agreements between the Secretary of State for India in Council and Messrs. Shaw, Finlayson, and Co.:—1st. The right to construct and work a railway, of one metre gauge, from the terminus of the steamer lines on the bank of the Brahmapootra near Dibrugarh, along the Government road towards Sadiya to the fifty-first mile, and a branch line, about twenty-four miles in length, to the Makum coalfields, near the Dehing River. 2nd. The right to open and work coal and iron mines within an area of thirty square miles in the Makum coalfields. 3rd. The right to cut, use, and export timber within a distance of one and a half miles on either side of the Makum Branch Railway. The railway concession is in perpetuity, the Secretary of State for India in Council having given a guarantee for 20 years from the opening of the railway and branch of not exceeding 100,000 rupees per annum, but in the event of the net earnings yielding 5 per cent. per annum the Government guarantee will not come into operation. The guarantee accrues from the opening of any section of the line. The concession grants free of cost the use of the Government lands and roads required as the site of the railway and the right until five years after the completion of the line to cut and use timber for the purposes of the railway, either in construction or as fuel, without payment. The Secretary of State for India may regulate tolls, but not so as to reduce the earnings below 12 per cent. per annum, the Government having also the power to purchase the line at the end of any five years on paying a premium of 20 per cent. in excess of the value of the lines as a dividend-paying investment. The coal concession includes the right to work iron ore, and is for a term of twenty years within an area of thirty square miles, and for a further term of thirty years within an area of at least four square miles, at a dead rent of fifty rupees (about £4 3s. 4d.) per square mile per annum, merged in a royalty of 3 annas (3¾d.) per ton of coal, and 2 annas (2½d.) per ton of iron ore. The license to cut timber is for a term of twenty years, at royalties varying from Rs. 2 to Rs. 6 per tree, according to the kind of tree. The engineer of the company estimates that the railway can be constructed for £3,000 per mile, and that a traffic may be relied upon sufficient to pay 12 per cent. per annum on the outlay, and that there exists more than a hundred million tons of coal of superior quality which can be readily sold at 10s. per ton, and that the timber is of very superior size and quality.

THE WEARING OF DECORATIONS.

SIR,—I was very glad to see the several letters in your journal of last week upon the subject of wearing medals, &c., in mufti. I have had my ribbons sewn on to my evening dress coat, and there they will remain until new ones are required, remarks or no remarks. I am proud of my honours, they having been conferred upon me for real work. An officer who is a K.C.B. or K.C.M.G. wears the star and ribbon of the Order when in evening dress; therefore, why should not others have the advantage of showing that they too have served? Why officers are so bashful in this matter is a puzzle to yours, faithfully,

A LIEUTENANT COLONEL.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

LORD STANLEY OF ALDERLEY ON DAR-UL-HARB.* A PAPER by Mr. Baillie, published in the July number of the Journal of the Asiatic Society, on the "Duty of Muhammadans in British India," is chiefly interesting for the discussion which it evoked at the meeting at which it was read. Lord Stanley of Alderley got up and reproached the author with ignoring the fact that the question "had been fully discussed in the Pioneer, an Indian newspaper written in English and much used by Indians." His lordship appears to be entirely ignorant of the fact that the question has been fully discussed, not only in the Pioneer, but in every other Indian journal, magazine, and review. At the time of the Patna Wahabi trials it was the stock question of the Indian press; and a considerable volume on the subject was brought out in London by Mr. W. W. Hunter, LL.D., C.I.E., the Director General of Statistics wherein most of the original documents were reproduced. The naive description of the Allahabad paper, which represents it as the oracle of the wigwam, will be amusing to Anglo-Indians; and the whole tone of Lord Stanley of Alderley's speech well illustrates the impossibility of home-staying Englishmen, however industrious, getting any real insight into the political or social conditions of Indian life. His lordship talks learnedly, and yet his remarks are no more those of an expert than are the tiger-and-palm-tree sketches of our youth true representations of the realities of India. It is, therefore, not a matter for surprise that the speaker should have stumbled on a notable discovery before sitting down; he declared that "the proclamation of the Queen as Empress of India had not in any way affected the status of Haiderabad," which, therefore, is "completely a Dar-ul-Islam." Why the noble lord draws any distinction in kind—they may and do differ in degree of feudal subordination—between one feudatory of the British Indian Empire and the rest, is by no means evident. If the Nizam of Haiderabad was not affected in status by the Imperial proclamation, the questions arise, were the Begum of Bhopal, the Nawab of Bhawalpur, the Nawab of Rampur? Surely Lord Stanley of Alderley will not allege that there is any fundamental difference between the feudal subordination of the Nizam to the Empire and that of the other great feudatories we have just named? The words actually used by his lordship might well be taken to indicate a belief in the independence of the Nizam; and we think it is to be regretted that a member of the Asiatic Society, speaking in public with the authority of an hereditary legislator, should on such a subject permit himself to use such ambiguous language.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

THE NATIVE PRESS ON PERSIAN POLITICS.

WHAT is British diplomacy in foreign affairs? It is a decaying thing. It is becoming a mere tradition. Now, without sharing the fears of Russophobists, we may ask whether British influence at Teheran is at all of an active and potent character? Perhaps the Minister Plenipotentiary is powerless. If so, it is a contradiction. A plenipotentiary must be so armed with power by the Government that accredits him to a foreign Court that he may do something in the interests of his country. At any rate he ought not to be so powerless as to sit with folded hands while his rivals in diplomacy gain the ears of the sovereign. But it would seem that this is about the present plight of the British Minister at Teheran. Perhaps he is tied down by colourless instructions from Downing-street. In the meantime the Czar's representative is plying his profession pretty pleasantly. He is flirting with the imbecile Shah, and is now reported to be hankering after a slice of the Persian frontier of Sarakhs. Russia knows well enough how to obtain handsome concessions of really "scientific" and most useful frontiers from semi-barbarous potentates. And why cannot England, for her own interests, play with the Shah also? In a game of this kind diplomacy says everything is fair and honourable. Then why should England wink while Russia wins? It is England's interest that the Czar should not possess the coveted frontier, for it will enable his troops at some future day to strike directly in the direction of Herat. It is a different thing to be a Chauvinist or Jingoist. But, surely, it is not unwise policy to be forearmed. Then where is British diplomacy in Persia?—Indian Spectator.

THE NATIVE PRESS ON AFGHANISTAN.

THE reported arrival of Ayub Khan near Farrah lends another and more serious phase to the civil war now being waged in Afghanistan. That the war by-and-by will assume larger proportions there is not the least doubt. The question of the supremacy of power will have to be fought out de novo, precisely in the way that it was fought by Sher Ali. It took that ill-fated Ameer full six years to surmount all difficulties and subdue the more powerful claimants to the "god-granted" throne of Cabul, before he was recognised by the British as the sovereign of a sort of united Afghanistan. And it seems that the same tragedy will have to be enacted, with only a change of names, before our Government could recognise a stable monarchy in that country of dynastic feuds. Abdul Rahman or Ayub?—that will be the war cry of each opposite faction till some decisive engagement determines who shall be the ruler of Kandahar, and, therefore, of Cabul. But is not the present state of the country of the Afghans most pitiable? The Government of India may congratulate themselves upon having removed the troops in good time. But it is time that statement, that when the country was abandoned, care would be taken that no anarchy or bloodshed prevailed, were verified. Did not anarchy and bloodshed begin the moment that the first batch of troops began their march toward the Indus? Of course, it is pleasant to say the Government has no business in that country, and it is well that a political mistake, if such, has been repaired. But it would have been creditable to have made that statement had the British left a solid and stable native Government after evacuation—a Government which could have averted the civil war presently raging there. But they could do nothing of the kind, and so they may have partly to answer for the blood that is now being shed. The consolidation of Afghanistan is yet a possibility of the future. Under the circumstances it may be reasonably asked whether the policy of subsidising Abdul Rahman is commendable, and whether it is expedient in the interests of India? Properly speaking, the Government of India are spending a few millions of the people in indirectly encouraging their protégé to carry on a guerilla warfare, the ultimate result of which is purely problematical. Suppose that, in the contest that will ensue hereafter, Abdul Rahman is worsted and is constrained to abandon the throne of Cabul? How will the British recognise Ayub Khan? will they receive him with open arms? Our rulers ought to, if they are to act up to their political traditions in connection with Afghanistan. Did not Sir John Lawrence distinctly inform Shere Ali during the troublesome days of 1861-69 that his Government would recognise him alone at Cabul who should be able to form a stable Government. If Ayub succeeds now in establishing a strong Government, he ought logically to be recognised. But with what grace will our Government do so? And what will they do with Abdul Rahman, their protégé? Lock him up in company with Yakub—a brace of live Afghan chiefs to be pitted against each other, and both held as trump cards in case of future complications of Russia with Afghanistan.—Indian Spectator.

PERSIAN POLITICS.

THE history of the Sepah Saleh, Azim Hussain Khan, whom report credits with having been appointed Governor of Khorassan, is a remarkable one, and the tale has besides an important moral for Englishmen. The story of his career as universally believed in Persia is not very complimentary, it will be seen, to its subject. It is much as follows. On the death of the late Shah in 1848 the chief Minister of the day, not being in favour with those into whose hands power fell, was promptly removed, and indeed even had cause to fear for his life, so much so that he took refuge in a shrine. A young man, Azim Hussain, almost alone remained faithful to the disgraced minister, and did him many kind services. This Azim Hussain was the son of a high Persian official, the governor of a province, and it happened that just at the time of the Shah's death he had received from his father a portion of the revenues of the province, amounting to about five lakhs, for payment into the Imperial Treasury. In the confusion following on the decease of the sovereign, the story relates, Azim Hussain saw an excellent opportunity for appropriating the money to his own use, and executed his purpose by persuading his friend, the ex-Minister, as some return for the kindness shown him, and no doubt also, for some more substantial considerations, to give a receipt in full, purporting that the money had been paid into the treasury during the time that he held office. Azim Hussain, being ambitious, proceeded to make use of his gains in obtaining from his Government a post in public employ, and was appointed Consul General for Persia at Bombay. Here he appears to have contracted a warm admiration for Englishmen, a feeling which he continued to entertain for many years. While at Bombay he succeeded in making a considerable increase to his personalty, as all Persians are quite convinced, by appropriating a sum of four lakhs that had been deposited in the Bombay Bank by a Persian subject. This man died, and the Consul General was desired by the heirs in Persia to draw out and send them the money. The Consul General, however, informed them that there was some informality in the papers, and the bank declined to give up the money. Soon after this event Azim Hussain was appointed Consul General at Tiflis. This was the time of the Crimean war, and the Persian Minister is credited with having carried on a brisk trade in granting passports to Turkish merchants representing them to be Persian subjects. The next move was to Constantinople as Persian representatives. There are in Constantinople, it should be noted, a large number of Persians, some 50,000, and over them the Persian Minister is vested with almost absolute power. This authority the Sepah Saleh is represented to have wielded in various ways to his own great advantage, and he began now to be considered a really wealthy man. From Constantinople he made a great stride in his official career, being appointed at one stroke Chief Minister of Persia. It must be recorded that he used his great authority to the advantage of his country, and it was through his influence that the series of reforms which have lately marked Persian history were inaugurated. It is also to be recorded that he was at this time a warm supporter of English interests in Persia, though it perhaps goes without saying that he received little or no sympathy and encouragement from English diplomacy as represented at Teheran. The Russian cause was more actively advanced, and the Sepah Saleh being its enemy, intrigue after intrigue was set going against him, with the result that at last he was removed from his post. However, he possessed great influence over the Shah, and was indeed a warm personal friend, and he had not been out of office for more than some six months when he was recalled to his former post. He continued to hold his own successfully until the Shah's visit to Europe proved the cause of his fall once more. The European tour undertaken by the Shah, it is known, excited much hostility among the more orthodox and strict of his subjects, and astute use was made of this fact by the Russians to frighten the Shah into the idea that on his return to Persia he would run considerable risk of a civil war, as all true Shias regarded him as little better than a Feringhi. The Sepah Saleh was to be the leader of the orthodox. Whether the Shah really believed this or not, it is impossible to say; at all events, the Sepah Saleh was once more removed, again, however, after a short interval, to be taken into favour. He was now created Minister of Foreign Affairs and for War. Although thus not officially the head of the Ministry, he very soon became practically omnipotent in Persian counsels. After a brief reign, however, he once more experienced a reverse of fortune; a Court intrigue, in which for once Russian influence is not visible, caused his fall. He was not, however, completely ruined, and as Governor of Kazvan continued to watch over his interests at Teheran. Last year he distinguished himself by the suppression of the Khurdish rebellion. In the course of his repeated experience of Russian power and English weakness or apathy at the Persian Court, his former friendship for the English cooled down, and his sympathies were transferred to those who had shown they could be powerful enemies, and might therefore be presumed capable of becoming powerful friends. He has thus for some time been known as a supporter of Russian interests in Persia. Lately, as we know, he went as special envoy to St. Petersburg with a message of congratulation to the Czar on his accession. It is not so generally known that he volunteered for the service and paid the expenses of the journey, from his private means. His motive, no doubt, was to cement the Russian alliance. His appointment of Governor of Khorassan—for the report of the appointment appears to be correct—seems to supply us with the hint as to what is expected of him in return for Russian sympathy. The appointment is probably due to Russian intrigue, and the probable object sought is to enable Russia to accomplish her designs in regard to the delimitation of the northern frontier of Persia. What these designs appear to be we pointed out the other day. In conclusion, we may say that the Sepah Saleh is now an immensely wealthy man—he is supposed to possess a personalty of some fifty lakhs, exclusive of landed property—that he is very unpopular with the mass of the people, that he is married to the Shah's cousin, and that his brother is the Shah's brother-in-law.—Englishman.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

TEA.—From returns made it seems that there were 274 tea gardens under cultivation in 1880 in Bengal, as against 257 in 1879. The area under plant, so far as could be ascertained, was 38,805 acres, as compared with 38,668 acres in the previous year.—Englishman.

EURASIAN MINERS.—The success of the attempt to introduce Eurasian miners at the Wainad gold mines is undoubted. The few sent up at first have been found to work so well that Mr. Severn, of the Alpha Gold Mine, has asked for twenty-five men to be sent up to him.—Ibid.

GENERAL MASSY.—A work, if rumours are to be believed, is shortly to make its appearance in the literary world, which is expected to throw some new light on certain incidents in the late Afghan campaign. General Massy is the author.—Ibid.

SIR LEPEL GRIFFIN.—Sir Lepel Griffin is shortly expected at Simla for a few days.—Ibid.

EMIGRATION.—At the meeting of the Viceregal Council, on Wednesday July 15, the Hon. Mr. Stokes introduced the bill to amend the law relating to the emigration of natives of India, and, on the hon. member's motion, the bill was referred to a select committee, consisting of the Hon. Mr. Gibbs, the Hon. Major Baring, and the mover. The Hon. Mr. Thompson moved for leave to introduce a bill to amend the law relating to emigration to the Chief Commissionership of Assam and to Chittagong. In the course of his introductory remarks the Hon. Mr. Thompson observed that Act 7 of 1873 was the first attempt to establish a system of free emigration in India, that is a system free from the direct interposition of Government. Time has, however, shown that many of the restrictions imposed by the Act may now advantageously be relaxed. The improved facilities in communication and the more satisfactory condition of coolies in Assam favour the conclusion that the interests of employers and employed may now be left to themselves without any minute interference on the part of Government.—Ibid.

FIGHT BETWEEN BABUS AND POLICEMEN.—A serious affray took place at the Calcutta Town-hall on July 18 between the census clerks, Babus, employed there and a body of native policemen. One of the Babus has since died from the injuries he received, and eight of the policemen are in custody.—Times of India.

A BEQUEST TO EAST INDIANS.—By a recent decision of the Probate Court the sum of eight lakhs of rupees has been placed in the hands of the Secretary of State for India for the purpose of founding an orphanage in Calcutta for East Indian children of both sexes. The building will speedily be purchased or erected for the purpose. The donor is the daughter of an indigo planter.—Bombay Gazette.

REDUCTIONS AT PESHAWUR.—As a preliminary step to the intended reduction of the garrison at Peshawur, the arsenal there is shortly to be done away with, and the arms and munitions of war removed to Rawul Pindi.—Pioneer.

GALLANT CONDUCT.—Captain Hugh de la M. Hervey, 1st Punjab Cavalry, has been awarded the medal of the Royal Humane Society for the gallant rescue of a native soldier of his regiment from drowning.—Ibid.

CALCUTTA FREIGHTS.—At the date of the departure of the mail the unfixed tonnage in port was 16,000 tons. Rates for London via Canal: Wheat and rice, 60s., 55s.; jute, 65s., 62s. 6d.; tea, 70s. London via Cape: Wheat, 47s. 6d.; linseed, 50s.; rapeseed, 52s. 6d.; poppyseed, 55s. Liverpool: Wheat, 47s. 6d.; linseed, 50s.

MADRAS.

JUDICIAL REFORMS IN THE NIZAM'S DOMINIONS.—The services of Mr. Syud Mahmoud, judge of Rai Bareilly, have been temporarily placed at the disposal of the Government of Hyderabad. A commission has been formed at Hyderabad for introducing a general reform of the judicial system in the Nizam's dominions, of which Sir Salar Jung will be president. The work before the commission will probably occupy more than a year, the term for which Mr. Mahmoud has been placed under the Government of the Nizam.—Pioneer.

MR. TAMALAPALLI RAMA RAO, head of the native bar at Madras, has been appointed an unofficial member of the Madras Legislative Council.

BOMBAY.

SHOLAPUR WATERWORKS.—The Governor of Bombay (Sir J. Fergusson) on Friday opened the new waterworks at Sholapur, and in the course of his speech on the occasion advocated the extension of irrigation works and new railways in order to prevent the evils of famine.—Times of India.

MR. GONNE.—Mr. Charles Gonne, Chief Secretary to the Bombay Government, has been elected to the seat in the Bombay Legislative Council rendered vacant by the resignation of Col. Anderson.—Ibid.

POLITICAL APPOINTMENTS.—Dr. Kirk, Consul General at Zanzibar, has been granted two years' furlough. Lieut. Col. Miles, Political Agent, has been posted from Muscat to Zanzibar.—Ibid.

RAILWAY RATES.—The opening of the Western Rajputana Railway having diverted to Bombay a considerable amount of trade that formerly was done through Calcutta, the traders of that city are memorialising the East India Railway to reduce their rates with a view of successfully competing with the western capital.—Ibid.

THE BHILS.—The Bhils are again showing signs of restlessness. There have been two collisions with the police, in one of which twenty Bhils are reported to have been killed.—Ibid.

NEW RAILWAY.—The Railway Service Gazette tells us that the sixty-eight miles of line between Bhilwarra and Nasirabad have been finished, but as the culverts and bridges which are to replace the present diversions are not ready the formal opening of the line will be delayed.—Bombay Gazette.

WHAT, NO SOAP?—We hear through the Press Commissioner's office that certain firms in India having recently represented that they are prepared to supply country made soap of good quality, and at rates which will compare favourably with those of the imported article, with a view of encouraging the new industry instructions have been issued in the Military Department to local Governments to invite tenders at once for the supply, from local firms, of the quantity of soap required for the Ordnance and Commissariat Departments for one year.—Ibid.

REPAIRING BREACHES.—The Western Rajputana Railway was breached in several places by the floods caused by recent heavy rains, and there has been considerable interruption to the traffic in consequence, and the mails have been sent round the G.I.P. line, via Jubbulpore. The breaches have, we believe, been now all repaired.—Ibid.

THE MARRIAGE OF THE MAHARAJA OF JAIPUR.—We learn that the marriage of the younger daughter of H.H. the Raja

Sahib of Drangadra with the Maharaja of Jaipur has been postponed to some day near the Dewalee festival. The ceremony was to have taken place on the 13th July, but some caste and custom obstacles came in the way and led to its postponement.—Ibid.

BOMBAY RIFLE MEETING.—The Central Presidency Rifle Meeting is to be a big affair, and will last from the 22nd September to the 1st October. A splendid prospectus is offered, which includes two sets of medals: those struck for last year, when the meeting was not held, in addition to those for the present year.—Ibid.

THE MONSOON.—The monsoon season continues most favourable almost throughout the Bombay Presidency, Sholapore being the only place where rain is really wanted.—Ibid.

LONDON PRODUCE MARKETS.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

SUGAR remains dull, and sales confined to 160 casks crystallised Demerara, at 28s. to 28s. 6d. per cwt. Clyde telegram quotes refined rather easier for the commoner qualities.

COFFEE.—The small public sales have consisted chiefly of undesirable qualities, and went rather slowly at about previous value. 103 casks, 56 barrels and bags plantation Ceylon sold; low middling grayish, 83s. to 87s.; middling ditto to good middling ditto, 89s. to 95s.; bold, 103s. 6d. to 105s. 1,467 bags 16 cases East India; low good medium to medium grayish, 79s. to 88s. 6d.; bold, 92s. 6d. to 97s.

SPICES.—The auctions have passed off with a quiet tone. Pepper firm. Of 1,069 bags black about half sold; Penang at 5d.; Singapore damaged, 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. to 5 $\frac{3}{4}$ d.; one lot sound, 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; Tullacherry, 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; 714 bags Singapore white, half sold at 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. to 7 $\frac{3}{4}$ d.; and 41 bags Penang at 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.; 600 bags Pimento went steadily, ordinary to good fair, 4 $\frac{3}{4}$ d. to 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.

COTTON.—A slow and unchanged market. Sales about 700 bales, including Tinnivelly at 5 $\frac{1}{4}$ d., and Bengal at 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per lb. For arrival, Bengal, May-June, Cape, 4 15-16d. for fine g.c. Forward delivery American, October-November, 6 3-32d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

JUTE meets rather more inquiry.

THURSDAY EVENING.

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson state that the transactions in Mincing-lane this week have been on a rather larger scale, and in some instances prices show an improvement. The inquiry for coffee has been good, and full prices have been obtained for Ceylon; to-day large sales, including foreign, went off steadily. The rates obtained at the Dutch sale on Wednesday were above the valuations, good ordinary being quoted 37 $\frac{1}{2}$ cents; the quotations from Rio are also higher. Arrivals of tea have been large; in China sorts a fair business reported at lower rates for all common to fair descriptions, good and fine being firmly held; for Indian there is a good demand at strong prices. The sugar market continues depressed; buyers appear unwilling to purchase even at lower quotations, and the small sales made show a fall of 6d. per cwt. Low East India to arrive has sold at a similar decline. The Clyde market is also lower, and beet is offering at a further reduction. In spice the chief feature is the rise in the value of cassia lignea; cinnamon continues in demand, other description being without alteration. Business has been done in saltpetre at higher prices. There has been less inquiry for rice.

COFFEE.—The large supplies of foreign met a fairly sustained demand, and realised firm prices for coloury qualities—in some cases 1s. advance. Common qualities sold slowly; 4,190 bags Costa Rica, chiefly sold—ordinary dull to good ordinary, 54s. to 62s.; good greenish, 65s. to 66s. 6d.; grayish, 68s.; coloury, 84s. to 87s.; one lot, 90s.; 3,025 bags Guatemala part sold—ordinary to fine ordinary foxy greenish, 56s. to 60s.; grayish, 68s. 6d. to 73s.; 600 bags New Grenada, 87s. 6d. to 93s. Of plantation Ceylon, 102 casks, 31 barrels and bags, sold at full rates—middling to good middling coloury, 81s. to 96s.; bold, 106s. to 111s.; 394 cases and barrels, 1,347 bags East India were rather easier—dull grayish, 75s. 6d. to 86s.; bold, 97s. 6d.; ditto coloury, 107s.; 1,410 packages Jamaica sold—good ordinary, 50s. to 51s.; fine, 52s. to 65s.; coloury, 71s. to 75s. per cwt.

RICE firm for arrival. Bassein, May sailing, sold 7s. 10½d., ex quay London; August sailing, 8s. 4½d., open charter; Rangoon, May and June, 8s. 6d., open charter terms. About 5,000 tons sold.

JUTE firm, with a steady inquiry.

COTTON.—The market is very lifeless, and the only change is in new crop American, which are 1-16d. up. Forward delivery American November-December, 6 1-16d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

FRIDAY EVENING.

INDIAN TEA.—About 9,500 packages have been sold at auction including 6,500 packages of new crop, for which there has been good competition at firm to rather dearer rates, the quality of the new imports being most satisfactory.

COFFEE.—The full supplies brought to public sale to-day met a fair demand; 384 casks, 181 barrels and bags plantation Ceylon, and 23 cases, 2,350 bags East India realised yesterday's prices.

CINNAMON.—A good demand prevails and prices show an advance of 4d. to 6d. on last sale's rates.

RICE.—The London Rice Brokers' Association Circular reports a firm market with more business doing on the spot and to arrive. Cargoes for distant shipment rather dearer. To-day a cargo of 1,200 tons Necranzie sold at 8s. 3d. open charter.

COTTON.—The market is slow on the spot, but rather dearer for American futures. Sales about 3,000 bales, including Coconada at 4½d., and Bengal at 4 7-16d. to 4 11-16d. per lb. Forward delivery—American, September, October, 6 13-32d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

JUTE is in better request, and full rates are paid. In new crop, more desire to sell early shipment prevailed last week on the part of the largest shippers, and with easier rates accepted a considerable business resulted, both via Canal and Cape; at the close, however, a firmer feeling is apparent, in consequence of Calcutta telegrams reporting insufficient water for the preparation of the fibre, and prices have a hardening tendency. The sales for the fortnight were 45,000 bales afloat, and 5,000 bales in dock, ex quay, &c.

MONDAY EVENING.

RICE.—There has been an active demand, cargoes resulting in a large business at full prices to 3d. advance. Above a dozen cargoes are reported, aggregating from 18,000 to 20,000 tons. Rangoon, June sailing, at 8s. 7½d.; July-August, 8s. 10½d., open charter; ditto August 8s. 9d. ex quay Liverpool; Ngakyouk, now loading, 8s. 3d.; Necranzie, April sailing, 8s. 4½d.; and Bassein, July, 8s. 6½d. open charter.

SPICES.—Cinnamon has further advanced to 6d. per lb. over last quarterly sales. Business in cassia lignea at 38s. 6d. to 39s. per cwt. Pepper in some demand. Singapore, on the spot, 5 11-16d.; ditto for arrival, 5½d.; Penang, to arrive, 5d. per lb.

JUTE.—A strong market with increased demand. About 8,000 bales sold, chiefly to arrive, including 4,000 bales first native makes at £16 15s. September-October shipment, via Cape to Dundee.

COTTON.—There is more inquiry in all positions, and quotations for East India are fully maintained. American futures are about 1-16d. dearer. Sales about 3,000 bales, including Tinnevely at 5½d. to 5¾d., Western 4½d., and Bengal at 4 9-16d. per lb. For arrival Tinnevely, July-September, Cape and Canal, 5½d. for fully good fair. g.f.c., 5 3-16d. for good fair Western Madras, July-August, Suez, 4¾d. for fully good fair g.f.c. Forward delivery, American, August-September, 6 15-16d., September-October, 6 7-16d., November-December, 6½d. to 6 5-32d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

INDIAN TEA AND COFFEE CULTIVATION.

(FROM THE PRESS COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE.)

A REPORT on the tea and coffee cultivation in Bengal for the year 1880 shows that the number of gardens under tea cultivation during the year was 274 against 257 in 1879, and the area under plant was, so far as could be ascertained, 38,805 acres against 38,668. In the Darjeeling district there was an increase of three gardens over the number reported in the previous year, and of 33,854lbs. in the approximate gross outturn of tea. The year was, on the whole, a favourable one, though the red spider is said to have made its appearance in some of the gardens. The complaints from blight were few compared with those made in the previous years. Mosquito blight, through it did some damage in March and April, was hardly noticeable in the later months of the year, when it is generally most active. Labour, which is almost exclusively derived from Nepaul, was more plentiful than in the previous year in the hills, but in the Terai it was scarce. The reason of the scarcity of labour in that tract is explained by the manager of a tea garden in the following words:—

In former times, when tea was more remunerative, larger labour forces were kept on the gardens during the cold season, now more economy is evinced on this point in all the gardens. The coolies, who have been long in a garden, have in most cases become well off, and when the weather is bad and the work heavy, can better afford to sit idle. The large number of estates opened out in the Terai and Dooars lately, of course, much tend to drain labour.

In the Julpigoree district there was also an increase of ten gardens over the number returned in 1879. The gross yield of tea amounted to 817,765lb. against 411,580lb. in the previous year, thus showing an increase of 406,185lb., or 98 per cent. during the year under report. As stated in the previous year's report, the gardens in the district are chiefly stocked with the hybrid plant. Manure is used to a very limited extent, the soil being rich with vegetable deposit. Leaf rolling machines have for some time been introduced into the district. The use of a tea drying machine in one of the gardens is said to have effected a considerable improvement on the results obtained under the old system of drying over charcoal fire, while in another garden machinery for sieving and equalising tea is worked with success. Labour is chiefly imported from Nepaul and Chota Nagpore, the indigenous labourers numbering between 700 and 800 only. The labourers are reported to be well housed and properly treated. One application for lease of lands was under inquiry at the close of 1879, and four applications were filed during 1880. There were thus altogether five applications for disposal. Of these, two were granted, one was withdrawn, one was negatived, while one was under inquiry at the close of the year. There was an increase of two gardens in the Chittagong district over the number reported in the previous year, but the figures are again incomplete, eighteen gardens having failed to supply the information sought. The gardens in the Chittagong Hill Tracts have all furnished the returns for 1880, but no figures regarding the yield of tea were supplied in the previous year. A comparison of the results of the year under review with those of the previous year is therefore not possible. The weather was not very favourably for tea and the flushes were below the average. The out-turn for acre showed a decrease, but this is attributed to the plucking having been finer than it used to be, the common class of tea hardly paying the cost of manufacture. The soil and climate are well adapted to tea cultivation, very little manure being used. There is an abundance of local labour except at the rice harvest, and the number of labourers imported into Chittagong is small. Improvements in firing and other operations have gradually been introduced, and machinery has been brought into use in several tea estates in the district. No new gardens were started in the Dacca district, but the average yield per acre shows an increase from 92lb. to 132lb. The number of tea plantations in Hazaribagh in 1880 was the same as in the preceding year, but there was an increase of two gardens in the Lohardugga district. One garden in Hazaribagh and three gardens in Lohardugga furnished no returns for the year; but on those gardens from which returns were received, both in 1879 and 1880, the aggregate out-turn is said to have shown an increase in the year under report. Early rains in the spring, and seasonable weather during the monsoon materially helped to improve the prospects of the industry. The prices, however, showed very little signs of improvement, except for the better qualities which are not yet grown in large quantities.

Coffee is only grown experimentally in the Chittagong district, and those who have cultivated a few plants speak favourably of the growth, especially of the Liberian coffee. No returns have been received from the Chittagong Hill Tracts, but the crop of the Ceylon, or common coffee, is said to have been a "fair average one;" the planters have prepared nurseries sufficient to provide plants of Liberian coffee for 100 acres during the current year. No increase is shown in the number of gardens in Lahardugga district, and there was a decrease of 320lb., or 50 per cent., in the total yield as compared with 1879.

AFGHAN WAR GRANT.—An estimate, published to-day, states the amount required in the year ending March 1, 1882, as instalment of a grant in aid of the expenditure incurred by the Government of India upon the war in Afghanistan, in the years 1878-80, to be £500,000. The Imperial grant in aid of the expenditure will amount in all to £5,000,000, of which part will be met by the remission of the debt of £2,000,000, incurred by the Government of India, in 1879, and the remainder will consist of six annual payments of £500,000 each, the second of which is provided for in the present estimate.

Complaints are being received that the officials in the gold districts show an utter disregard to the wants of the mining companies, in not repairing bridges and offering other facilities for the transport of heavy machinery. As to the Kolar goldfields, Government have sanctioned an estimate for the extension of the goods platform and for additional sidings at the Kolar road station on the Bangalore branch. Owing to the opening out of the goldfields the traffic at this station has greatly increased and facilities are required for unloading heavy machinery, &c.

Indian Teas is now allowed to pass the frontier into Turkistan without hinderance, duty being levied on it at Yarkand. The price of Indian Tea at Yarkand is said to be four times the rate at Kangra.

Mr. C. Brown, the head of the Punjab Secret Police, has been appointed on special duty to get up the case against Hyat Khan.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THE UNCOVENANTED FUNDS.

A RECENT decision of the Calcutta High Court must force the attention of the Government of India to the utterly unendurable position of the English members of some of the so-called "Uncovenanted" Civil Services in India, in regard to the provision that they are at present permitted to make for their widows and orphan children.

Three weeks ago, in an article on the general position and prospects of the Cooper's Hill engineers, we took occasion to point out some of the many anomalies that result from the obstinate retention, on the part of the authorities, of the absurd and entirely obsolete classification of the Indian Civil Services as "Covenanted" and "Uncovenanted." We showed that, among the so-called Uncovenanted Services there are at the present day large bodies of English gentlemen, chosen in many cases for their special scientific or technical attainments, recruited from precisely the same classes in England that supply the Covenanted Service, and in the aggregate greatly outnumbering it, even if only the higher officials be counted. Whilst strongly deprecating any diminution of the exclusive privileges or the prestige of the Covenanted Service, or any measures calculated to lessen the esprit de corps of its members, we called upon the Government to face the undoubted fact that there has grown up during the past half-century a large number of subsidiary departments or services, amongst which the Covenanted Service is now simply primus inter pares, which require to be treated in a general way much as the Covenanted Service is treated, and to which the antiquated rules of the old native subordinate services are totally inapplicable. The term "Uncovenanted" has always denoted some idea of subordination, or at least of distinct inferiority of status, and should no longer be applied to the departmental services of which we are speaking. The latter should be included, together with the Covenanted Service, under some such title as "the Imperial Civil Service of India"—whilst the really subordinate services should be grouped under the name of "the local Civil Service." And it will naturally follow, from this just and logical classification, that all the branches of the Imperial Civil Service will be treated alike in regard to fundamental conditions such as leave rules, pension rules, and family funds. In the present article we wish to direct especial attention to the injustice and inadequacy of the arrangements now in force in reference to the last of these conditions, the family funds; an injustice that has been accentuated by the High Court decision in the case of Falle versus Macewen and others.

According to present rules, the only provision for widows and orphans that can be made by any civil servants in India who are not members of the Covenanted Service is by subscription to the "Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund." This is a fund that is entirely managed by a board of directors elected by a majority of the subscribers; it is in no way controlled or looked after by Government—in fact the only connection Government has with it is (1) Government allows it a handsome interest on its accumulated deposits, and (2) the attention of all newly-appointed "Uncovenanted" civil servants is officially directed to the propriety of subscribing to it.

Now, the vast majority of the subscribers to this fund are the writers and copyists in the public offices throughout Bengal, being for the most part Eurasians or native Christians, and, of course, domiciled in India. Until the last few years, however, these gentlemen were content to leave the management of the fund mainly in the hands of the superior classes of English "Uncovenanted" officials: e.g., for many years the leading spirit in the direction was Mr. Henry Woodrow, senior inspector of schools in Bengal, and an ex-Fellow of Caius College, Cambridge. The fund, consequently, was admirably managed, and has always been a prosperous concern; the rates of subscription to be paid, the benefits to be derived, &c., being all nicely and accurately balanced on the true principles of a mutual society. As the services in whose interests we are now writing are all quite modern in creation or development, for many years there were only a few high English officials compelled to have recourse to this fund. Now, however, there are all the chaplains, who have no other family fund; all the education officers—mostly men who have been fellows or scholars of colleges in Oxford or Cambridge—numbering more than a hundred in all India; all the Cooper's Hill engineers, the "Stanley" engineers, and other officers of the Public Works Department; all the trained conservators of the Forests Department; all the geological and other surveyors under the Survey; the electricians of the Telegraphs; the officers of the military police; and crowds of other officers similarly situated, whom it is obviously absurd and unjust to double up with their own writers and copyists as "Uncovenanted servants." For it appears that, within the last five or six years, the Eurasian and native clerks have discovered their power as constituting a majority of the subscribers to the "Uncovenanted Fund." They discovered—and the High Court, in the representative case cited above, has confirmed the discovery—that a majority of the subscribers can alter such rules of the fund as that which regulates the terms on which pensions to subscribers' widows are paid in England. They have promptly altered the rule in question—on the faith of which rule the English subscribers had all their official lives been paying their subscriptions; and the result is that, even in the cases of risks accepted by the fund twenty and thirty years ago—and on which the English subscriber has, for as many years, been paying his premium on the understanding that he has secured for his widow a pension of say £100 per annum—the widow's pension is cut down to Rs.1,000, or at present rates about £82 6s. per annum. Moreover, the change being thus made with retrospective effects on all current risks, the English subscriber in many cases is absolutely without a remedy, for his age or health will usually make it virtually impossible for him now to increase the provision for his widow by increasing his subscription.

The amount of distress that will be caused by this change of rule among the widows and orphans of the English "Uncovenanted" civil servants of the Crown in India is something appalling, and urgently demands the attention of the Government. The bolt has fallen exactly on the class least able to bear it; for Government college professors, and executive engineers, and the like, have never had the chance of drawing the high pay of lieutenant-governors and members of council and the higher officers of the Covenanted service, though socially they belong to the same classes, and their widows and orphans require much the same subsistence as in the other case. And it is obvious that, to a widow and a large family of daughters of gentle birth, to whom life might have been possible—though hard enough, in all conscience—on a pension of, say, £150 per annum, the reduction of that pension to £123 might mean the crossing of the line that divides penury from starvation. This, without the slightest exaggeration, is the prospect for their widows and orphans that now faces many English gentlemen of good birth and high attainments who have passed their whole lives in the service of the Crown in India; at the end of their career, when no longer able to add one penny to the provision which they have conscientiously subscribed for during so many years, a vote of the majority in the "Uncovenanted" omnium gatherum to which Government has most absurdly attached them, brings upon them the terrible and undeserved misery of the consciousness that, after their death, certain starvation awaits their widows and orphans. It will, of course, be understood that we do not for a moment impugn the decision of the Calcutta High Court. On the contrary, we fear that that decision is too truly an accurate rendering of the law, and that the members of the Uncovenanted Fund domiciled in India, being in a majority, have the fullest right to pass any rule that will benefit their own class to the detriment of the minority whose widows and orphans will draw their pensions in England. But the extent to which this power might be pushed is obviously such as to justify the deepest alarm and apprehension on the part of the minority; it is further such as to render it absolutely obligatory on the Government of India to open to their English civil servants some other method of providing for the widow and the orphan.

HOME NEWS.

HONOURS AND REWARDS.—Lieut. Gen. William S. Hatch Royal (late Bombay) Artillery, has been awarded a distinguished service pension of £100 a year. The following officers have also had conferred upon them similar rewards for distinguished service:—

viz, Major Gen. J. E. Michell, C.B., Royal Artillery; Major Gen. F. R. Maunsell, Royal Engineers; Major Gen. Arthur Bunny, C.B., Royal Artillery; and Brigadier Gen. Sir C. H. Palliser, K.C.B., Bengal Staff Corps. Capt. W. A. Hare, Royal Engineers, has been appointed a deputy assistant quartermaster general in the Intelligence Department, Horse Guards, in succession to Major Ardagh, Royal Engineers, appointed on the staff of the Governor of Madras.

NAVAL INTELLIGENCE.—The following information respecting the movements of Her Majesty's ships is supplied by the Admiralty:—From the East Indies: Letters have been received from the Commander-in-Chief, Rear Admiral W. Gore Jones, C.B., up to June 15, in the Euryalus, at Tamatave, Madagascar; would leave for Mauritius about July 10, and then proceed with his cruise. The Commander in Chief, Rear Admiral W. Gore Jones, C.B., in the Euryalus, was at Mozambique; would leave on the 14th inst. for Zanzibar. The Wild Swan was at Aden on the 12th inst.

RELIEFS FOR INDIA.—The Serapis, which was to have left Portsmouth on Aug. 17, to convey troops from Durban to Bombay, has had her departure postponed until the 7th prox. The Malabar will leave on September 15 for Queenstown, where she will embark on the 19th the 2nd Battalion Lancashire Fusiliers, at present stationed at the Curragh, for conveyance to India. She will be followed by the Zuma on the 20th, and the Crocodile on the 29th prox. As the Euphrates will not take any part in the ensuing troopship programme, it is probable that the Indian troopships will be employed in the customary relief service between Portsmouth and Bombay, the bringing home of the troops now at the Cape and the Transvaal being performed by hired transports.

ORIENTAL TELEPHONE COMPANY.—The board have received the following message from Alexandria, Egypt, dated 9th inst.:—"Telephone Exchange opened yesterday. Subscribers now talking. Working satisfactorily."

THE EASTERN TELEGRAPH COMPANY notifies the restoration of telegraphic cable communication with India, China, Manila, Java, Australia, and New Zealand, via Bombay. When telegrams are not sent from the company's own offices they should be directed "via Eastern," this instruction being signalled by the postal authorities free of charge.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England for Rs. 35,00,000 in Government bills on India, but the amount allotted was again below the total offered. The minimum price posted was 1s. 7½d., at which figure Rs. 12,00,000 was taken on Calcutta, and Rs. 3,00,000 on Bombay. The telegraph transfer rate was quoted 1s. 7 11-16d. The same amount will be offered for tender next Wednesday.

THE SILVER MARKET AND THE EASTERN EXCHANGES.—On Wednesday the market was unaffected by the reduced amount of the Council drafts allotted. Bars were sold to some small extent for India at 51½d., and Mexican dollars were again quoted 50½d. The exchanges from the East remained unaltered, and Rupee Paper was also without change.—On Thursday the tendency of the market remained favourable, but in the absence of supplies business was reduced to the smallest proportions. Bars were quoted 51½d., and Mexican dollars 50½d. The Bank of Bengal has raised its rate of discount to 5 per cent., but there was scarcely any alterations in the Eastern exchanges. The Bombay rate was telegraphed 1-16d. higher, at 1s. 7½d. Rupee Paper closed without change.—On Friday bar silver was sold to a moderate extent at 51½d., but no transactions were reported in Mexican dollars. The arrivals by the French and English packets were £37,000 in the uncoined metal, and £45,000 in dollars. The exchanges from the East were telegraphed steady, and there was no change in Rupee Paper.—On Saturday a fair business was transacted in refined bars at 51½d. per ounce; but the arrival of dollars by the French Mexican packets yesterday had not been dealt with at the close of business. The Eastern exchanges remain unaltered. Rupee paper in India seems, however, to have still further given way, but the market was in so unsettled a state that the quotations which were telegraphed did not agree. The prices received from one place gave the Four-and-a-Half per Cents. at 111½ and the Four per Cents. at 103½; while from another source the respective rates were 111 and 103½. Here there has been an absence of business, and the closing quotations were weaker, at 91½ to 91¾ and 85 to 85½.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY, AUG. 9.

RUSSIA IN CENTRAL ASIA.

Mr. STANHOPE asked the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs what was the total extent of the territory in Central Asia recently annexed to the Russian Empire; and what portion of it had hitherto been considered to belong to Persia.

SIR C. DILKE: Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at St. Petersburg has been officially informed that the country immediately surrounding Askabad is the Southern boundary of the Tekke Oasis, which has been annexed to Russia; that the headquarters of General Rohrberg, General Skobeleff's successor, are at Askabad, but that there may be a few troops at Gowas; and that some troops advanced as far as Lufabad, but have returned. Until her Majesty's Government receive more exact information it will not be expedient to express any opinion upon the extent to which the Russian advances trench—if they trench at all—upon what had been considered to be Persian territory.

In answer to a further question from Lord Sandon, Sir C. DILKE said the facts would be laid before the country as early as possible. This could not be done at once, owing to the difficulty of making the map that would be necessary.

COLONEL BURROWS.

SIR H. WOLFF asked the Secretary of State for India whether any communication had been made to Colonel Burrows, either by the Government of India or by the India-office, informing him of the grounds on which the Governor General in Council refused to adopt the recommendation of the Governor of Bombay in Council that Colonel Burrows should be permitted to return to his permanent brigade; and whether this decision was arrived at after any investigation at which Colonel Burrows was called upon for an explanation or defence; and, if not, whether an opportunity would be given to Colonel Burrows to defend himself against the charges made against him which are at present anonymous.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: In December last the Government of Bombay were told by the Government of India that the Governor General in Council could not agree to the proposal of the Bombay Government that Brigadier General Burrows should be permitted to revert to his permanent brigade command, as, though his personal courage and gallantry were fully admitted, the Viceroy in Council was of opinion that the Brigadier General did not exhibit that degree of military capacity which would justify his being again intrusted with responsible military command. This must have been communicated to Colonel Burrows, as he appealed against the decision. That appeal was answered by the Government of India on May 2, 1881, and the Government of Bombay was informed that the previous decision was arrived at after very full and deliberate consideration of all the circumstances of the case, and the Governor General in Council was unable to depart from it. This was forwarded to the Commander in Chief of the Bombay army for communication to Col. Burrows. So far as is known here, there are no anonymous charges against Col. Burrows. The Government of India, after a careful review of the facts of the case, came to a deliberate conclusion that it would not be to the advantage of the public service to again entrust Col. Burrows with important military command. As being responsible in the first degree for the security of her Majesty's Indian dominions, they had no other course than to act on the judgment they had formed on the whole matter.

THE GOA TREATY.

Mr. CARTWRIGHT asked the Secretary of State for India whether the financial results consequent on the first year's execution of the Goa Treaty had proved highly satisfactory to both Governments concerned, and whether there were any official reports showing these mutually satisfactory results; and, if so, whether he would make these reports public in view of the very erroneous opinions widely circulated by the Portuguese Press in regard to the nature and bearing of the provisions of the treaty.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said no report had been received from the Government of India on this subject, though they had been asked to furnish one and had been subsequently requested to furnish an immediate reply. A very favourable report had, however, been received through the Foreign-office as to the working of the treaty. He did not think it desirable to lay any papers on the table of the House until the report of the Government of India had been received.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY, AUG. 11.

SIR R. MEADE AND SIR SALAR JUNG.

Mr. RICHARD asked the Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been called to an article in the July number of the Statesman entitled "The Restitution of Berar," and to the statements in that article as to the conduct of the ex-British Resident, Sir Richard Meade, in forcing on the Nizam's Minister, Sir Salar Jung, as his colleague in the Regency, one Vikar-ool-Omra, an alleged enemy of that Minister and of the British Government; and whether the Government could state the reasons that dictated that appointment; whether he had observed the narrative in the same article of the conduct of the said ex-British Resident in supporting alleged spoliation and violent proceedings of Vikar-ool-Omra since his appointment; and whether he would cause a full inquiry to be made by independent persons into the facts alleged in this article. 14

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said it was perfectly impossible for him to give anything like a complete answer to the statements contained in the article which he had seen, and which related to a very complicated matter. It was written with the avowed object of advocating a restitution of Berar to the Nizam. It contained a series of most violent attacks upon the conduct of the Government of India during the whole of the present century, and indeed during the whole of the past century, towards the Government of the Nizam. With regard to the specific point referred to in the question, the conduct of the ex-British Resident, Sir R. Meade, in the appointment of the Nawab Vikar-ool-Omra as co-regent with Salar Jung, that appointment was made, not by Sir R. Meade, but by the Government of India, whose proceedings were approved by the Secretary of State at the time. It was impossible for him to enter into an account of the reason of the appointment, which was the subject of a very full report, but he might briefly say that the main object was to adhere to the spirit of the arrangement which was come to in 1869, he thought, when it was decided to associate with the Regent, who was a very distinguished representative of the official classes at Hyderabad, a representative of the Hyderabad nobility. Whether what was done was done rightly or wrongly, it was done undoubtedly by Sir R. Meade, but not upon his responsibility, and he could not be held personally responsible for it. With regard to the alleged spoliation and violent proceedings of the Nawab Vikar-ool-Omra since his appointment, those allegations appeared to be made entirely on the foundation of a memorial which had been presented to the Indian Government by nephews of Vikar-ool-Omra. He had never seen the memorial. It was, no doubt, in the possession of the Government of India, and the Government of India would, if necessary, make a report upon it. The article contained imputations which were very grave on the character of the ex-British Resident, Sir R. Meade. It charged him in a manner scarcely disguised with misconduct and actual corruption. Sir R. Meade was a very distinguished officer, and hitherto of unblemished character. (Hear.) He was at present on leave, and had practically retired from the Indian service. He was on the Continent, and this article had only just reached him. He had heard from him on the subject. He said that many of the statements contained in the article were falsehoods, and that others were gross misrepresentations. With regard to the charges against himself, he said he thought his proper course would be to place himself in the hands of the Government of India, desiring them to take such steps as they might deem proper to ascertain what grounds there were for the imputations that had been made against him. He had accordingly addressed the Government of India. It would be highly improper for him (the Marquis of Hartington) to take any steps in the matter until he knew what the views of the Government of India on the subject were. (Hear.)

In answer to Sir G. Balfour, the Marquis of HARTINGTON said it was impossible to say whether any and what papers on the subject could be laid on the table. There were certainly a great number of papers. Some were of an extremely confidential character, and he had no hesitation in saying it would be impossible to lay them on the table.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY, AUG. 12.

CHAPLAINS WITH THE TROOPS IN INDIA.

Mr. MOORE asked the Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been called to the position of Roman Catholic chaplains serving with the troops in India; whether it was a fact that in addition to their being paid on a scale very much lower than that of their Protestant and Presbyterian colleagues, they were also declared disentitled to any leave, whether sick leave or privilege leave, or furlough, whatsoever; whether this regulation is so strictly enforced that when ordered from one station to another all allowances cease from the moment of departure from the one to arrival at the other; whether there is any parallel for such treatment among any of the civil, military, or uncovenanted servants of Government in India; whether it is also the case that no provision is made for pension or retiring allowance, no matter what the length of service may be; and whether he will take steps to remedy these grievances.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: The arrangements for the performance of all religious services for the Roman Catholic soldiery in India are made by the Archbishop or other provincial head of that Church. All the personal details are managed by him, and it is he who deposes the several priests for the duties. For this superintendence and for the maintenance of registers of marriages, burials, &c., in Roman Catholic chapels, he receives a monthly allowance from the State. The executive duties are paid for according to the number of Roman Catholic soldiers and Government servants in the garrison. The priests employed on these duties are not appointed by the Government. They are thus on a totally different footing from Church of England or Presbyterian chaplains, inasmuch as they belong to no establishment, and are not Government servants, either covenanted or uncovenanted. No comparison can therefore be sustained. The services of the Roman Catholic priest being neither personally continuous nor at the permanent disposal of the State, neither leave rules nor pension rules would be applicable to them. The non-application of such rules cannot, under these circumstances, be rightly considered a grievance, neither can it be a grievance that, as individuals, they receive remuneration on a lower scale than those who are bound by strict conditions to the service of Government in India.

THE OPIUM TRADE IN CHINA.

Mr. A. PEASE asked whether her Majesty's Government had information concerning the statement of the London and China Telegraph of the 8th inst. that the Chinese Government had decided to increase the tax on foreign opium and to levy a tax on native opium, and whether her Majesty's Government considered that the Chinese Government was free to levy what duties it pleases upon opium imported and native.

Sir C. DILKE: Her Majesty's Government have received information that an increase of inland tax on opium is under the consideration of the Chinese Government, but not that such increase has been decided upon. They have no information as to a tax on native opium. The Chinese Government are free to levy what duties they please on native opium. Foreign opium, after it has left the importer's hands and is carried inland by the Chinese purchaser, is liable to such a taxation as the Chinese Government may think fit to impose upon it. (Hear, hear.)

RUSSIA IN CENTRAL ASIA.

Mr. STANHOPE asked the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether it was not a fact that Persia claims a considerable portion of the territory recently annexed by Russia in Central Asia; whether any remonstrances on the subject had been addressed by Persia to her Majesty's Government; and whether it was true that Russia had refused to allow any representative of this country to be present at the approaching limitation of the new Russo-Persian frontier.

Sir C. DILKE: In answer to the first clause of the question, I have to say that we are not aware that that is so. No remonstrance on the subject has been addressed by that Power to her Majesty's Government; and no proposal has been made to Russia, or refused by her, for the presence of a British representative at the delimitation of the new frontier.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY, AUG. 15.

ECCLIESIASTICAL SUBSIDIES IN CEYLON.

Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY asked the Secretary of State for the Colonies for explanations of his despatches on Nov. 19, 1880, and June 14 last, with reference to ecclesiastical subsidies in Ceylon.

The Archbishop of CANTERBURY observed that subsidies were paid to two bodies of Christians and also to the Buddhists. One of those bodies of Christians was under the English bishop. Since the cession of the island to this country several other bodies of Christians had sprung up. It was no reason because the latter had not subsidies why a Christian body to which one was paid, in pursuance of an understanding come to when the cession treaty was signed, should now be deprived of it.

Lord KIMBERLEY explained that the case of the Buddhists and that of the Christians were not similar. The former were the possessors of land out of which the subsidy was paid. The endowments to the Christians came out of the taxation of the country, and were paid to a handful of Anglicans and a handful of Presbyterians, while a large number of Roman Catholics, bodies of other denominations of Christians, and the Hindus and Mahomedans were entirely disregarded. He argued that there was no treaty obligation in the matter, and that good policy suggested the discontinuance of the subsidies to the two Christian bodies.

Lord CARNARVON urged that much care ought to be used in working out the matter.

Lord KIMBERLEY said five years would elapse before any of the subsidies would be stopped.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY, AUG. 15.

AFGHANISTAN.

Mr. ONSLOW gave notice that on Friday he would ask the Secretary of State for India whether the Viceroy had applied for the sanction of the Home Government for a further subsidy to Abdur Rahman to enable him to defend himself against Ayub Khan, and if not, whether it was the intention of the Government to interfere in any way by assisting one candidate or the other, or whether it was their policy to look on and leave the result of the present conflict to the survival of the fittest. He also begged to give notice that on the same day he would move for a return of the sums of money given to different Amiers of Afghanistan since Dost Mahomed, inclusive, and also the number of guns, large and small, and of the amount of ammunition which had been presented during the same period.

THE NIZAM.

Sir G. BALFOUR asked the Secretary of State for India whether he would cause a selection of papers for a long series of years connected with the Government of the Nizam to be laid before Parliament, in order that the real state of the relations of that State with the Government of India might be made known, and that the animadversions on the honour and character of the Indian Government and of Indian officers might be cleared away or substantiated by the publication of these official documents.

Mr. ONSLOW asked whether the noble lord or the Indian Government thought there was the slightest foundation for the allegations against Sir R. Meade.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said that with regard to the question of the hon. member for Guildford he could not add anything to the statement he made on Thursday last. In reply to a question which his hon. and gallant friend put to him on Thursday, he said that the largest part of these papers were of a confidential character, and that it was perfectly impossible in the public interest to lay them on the table. Further examination convinced him that that was the case, and, although it would be possible to produce some of them, the great bulk and the most important of them could not be produced. It was, however, the intention of the Government to look at the correspondence, and they might think proper to make some statement with regard to the animadversions on Sir R. Meade.

THE PAUMBAN PASS.

Sir J. HAY asked the Secretary of State for India whether he would state what progress had been made in the works for deepening and improving the Paumban Pass, and what appropriation would be made for these works in the current financial year.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said he found that no report had been received at the India-office on the progress made with the work of deepening and improving that passage; but he would take care that information on the subject should be asked for at once.

COLONIAL HANDBOOKS, MAPS, &c.

NOW READY.

CANADA—including Ontario,
North-West Territory, Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia, &c.
With New Coloured Map. Crown 8vo., 288 pp. Cloth, 5s.
"Athenaeum," June 25, 1881.—"Full of information and statistics, which ought to prove very serviceable
to any visitor to the Dominion."

"Times."—"Under the above title Messrs. Silver have brought out much more than a mere "Handbook to Canada," an historical, political, social, geographical, and topographical guide for the use of travellers and settlers
over the greater portion of our North-American possessions.
The need of such a work, at once handy, comprehensive,
and trustworthy, has long been felt both by intending settlers and by readers at home, who are surprised, and not unnaturally, at the scanty information about so important a territory which is accessible to them. The volume is illustrated by a map, showing the whole extent of the Canadian Confederation from the shores of the Atlantic to those of the Pacific, and exhibiting all the details of inland communication, whether by Railway or the long chains of inland lakes. Those who have friends in British Columbia, Manitoba, &c., will find this map most useful; and it may be added that the historical chapters are full of materials for the future historian of Canada, or for the writer of an article on that subject in an encyclopedia."

"Manitoba Daily Free Press."—"Comprised in
this book is a mass of valuable information, which cannot fair to impress every reader with an intelligent idea of the great resources and capabilities of our country. In fact, we are convinced that in the words of the preface, a comprehensive, reliable, and at the same time cheap and handy work has been produced, which will furnish the kind of information most sought for in regard to the Dominion, and especially in regard to Manitoba and the North West territories. We have every reason to think that this handbook to Canada is one of the best contributions to immigration literature yet produced. It is also very handsomely got up tastefully bound, and very well printed."

"Graphic."—"We are already acquainted with Messrs.
Silver's Handbooks to Australasia and South Africa.
They are concisely written, accurate in information,
and full of practical details. The same praise may be accorded to the volume now before us, which comprises
a survey of the whole of British North America, the reader's researches being aided by an excellent map. To the intending emigrant the descriptions of Manitoba and British Columbia will be especially attractive."

The "Times."—"A remarkable work. . . Shows more impressively than probably any other kind of publication could the immense activity of our Australian Colonies and the rapid advances they have made since their very recent foundation. . . It is a creditable and useful, and, we believe, trustworthy publication."

AUSTRALIAN GRAZIER'S
GUIDE No. 1, Sheep. Crown 8vo. Limp cloth. 2s. 6d.

"Field."—"This little work is intended to supply, as fully as may be in a small compass, an admitted want in Colonial literature, and is indeed exactly the sort of 'Guide' for the assistance and instruction of those who propose to try their fortunes as stock-raisers abroad, and who so frequently inquire of the 'Field' for such help as is afforded by its pages."

KIRKMAN AND SON, ESTABLISHED NEARLY 150 YEARS.

3 and 9, SOHO-SQUARE, LONDON, W.

KIRKMAN AND SON'S PATENT STEEL FRAME

SIX FEET LONG, IN ELEGANT ROSEWOOD
OR WALNUT CASES,

Are considered by all who have heard them to combine a greater amount and resonance of tone, consistent with adaptability of size, shape, and elegance of appearance than those of any other manufacturer.

GRAND AND COTTAGE PIANOS.

It being considered by some competent judges that the German method of over or cross-stringing Pianos is attended with great advantage, Messrs. Kirkman and Son are now manufacturing both Grand and Cottage Pianos on this principle, the latter having the plain Sticker Action, which is not the case with Pianos of this class manufactured by other makers; in fact, the extreme simplicity of the action used by Messrs. Kirkman and Son in all their Pianos render them eminently suitable for exportation to the Colonies, where skilled workmen are few and far between.
All useless checks and complications are carefully avoided, thus enabling any tuner, with however superficial knowledge of the business, to regulate them or repair any damage they may sustain.

KIRKMAN AND SON

Have a reputation extending over nearly a Century and a Half.

There are now in the possession of the house Harpsichords and Virginals dated 1758 and 1778, manufactured by Jacobus and Abraham Kirkman.

The present members of the firm beg to call the attention of shippers and exporters to the fact that in ordering of this house they are dealing with a firm who manufacture on principles derived from experience of this almost unprecedented length.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators, also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company is formed for the purpose of acquiring, working, and developing an important Antimony Mine in Portugal, containing also gold quartz of a rich quality.

The Directors have been furnished by the Vendor with, and the latter guarantees the accuracy of, the following details as to the Mine:—

1. The Mine is situated near the Village of Lixa, on the banks of the River Douro, about 12 miles from Oporto, in the Kingdom of Portugal.

2. The concession measures 1,000 metres in length by 500 metres in width (little more or less), equal to an area of about 123 acres.

3. The concession is held direct from the Crown, and the Vendor possesses a lease for 199 years, 196 of which are unexpired. There is no fixed royalty but a payment of £1 for each ton of antimony ore sold, and the Government tax of five per cent. on net profits. The freeholders under the laws of Portugal are entitled to a royalty of 2½ per cent. on net profits, and compensation for damage done to surface or occupation; these claims have been commuted by a payment of £80 per annum.

4. The mine has hitherto been worked as an antimony mine. The quality of the mineral is very superior. The ore has realised on sale from £19 to £30 per ton. The Vendor made a net profit of £7,500 in 1880 on antimony ore extracted from the Tapada Mine.

The locality in which this mine is situated was one of the most important stations of the Romans, and was mentioned by Pliny as being the district whence large supplies of gold and silver were obtained. As antimony was only used by the ancients for medicinal purposes and as a pigment for dyeing, it was not worked by them except where it was associated with gold-bearing quartz. The Tapada was a virgin mine at the date of its acquisition by the Vendor. Its quartz reefs are parallel with those of one of the mines most extensively worked by the Romans about two miles distant.

As is generally the case in antimony mines in this district of Portugal, the ore is found in close proximity to metalliferous quartz veins. Gold in paying quantities has long been known to exist in the antimony ore, but the presence of gold in the quartz has only been recently discovered in this mine while working for antimony. About one hundred tons of this quartz have been recently shipped to England, samples of which have given more than two ounces to the ton, as will be seen by the certified assays of Messrs. Johnson and Matthey, Messrs. Butterfield and Jackson, Messrs. Johnson and Sons, as follows:—

Certificate of Assay of Tapada Quartz, made by Messrs. Johnson and Matthey, Assayers and Melters to the Bank of England, March 3, 1881.

* Produce of Gold ... 2'150 ozs. per ton of quartz.

" Silver ... 0'400 "

* This assay was from a bulk sample of the quartz extracted from the mine. Certificate of Assay of Tapada Quartz, made by Messrs. Butterfield and Jackson, March 3, 1881.

* Sample of Tapada Quartz No. 1 from 54 Metres from Stopes, the sample contained '0033 per cent. of visible Gold.

Silver per Ton of Ore ... 00zs. 3dwts. 22grs.

* Gold " " " " " 20 " 3 " 9 "

* The above sample was assayed twice in order to be quite sure of the above result.

Certificate of Assay of Tapada Quartz, made by Messrs. Johnson and Sons, Assayers to the Royal Mint, June 9, 1881.

* Fine Gold 2 ozs. 5dwts. per ton of 20 cwt.

* This Assay was from a cargo (ex Marcasite) of 143 casks of quartz weighing about 44 tons.

The property has been valued by Mr. R. Nelson Boyd, F.R.G.S., F.G.S., &c., at £171,000, including all machinery, plant, engines, houses, dressing-floors, and the estimated profit on working the Gold as well as the actual returns of profit from the antimony ore. The Vendor, who is the promoter of the Company, will accept for his mine as a going concern, £120,000, viz., £70,000 in cash and £50,000 in fully paid-up Shares. No portion of the purchase money will be paid to the Vendor until a good title be shown to the mine, to the satisfaction of the Solicitor of the Company, and until the Directors are satisfied of the value of the property by the inspection, report, and valuation of an independent English Engineer.

The Vendor guarantees a minimum dividend of five per cent. per annum for three years, and to provide for the payment of such dividend will, on completion of the purchase, deposit with the Company approved securities to the amount of £22,500.

The Vendor has furnished the Directors with a Report by Mr. R. Nelson Boyd, Civil and Mining Engineer, who visited the property in January last, and who writes:—

"I therefore attach a high value to your Tapada Mine, taking into consideration the purity of the mineral, the richness of the lode, and the existence of other undeveloped veins.

"The Mine at present yields about two tons of antimony ore per day, which commands the highest price in the market after simple hand dressing, and I understand the net profit last year was about £7,500.

"This result was obtained from shallow workings, the present depth being only 54 metres below the surface. I have every confidence that the mineral will increase in quantity at greater depth.

"At Tapada the antimony ore and the quartz veins have been found to be auriferous, and to become richer in depth. Samples have yielded as much as 22 ounces to the ton taken at a depth of 54 metres from the surface. The average yield of gold contained in the quartz, taking samples from the surface downwards, is 2 ounces per ton."

Professor Adolph Leuschner, of Oporto, Mining Engineer of the First Class in the Kingdom of Portugal, Member of the "Maya" Scientific Association of Clausthal, and formerly First Class Engineer of the Mining Department in the Kingdom of Hanover, has also inspected and reported on the Tapada Mine under date June 20th, 1881. Herr Leuschner estimates the value of the Vendor's interest therein, in money value, at £160,000.

Mr. B. P. Bidder, C.E., Member of the Institute of Civil Engineers, F.R.G.S., F.G.S., &c., &c., was on the 29th June, 1881, sent out on behalf of the Company to make an independent report for the guidance of the Directors, and the Solicitor to the Company has since received from him a telegram, under date 11th July, 1881, stating that he has made a thorough investigation of the Mine, and is well satisfied. Mr. Bidder estimates the present value of the Mine at one hundred and seventy-nine thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven pounds sterling (vide Report).

Herr Leuschner's original report, and a translated copy thereof, may be seen on application to the Secretary at the offices of the Company, where Mr. R. Nelson Boyd's original report and the certificates of the Assayers may also be seen.

It is the intention of the Directors, in due course after the allotment, to apply to the Stock Exchange for a settlement in, and quotation of, the Shares of the Company; and should no allotment be made the deposits will be returned in full. The vendor undertakes to defray all costs and expenses of agency, brokerage, advertising, printing, and all legal and other charges incidental to the formation of the Company up to the allotment of shares.

The only agreement made is between J. Blaikie Mac Glashan, the Vendor, of the one part, and Edward Marston as Trustee on behalf of the Company, of the other part, and bears date the 14th day of July, 1881. This Agreement, and the Articles of Association, may be seen at the offices of Mr. Reginald Hay Wilkins, Solicitor to the Company.

Samples of the ore, and numerous specimens of the quartz, containing visible gold, may be seen at the Offices of the Company.

Prospectuses, Reports, Forms of Application, &c., may be obtained from the Bankers and Brokers, or from the Secretary, at the Offices of the Company, 4, Broad-street Buildings, London, E.C.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, AUGUST 22, 1881.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, August 2; Madras and Allahabad, July 31; Calcutta, July 30.

THE official report on the state of the weather and prospects of the crops throughout India for the week ended July 19, says that good rain is again reported from the Punjab, where agricultural prospects are favourable. In the North Western Provinces and Oudh partial showers have fallen in all districts, but more is needed. In some Bengal districts the rainfall has been heavy, though in many it is reported to be insufficient, and transplanting operations are delayed by the dry weather. A like complaint comes from one district of Assam; but general prospects in that province and in British Burma are good. There is an improvement in Rajputana, where there has been a good deal of rain. In the Central India States, also, the monsoon is well established; and in the Central Provinces, from which general, and for the most part heavy, rain is reported; sowings are again retarded in some places by the continued wet. In most districts of the Bombay Presidency prospects are satisfactory. In the Southern Deccan, however, more rain is required, and in Guzerat a break would be beneficial. In Berar the rainfall of the week has been light. There is no change of importance in the Mysor State or in Coorg. General prospects are good in the latter province; they are improving in the western portion of the Mysor territory, where the rain is now said to have been sufficient; and to the east, as before, the rainfall has been partial and inadequate. There was more or less rain in all the reporting districts of the Madras Presidency; but the crops are suffering in places, and prospects do not appear to be quite so good as heretofore. The weather has been generally seasonable in the Punjab and to the east, and in the centre of the country. In parts of Northern and Southern India and of the Mysor State more rain is wanted.

THE detailed reports from the Provinces for the same week are:—

MADRAS.—General prospects not quite satisfactory.

BOMBAY.—Rain general, and in Guzerat break required; in Southern Deccan more rain needed, especially in Kaladgi sowing progressing; cholera prevalent in Guzerat and elsewhere, diminishing in Baroda.

BENGAL.—Heavy rain in a few districts, but insufficient in many; transplanting operations retarded and young plants endangered, particularly in Bogra; bhadoi and sugar cane doing well; early rice and jute being reaped in places; food grains cheap; rivers rising; fever in some places, otherwise public health good.

N.W.P. AND OUDH.—Partial showers, more or less heavy have fallen in all districts, but more rain is now everywhere needed; young crops generally healthy; prices rising slightly in Gorakhpur, Rae Bareilly, and Saharanpur; elsewhere stationary; general health good.

PUNJAB.—Reports on agricultural prospects from all districts favourable.

CENTRAL PROVINCES.—Rainfall general in all districts, with heavy showers in Hoshangabad, Jubbulpore, Mandla, Raipur, and Sambalpur; kharif sowings continue, but are retarded in some parts by continuous rain; cholera reported from some districts; elsewhere public health good; prices easy; cattle disease abating.

BRITISH BURMA.—Excepting in Arakan, cholera is somewhat prevalent, especially in Amherst district; some small-pox in a few places, otherwise public health good; cattle disease in some districts; ploughing and sowing proceed satisfactorily.

MYSOORE.—Partial and insufficient rain in eastern districts, but in the west it is sufficient, and prospects are improving; prices are nowhere high, but show a tendency to rise.

CENTRAL INDIA STATES (INDORE).—Monsoon well established; health good; agricultural prospects favourable.

RAJPUTANA.—Prospects fair throughout.

NEPAL (KATMANDU).—Weather sultry; much thunder and lightning throughout the week; agricultural prospects good.

We are glad to be enabled by the telegraph to announce better news from most of the threatened districts of Mysor—indeed, from all except the metropolitan district. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs on August 21:—

"Rain was pretty general throughout Mysor during the last week, but was not so plentiful as on the previous week. The prospects are fair, except in the Mysor district, where the crops are withering, and water is scarce in the Madura district."

DURING the week last reported on before the departure of the mail, the number of deaths from cholera in Bombay were sixteen only, as compared to twenty-two in the week immediately preceding, and forty-two in the week before that. The disease has continued to decline also at Surat, Baroda, and Broach.

THE situation in Afghanistan is unchanged. Ayub is still at Kandahar, the Ameer at Cabul; both talk of an immediate advance, and are busy with preparations for the decisive struggle. As Abdur Rahman has been providing for a rainy day by sending money and arms to Turkestan, so now we hear of Ayub doing the same at Herat.

PERHAPS the most important intelligence of the week, so far as we are concerned, is that Ayub has proclaimed himself not only as Ameer, but also as Ghazi. This proclamation accentuates and calls the attention of the world to the fact that he glories in the role of the champion of the anti-English party in Central Asia.

ON the other hand, the adhesion of the Maulavi Abdul Karim Khan (son of the Mushki-Alam), and of the young Akhund of Swat to the cause of the Ameer, probably shows that Abdur Rahman too is bidding for the support of the fanatical party in Afghanistan. It will, however, be remembered that the Akhund now spoken of is a very different man from the old Akhund, his father, who used to wield such immense influence among the wild tribes between the Kabul districts and Kashmir. That venerable saint and warrior died nearly four years ago, and most of his power died with him.

THE imprisonment, by Abdur Rahman, of the "soldiers' general" Muhammad Jan, is a dangerous step that will be pronounced masterly if it succeeds, foolish and desperate if it fails. The escape of Mir Batcha makes it even more critical than it would otherwise have been, and it may be feared that the open hostility thus declared will be of more import than the adhesion of the Mushki-Alam's son. The title of the Maulavi Abdul Karim is curiously misprinted Mould in the Times telegram.

THE telegrams from the correspondents of the Times at Lahore, Quetta, and Calcutta have kept us from day to day well abreast of the military and political movements, such as they have been, of the week. We give the daily telegrams from Lahore:—

AUGUST 16.—A report, which has been confirmed, has reached Quetta to-day that the Ameer's troops have retired northwards from Kelat-i-Ghilzai, and that the quarrels among the three sections of Ayub's troops continue.

AUGUST 17.—At noon on the 15th inst. more than a hundred Zakr Khels raided the village of Sunga, near Peshawur, capturing sixty head of cattle. The militia, with the villagers, in pursuing, failed to retake the booty. The Zakrs are the most powerful of the Khyber tribes, with whom a treaty for guarding the pass was made six months ago. The treaty provided that, while surrendering the right of collecting tolls, the tribes, assisted by a British contingent of Jezailchis, should, after arranging the details of management for themselves, protect passengers from either end, refrain from raiding the British territory, and punish those guilty of a breach of the treaty. The general management of the treaty was intrusted to a representative Jirgah of all the tribes. At first the Khusrugi section of the Zakrs refused to join, but finally yielded, and twenty-five hostages were given over to the Government. Before Feb. 15 the total subsidy was about a lakh and a half. The Zakr Khels dwell between Kala Dushtia and Lundi Koral, and the Kukis between Kushtia and Jamrud. Both tribes dominate the pass, and it seems that the raid was connived by the Kukis. As a matter of fact, both tribes are generally allied in all tribal quarrels. The Zakrs and Kukis are the only tribes which molested the British convoys during the war. Hitherto the treaty worked admirably. Doubtless a display of tact and firmness may restore peace and security.

AUGUST 18.—The Viceroy has been informed that the Ameer has fully paid all the troops at Cabul, has sent reinforcements and treasure to Kelat-i-Ghilzai and Ghazni, and that he is collecting transport for the march southwards; also that the Ameer has formally and publicly proclaimed the capture of Kandahar, signifying his intention to take the field in person. The Viceroy's news that Mahomed Jan had been arrested by the Ameer is fully corroborated. My information, just arrived from the frontier, is to the effect that Cabul is quiet. As far as is known, about 6,000 of the Ameer's troops were distributed over Shekabad, Ghazni, and Kelat up to last week.

AUGUST 19.—Ayub declares his intention of making an early march on Kelat-i-Ghilzai. Considerable numbers of the Duranis from the country districts have lately arrived at Kandahar to offer their services. The irregular infantry of Ayub decline to enlist as irregulars, except for cavalry. Meanwhile, Ayub has moved five regiments, under Sartip Nur Mahomed, to the Cabul side of the suburbs of Kandahar. He has also despatched two lakhs, with a quantity of small arms and guns, to Herat. Kelat-i-Ghilzai is still held by the Ameer's troops.

THE official telegrams from the Viceroy at Simla to the India-office have been fuller and more interesting than usual. The three following have been published, dated respectively August 18, 19, 21:—

"The Ameer has issued proclamations all over North Afghanistan to chiefs and others, stating that the enemy had occupied Kandahar, and that the Ameer would leave for Kandahar in a week. He has paid up all troops at headquarters, and sent reinforcements with money to Ghazni and Kelat-i-Ghilzai; he is also collecting transport and manufacturing ammunition. General Mahomed Jan and several other leading men have been arrested. All quiet in Cabul."

"Following, dated 18th, from St. John:—'Messenger has reached Chaman from Kandahar with news that Sartip Nur Mahomed Khan, with three regiments and some Herat horse, encamped outside Kandahar, on Kelat-i-Ghilzai side, on 11th, and was followed on 13th by Abdulla Khan Nasiri, with two more. Ayub was to follow. Destination of force stated to be Jaldak. The Durani Horse are being mustered for service. Two thousand rifles, two lakhs of rupees, and sixteen guns have been sent to Herat. The Duranis from out districts who had collected round Ayub have dispersed, disgusted at their treatment. Kelat-i-Ghilzai was still held by Ayub's troops, to relieve whom a force from Cabul is believed to have reached Mukur. It is supposed in Kandahar that the Ameer himself will follow. Another correspondent writes that Ayub's affairs are not prospering, and the transmission of guns, arms, and treasure to Herat may indicate this. All quiet on and within our frontier.'"

"Merchants from Kandahar confirms the reports of Ayub's forces being encamped outside Kandahar. He is delayed by need of raising money to pay troops; has sent one lakh to Herat, and is borrowing at Kandahar. The Cabuli soldiers who joined Ayub are said to be inclined to desert him. Including these men and recruits, he has now eight regiments, each 600 strong. Many of the Durani horsemen have gone to their homes. Intelligence has reached Kandahar of reinforcements of some strength being on road from Cabul to join Ameer's troops at Kelat-i-Ghilzai. Ameer himself expected. Among former English employes at Kandahar only one, a revenue collector, has been imprisoned."

The Quetta correspondent of the Times sends a brief resume of the week under date August 21:—

"The situation is unchanged since last week, except that Ayub has moved five regiments outside the city. It is generally supposed that he will not attempt to attack Kelat-i-Ghilzai, but will meet half way any advance from that place on Kandahar. He does not appear altogether confident of success. He has sent 16 guns, 2,000 stand of arms, a lakh of rupees, and a quantity of camp equipage and stores to Herat. This will give him the means of resistance in case he loses Kandahar, and the Ameer pursues his advantage by attacking Herat, where the people may be depended on to resist the Cabulis, the feud between the two provinces being now more embittered than ever. The Kandahar Duranis are getting tired of their idol already, and have no idea of making a sacrifice to enable Ayub to extend his rule over Cabul. Many of the Kandahar tribal horse have already gone off to their homes, and a muster is being made of the remainder to ascertain how many may be depended on. Only one man formerly in the English employment has been imprisoned, and this was on account of defalcations in his accounts since our departure. Last Friday week an attempt was made by a number of fanatics to plunder the Farsiwans' quarters, but it was stopped without bloodshed by Ayub. All remains tranquil on our side of the frontier."

A FULLER and more detailed account of the week's pro-

"The Ameer seems at last to have roused himself to the sense of his danger, and to be taking prompt and vigorous measures to meet it. He has issued a proclamation to the chiefs and people of Northern Afghanistan, stating that Ayub Khan has occupied Kandahar and that he himself is about to start for the seat of the war. He has advanced two months' pay to the troops at Cabul, and is busy collecting transport and manufacturing ammunition. Large reinforcements, under Mahomed Aziz Khan, marched for Kelat-i-Ghilzai on the 7th inst., and it is believed that another brigade of all arms has followed. Since that date the tribal chiefs have been summoned to Cabul with their levies in order to accompany the Ameer, and the Ghilzai chiefs have been directed to enlist freely from the Andara, Taraki, Katawaz, Zurmat, and Suliman sections of their tribe, and to collect a strong body of irregulars at Ghazni. Irregular levies of the Tagabis and Kohistanis have been brought to Cabul, so as to set free the regular troops garrisoned there for active operations. General Mahomed Jan and some other leading men, whose fidelity was suspected, have been thrown into prison, and will, it is supposed, be kept confined till the crisis is over. This step, coupled with the activity now shown by Abdur Rahman, is said to have had a decided effect in quieting down the excitement which the news of Ayub's victory had created in Cabul. Unfortunately, however, Mir Batcha, one of the principal leaders of the opposition, managed to escape. When the latest news left Cabul the Ameer proposed to set out in a week, escorted by a large body-guard of Turkestan horse, and accompanied, among others, by Mould Abdul Kurreem Khan, son of the fanatic priest Mooshk-i-Alam—a man whose influence will lend great weight to whichever side he may adopt. The Akhoond of Swat, another man who carries great authority among the devout Mussulmans, is said to have arrived at Cabul with a large following. It is also stated that the long deferred blow against Herat from Turkestan is about to be struck, and that Abdul Guddah, one of the Ameer's generals, is preparing to march from Dowlutgar with strong levies of the Taimani, Taiwara, Aimak, and Dehzangi tribesmen, in the hope of crushing Kushdil Khan, who is holding Herat for Ayub Khan with a small garrison. The Ameer's envoy has had an interview with the Viceroy at Simla. Rumour says that he asked for assistance in the shape of troops and arms, but not money, as it was only likely to excite the cupidity of the Afghans. Ayub still shows no sign of leaving Kandahar, and there are rumours of a dissension between the Herati, Candahari, and Cabuli elements. His army at Kandahar are soldiers who accompanied him from Herat, and they are said to have refused to proceed further and to have been disbanded. The Duranis from the outlying districts who joined Ayub Khan are reported to be dispersing, and it is stated that the Sirdar has sent to Herat some of the guns captured at Karez-i-Atta. On the other hand, it would appear that Sartip Mir Mahomed Khan has rejoined Ayub with several infantry regiments and some cavalry, and has encamped outside Kandahar, on the Kelat-i-Ghilzai road, and that the Durani horse are being mustered for service. Ayub Khan, like Abdur Rahman, has issued a proclamation to the Northern Afghans. He describes himself as Ghazi and Ameer, and says that his object is to wage a holy war. The Afghan situation may be briefly summed up by saying that while Abdur Rahman's prospects have greatly improved during the last fortnight, the future is as uncertain as it was before the battle of Karez-i-Atta. On the whole, the chances seem to be in favour of the Ameer, and if his present vigour is not merely spasmodic, it is possible that he may be able, if not to crush Ayub Khan, at least to stop his further advance, and the struggle may end by the separation of Afghanistan into two kingdoms, Abdur Rahman holding Cabul and Turkestan, and Ayub Kandahar and Herat."

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times is of opinion that the recent expedition against the Mahsud Waziris has had a good effect. Telegraphing yesterday, Aug. 21, he says:—

"The settlement with the Mahsud Waziris is now progressing. The Jirgah which accompanied the Chief Mashah to Cabul has now returned, and a large Jirgah of the tribe, assembled at Kot Shinghi, has insisted upon the surrender of Mashah and Yarih to the Indian Government. The stolen property is being brought in, and the lesson of the recent expedition seems to have had an excellent effect."

FURTHER particulars are now telegraphed, from the same source, of the audacious outrage on British territory perpetrated by the Khaibar tribes in the immediate vicinity of Peshawur, and actually within the limits of our cantonments there. Most people will be disposed to agree with the mild suggestion of the correspondent, that these outrages—for the present is at least the second that has been committed in a way showing the utmost contempt for our troops at Peshawur—"seem to show" that the Pass Afridis are not disposed "to observe strictly" (!) the terms of the treaty about which so much fuss was made a few months ago. Our readers will observe that the "Yakha Khels" and the "Zabha Khels" of the Times telegram, are one and the same tribe, the Zakha Khel, a sept of the great Afridi clan. The telegram runs as follows:—

"A raid has been made on the British village of Sunga, close to Peshawur. One villager was killed, another was wounded, and a herd of buffaloes was driven off. The military pursued the raiders, but without success, the raiders being too strong to be engaged. It is believed that the offenders are Yakha Khels, a Khyber tribe, holding the country between Katakustia and Lundikotal. It is not unlikely that the Kuka Khels, another section of the Afridi tribe, whose country lies between Katakustia and Janrood, were also implicated. This raid, and the recent attack on a cavalry picquet at Peshawur, seem to show that the Pass Afridis are not disposed to observe strictly the terms of the treaty into which they entered some months ago, and it is rumoured that the Indian Government will blockade the Zabha and Kuka Khels next winter."

THE statement that "the military"—whoever they may be, we trust not the whole of the garrison of Peshawur!—"pursued the raiders" without success, because the latter were "too strong to be engaged," is amusing, and smacks of that euphemism that talks of a stampede as "a strategical movement to the rear." A party of "military" following respectfully out of rifle range an enemy that is "too strong to be engaged," is not exactly our notion of a "pursuit."

OF the earlier outrage, the Bombay Gazette says:—

"The chief offender in the raid on the picquet of the 19th Bengal Lancers was Karnal, a man of the Malikdin Khel; and it is almost certain that all his accomplices were Khyber Afridis."

THE Viceroy's plans for the coming cold weather are now made out. From the Times telegram of yesterday we learn that it has been settled that the Viceroy will leave Simla about Nov. 1. He will spend about a month visiting Delhi, Agra, and Rajputana, and will arrive in Calcutta early in December. No durbar will be held at Agra or elsewhere. It is rumoured that Lord Ripon will visit Burmah during the winter.

We are glad to observe that the Englishman states, on authority, that Sir Ashley Eden's tenure of office as Lieutenant Governor of Bengal is to be extended for the period during which he acted as president of the army commission.

THE ex-Viceroy of India and the Countess of Lytton have left Carlton-house-terrace for the Isle of Wight.

At last, according to the announcement of the Prime Minister on Saturday, the Indian Budget will come on to-day. But, alas, Lord Hartington's statement—which should be a particularly valuable one, and will certainly be scanned by Anglo-Indians with peculiar interest—will be delivered to a beggarly array of empty benches.

THE Indian Mirror, one of the cleverest of the native papers of India, and one about whose loyalty there can be no manner of question, is never tired of pointing out how blind the present Government is in regard to the advance of Russia on the road to India. The Viceroy might often read with much advantage and edification the Russian articles in the Mirror; whilst on Afghan affairs it is frequently singularly well informed. In a recent issue, published before the news of Ayub's conquest of Kandahar had reached India, we read:—

"Rumours are current that Abdur Rahman is trying to assert his sovereignty over the tribes on the Punjab frontier whom the Government of India has always held to be independent, and it is certain that he received an embassy from the Mahsud Waziris while the British expedition against them was in progress."

It would probably be difficult to find, in the history of political controversy in this country, a parallel to the circumstances under which Sir Bartle Frere has just put forth his most thorough and triumphant refutation of the charges of political turpitude made against him in his absence by Mr. Gladstone in the Midlothian speeches. Sir Bartle Frere's pamphlet is published by Mr. Murray, and is entitled, "Afghanistan and South Africa: A Letter to the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, M.P., regarding portions of his Midlothian speeches, with a letter to the late Sir John Kaye, and other papers." We shall take an early opportunity of summarising those parts of the pamphlet that relate to Afghanistan, and particularly the Note in which Sir Bartle meets Mr. Gladstone's accusations and replies to them. The covering letter shows the extraordinary hardship of the position in which the accused Governor was placed by those charges. It runs as follows:—

"TO THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, M.P.

SIR,—In the course of a political tour in Scotland in 1879 you introduced my name in some of your many speeches as one of the principal instigators of a foreign policy which you denounced as wicked and aggressive, as depraving the morality, and ruining the finances, of England. These speeches, I need hardly say, produced an immense effect on public opinion, both in England and in the distant colony where I was then on duty. It was impossible for me to make, at the time, any effectual reply to what was so said. It was nearly a month before the report of the speeches made in Midlothian could reach the colony—another month before any answer could be received in England, even by return of post. Large numbers of my countrymen had, consequently, in reliance on your testimony, condemned me, and all I had done or proposed to do, in South Africa, before I could be heard in my own defence; and I was recalled from South Africa at a very critical period in the fortunes of its colonies. To the personal results to myself I have no intention to refer; but I believe that the statements and opinions to which those speeches gave currency and authority, caused, and are still causing, infinite mischief in South Africa. They have retarded the prosperity and progress of the European colonies in that region, they have laid the foundation of wars; and raised very serious obstacles to the religious, moral, and political advancement of the native races. On my return to England, I find the old calumnies and misrepresentations of fact and opinion, to which those utterances gave currency, constantly recalled and used by your political followers to the prejudice of the interests, and the ruin of the prosperity, of a region which might otherwise become a southern home of men of European races, discharging a great duty in civilising and raising in the scale of humanity the millions of natives of Africa, who for many ages past have never known what permanent peace and civilisation might mean. Such misrepresentations, which I would gladly believe were the result of want of knowledge of actual facts, and not a wilful distortion of them, affect necessarily not only the past history, but the future of those important colonies. I deem it, therefore, a duty I owe to the people whose best interests are at stake, to show how unfounded are some, and how distorted are all, the charges brought against me, on your authority, of ever having advocated an unjust or aggressive policy towards our neighbours, or an oppressive policy towards our own subjects, and, no doubt, you would yourself be the first frankly to acknowledge this—did you know the facts as I know them. I hope in time to show that, both in Afghanistan and Africa, the advice I gave and the action I took was the only advice and the only action compatible with my duty to my country and my Sovereign. I confine myself, however, for the present to endeavouring to show in the note of which I take the liberty to enclose a copy, that my views and advice regarding the course to be pursued both in Afghanistan and South Africa have been very gravely misrepresented. I cannot hope that, whilst weighted with the cares of the whole nation, you will have time to consider whether there was ever any just ground for the attacks on any character I may have had for justice, humanity, or intelligent devotion to public duty; but a time may come when you may have leisure to think on these things; and I may at least have put it in the power of those who come after us to judge whether I have been justly included amongst those who, in these latter days, have brought ruin and disgrace on regions in which it has been my duty and my pride for forty-six years to serve my country.—I have the honour to be, sir, your obedient servant,

"H. B. E. FRERE.

"Athenæum Club, July, 1881."

THE Times of India gives the following obituary of the week ending August 2, 1881:—Rajendra Bikram Sah, ex-Sovereign of Nepal; Mr. S. M. Moens, C.S., judge of Aligarh; and Mr. G. R. Gatliff, D.P.W.

A REUTER's telegram from Bombay, dated August 17, announced that the Bank of Bombay had on that day increased its minimum rate of interest and discount from 5 to 6 per cent. Another, from Calcutta, dated August 20, announced that the Bank of Bengal had on that day followed suit with a similar alteration of rate.

THE energy and vigour with which Sir Ashley Eden is developing the railway communications of Bengal, and thus opening up the province, are well illustrated by a list recently published of the new railways under construction or projected in the lieutenant governorship. The following lines are being made:—First, the extension of the Tirhoot State Railway, from Muzafpur to Bettiah, seventy-five miles, and from Durbunga to Pipra Ghat, twenty-eight miles; secondly, the extension of the Calcutta and South Eastern Railway to Diamond Harbour; third, the Central Bengal Railway scheme, which, when complete, will embrace four lines—namely, first, from Maimari, on the East Indian Railway, to Ranaghat, on the Eastern Bengal Railway, thirty-four miles; second, from Santipore to Bhagwangola, on the Ganges, eighty-two miles; third, from Ranaghat to Jessore and Khoolna, eighty-two miles; fourth, from Bongong to Calcutta, forty-seven miles. The following lines have been surveyed or projected:—First, the extension of the Northern Bengal State Railway to Dinapore and Caragola; second, a line from Dacca to Mymensingh; and a third line is from Palamow to Dultongung and Barum. The fourth line runs through Chota Nagpore, which will eventually form the link of a direct Calcutta and Bombay Railway. The fifth line is a steam tramway, six miles long, from Baedanath, on the East Indian line, to Deogarh. Most of these lines—probably all, except one or two that are likely to be overweighted in a hopeless competition for the cheap river-borne traffic of the Delta—promise to be fairly remunerative; all will co-operate in the rapid development of the unbounded resources of the rich country they traverse.

WE learn from the Calcutta telegram in to-day's Times that the Government has at last yielded to the representation of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and the coal companies, and has put a stop to the sale of coal to the public by the East Indian Railway Company. It is notified that the Secretary of State has ruled that the company cannot lawfully raise coal from their own mines, except for purposes of their own line and of any branch lines worked directly by them. Orders have been issued that they shall regulate their output of coal as far as possible in accordance with their own requirements, and shall withdraw from their agreements for the supply of other railways on the earliest date they can do so without rendering themselves liable for a breach of contract. Whatever inferior coal, unfit for their own consumption and necessarily brought up along with the good coal they require, must be sold by public auction at the pit's mouth, so as to prevent competition with other coal owners in the Calcutta market. We presume that the company will now dispose of or close some of its extensive coal mines.

THE concluding volumes of Mr. Hunter's magnum opus, the "Imperial Gazetteer," have appeared this week, and we intend to devote a short series of articles to the more detailed examination of this great national work. We observe that a postscript preface, in the concluding volume, makes some acknowledgments of valuable help rendered to Mr. Hunter in the performance of his gigantic task. Mr. G. W. W. Barclay, M.A., late editor of the Calcutta Englishman, who has been for some years continuously employed on the editing staff of the "Imperial Gazetteer," is selected, with one or two others, for the special thanks of the editor-in-chief; and we venture to express a hope that the signal services rendered by Mr. Barclay in this capacity will receive due recognition from the Government of India.

OF the Calcutta tea market, Messrs. W. Moran and Co.'s report of same date says:—

"On July 21 10,356 packages were offered and sold. There was a brisk demand, and previous rates were fully maintained, ordinary broken kinds advancing from half to one anna per pound. On the 28th 7,100 chests sold; prices were firm for all except finest sorts; Pekoe Souchongs, and all medium kinds rose in value half anna per pound. Fine and common broken were unchanged. The weather in the various growing districts is at present comparatively favourable, but it is now evident that the unseasonable weather in the earlier part of the year will be more felt than was anticipated, and production will probably fall short of expectations. In a few weeks, we hope to be able to present a revised estimate of what the amount available for shipment to England will be this season."

OF the indigo crop, Messrs. J. Thomas and Co.'s price current, up to date of departure of mail, has the following:—

"Our advices from Lower Bengal generally continue unsatisfactory, and some concerns in Kishnagur and Moorsshedabad are already closing manufacture with but poor results. There is nothing fresh to report from the other districts, but Purneah factories appear to be making a fairly good season, and Bhagulpore a very poor one. Tirhoot and Chumparun have continued to get bad produce, and, with one or two exceptions, the yield is decidedly below the average. More rain is needed, especially for the Khoonties; however, letters received this morning report a good fall at some concerns. Chuprah has been more fortunate than the neighbouring districts, and is making a better turnout, although rain is much wanted. In our next we hope to give the returns from first cuttings, but judging from present appearances unless the yield from Khoonties be unusually good, the season is likely to fall considerably short of the expectations formed by planters at the beginning of manufacture. Rain is still required in Benares and the Doab districts, but prospects continue good, and manufacture has commenced in some places.

DURING the past week several books of considerable importance and of especial interest to Indian readers have appeared. We have received, and shall notice in our next, the following:—

- (1) "The Afghan War of 1879-80. Being a complete Narrative of the Capture of Cabul, the Seige of Sherpur, the Battle of Ahmad Khel, the Brilliant March to Kandahar, and the Defeat of Ayub Khan, with the Operations on the Helmund, and the Settlement with Abdur Rahman Khan." By HOWARD HENSMAN, special correspondent of the Pioneer (Allahabad) and the Daily News (London). With maps. London: Wm. H. Allen and Co., 1881.
- (2) "Sikandar Nama, e Bara: or Book of Alexander the Great. Written A.D. 1,200, by Abu-Muhammad-bin-Yusuf-bin-Muayyid-i-Nizam-ud-din." Translated for the first time out of the Persian into prose, with critical and explanatory remarks, with an introductory preface, and with a life of the author collected from various Persian sources. By Capt. H. WILBERFORCE CLARKE, R.E., &c., &c. London, Wm. H. Allen and Co.
- (3) "Tales from Indian History; being the Annals of India retold in Narratives." By J. TALBOYS WHEELER, late assistant secretary, London; W. Thacker and Co., 1881.
- (4) "Tropical Dysentery and Chronic Diarrhoea; Liver Abscess, Malarial Cachexia, Insolation, with Other Forms of Tropical Disease; and on Health of European Children and Others in India." By Sir JOSEPH FAYRER, K.C.S.I., LL.D., M.D., F.R.S., President of the Medical Board, India-office, Honorary Physician to the Queen and to the Prince of Wales, &c., &c., &c. London: J. and A. Churchill, 1881.

WE advert, in our leading columns to-day, to the rapid progress of the gold districts in the Wainad. Several of the leading gold mining companies have now united in a highly important and very promising scheme for providing for the sanitation and the medical care of the south-eastern portion of the Wainad district. A sanitary officer will be appointed, and a hospital and dispensary established at once. Some seven companies have already joined this union; and, as the aggregate of the capital represented is more than a million sterling, the power for good of such an association will be very considerable. In another place we lay before our readers to-day the report of an important meeting, held in London this week, of scientific men and others interested in the improvement of the processes of gold mining. Fervet opus.

A CORONATION IN NEPAL.—At the coronation of the boy King of Nepal, which will take place early in November next, embassies from Lhasa and China, and Chinese troops to the number, it is said, of 14,000, will assemble in the valley of Katmandu. Two thousand elephants are being trained for the "tumasha," and several lakhs of rupees will be expended in feasting the Brahmins.—Bombay Gazette.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE LIFE AND WRITINGS OF CARLYLE.*

THE "Carlyle Literature," that was naturally to be looked for on the occasion of the death of the sage of Chelsea, has already been tolerably voluminous; but we have not seen any account, unofficial and by an outsider as it is, that can at all compare in interest with the Memoirs now published by Mr. Shepherd and Mr. Williamson. The obituary essay that appeared in the Graphic is worked up with numerous inedited letters and other personal reminiscences; and the excellent illustrations that appeared in the Graphic are also reproduced. For more than ten years before Carlyle's death Mr. Shepherd had planned his work, and busied himself in collecting materials for it; and the result of all this industry and devotion, combined with the supplementary notices collected by Mr. Williamson, forms a series of memoirs which will be read with the utmost satisfaction by all those who desire full and accurate information regarding the life and writings of the most prominent literary man of the middle of the nineteenth century.

THE RAJATARANGINI.*

MR. JOGESH CHUNDER DUTT, brother of the well-known and promising Bengal civilian, Mr. Romesh Chunder Dutt, has done a good work by translating from the original Sanskrit the early part of the valuable history of Kashmir known as "The Rajatarangini." A sketch of the contents of the first six cantos, from the pen of the late Professor Horace Hayman Wilson, appeared in the fifteenth volume of the "Asiatic Researches;" but Mr. Dutt's work has the great advantage of being a literal translation. The instalment of it that is now given to the public brings the student down to the reign of King Harsha, circa A.D. 1101. The latter portion of Kahlana Pandit's work is a detailed account of the forty-eight years immediately preceding the time at which the author wrote—A.D. 1148; and we shall look forward to the translation of this portion with much interest. The "Rajatarangini" was subsequently continued under the titles "Rajavali" "Jainarajatarangini" and "Rajavalpitaka," down to the time of Akbar, and a good translation of the whole, with a full index, would be a work that would entitle its author to the deep gratitude of all Orientalists. Mr. Dutt has performed his task, so far as it is now before us, with much care and success; his English is simple and unaffected, and he has contrived at the same time to adhere closely to the wording of the original.

THE READER'S HANDBOOK.*

TO the thousands of Indian schools and colleges, in which English literature is a subject of daily instruction, and where allusions and references form an important feature of the examination papers, Dr. Brewer's admirable "Reader's Handbook of Allusions, References, Plots, and Stories" will be a book of the highest value. The Englishman in India, too, who is seldom able to carry about with him a large library of reference, will find herein condensed information on most of the points requiring elucidation or illustration in his readings of current English literature. Names, whether of works in prose or poetry, or of characters or places mentioned in those works, are herein explained; the terse yet clear way in which the plots of poems and dramas are summarised is worthy of all praise.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

SIR HENRY NORMAN AND THE PENSION RULES.

THE chief difficulty in the way of fair play is the present constitution of the Indian Council. Between General Norman and his brother officers is war to the knife. It is, therefore, easy to predict that the revised pension rules, in the framing of which General Norman will have taken a leading part, will be illiberal and inadequate. We believe that Lord Hartington is only anxious to do justice, but it will be very difficult to get him to listen to anything outside his Council chamber; and the only hope for adequate relief is in the services of sympathising and pertinacious members of Parliament, and the good offices of the Viceroy's Council, if it turn out, as we anticipate, that the revised rules are a mere mockery. Indian officers will be grateful to Lord Elcho and Sir T. Lawrence for the questions they put to the Secretary of State for India in the House on the 20th of last month. The answers given clearly indicate the India-office view, and are disingenuous. The Marquis of Hartington is incapable of knowingly returning a misleading answer, or of knowingly being guilty of suppressio veri or suggestio falsi in replying, but he is in the hands of his Council. Suffice it to say, as regards the answers in question, that they are singularly incorrect; Lord Hartington's statement that Staff Corps officers, leaving it to be inferred that all Staff Corps officers can serve on for a pension of £1,100 a year, is the reverse of fact; and, lastly, the leaving it to be inferred that the officers of the new line regiments, who were formerly in the Indian Army, and whose pensions and the rules for calculating them have been now for some years placed on a satisfactory footing, can be compulsorily retired and ousted volens volens out of their prescriptive right to the pension of £1,100 a year is quite Indian in its nature and has the Norman twang about it. All we can say is that Indian officers would like to have similar pension rules, and would be quite willing, if they got them, to labour under similar imaginary disabilities.—Englishman.

THE FOREIGN-OFFICE.

THE detection of Mr. Stuart, the deputy registrar of the Foreign-office, in communicating private information to the Bhopal State only anticipated expectations, formed long ago, regarding this office. It so responsible a clerk as the deputy registrar could have been capable of so betraying his trust, what is not possible with men who are heavily involved, and, therefore, liable to strong temptations to turn a penny in the best way that offered? The name of the deputy registrar reminds us to ask whether this very person, while attached to the Foreign-office, was not allowed openly to carry on a millinery shop in Chowringhi two or three years ago? With whose authority was he allowed to engage in trade while a Government servant? During a furlough from his office he kept the shop so openly that he sat in it and sold things himself, and he continued the practice even after his leave had expired. Every fellow-clerk in his office, from first to last, knew of this affair. How was it that such a gross breach of the rules of the Government service was permitted? And who is responsible for such a scandal? This person is evidently of a commercial turn; having sold cloth, he now sells papers or information! We have repeatedly found fault with the Foreign-office for various reasons. Here is a burning proof that our complaints were not unfounded. We hope the present inquiry will lead to a complete reform of all abuses in the office. Is it true that its accounts are in arrear with the Accounts Department?—Indian Mirror.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

FORAGE SUPPLY COMMITTEE.—A special committee composed of a civilian, a commissariat officer, a British and a Bengal cavalry officer, and an officer of the Royal Horse Artillery has been ordered to assemble at Mirat on the 15th of October next to report on the whole question of forage supply for the mounted branches of the service in the Bengal Presidency. A veterinary surgeon might with advantage be added to the Committee, especially as there are some of them in this country who have devoted a good deal of attention to the question of forage.—Ibid.

CUSTOMS REVENUE.—The net amount of Indian Sea and Land Customs Revenue, exclusive of salt revenue, for the first three months of the current official year, has been Rs.59,63,000, as compared with Rs.55,45,000 in the corresponding period of last year.—Englishman.

SUBORDINATE JUDICIAL SERVICE.—A proposal of the High Court to increase, for a time at least, the subordinate judicial service—both judges and munsifs—in Bengal, is at present under the consideration of the Government.—Ibid.

DONATION.—The Government of India has presented Mr. C. L. Tupper, under secretary in the Finance and Revenue Department, with a donation of Rs.1,500, for his work on the "customary law of the Punjab."—Ibid.

POLITICAL APPOINTMENTS.—Surg. Major J. P. Starton is appointed resident of the Western States of Rajputana, but officiates as resident in Maiwar, and Lieut. Col. W. Tweedie, C.S.I., acts as resident in the Western States of Rajputana.—Ibid.

DARJILING.—The local paper tells us that rain fell in the Darjiling district on Saturday July 16, and since then more or less rain has fallen every twenty-four hours. The temperature is still abnormally high; but alternate rain and heat are exactly what tea planters want.—Ibid.

SIAM.—Owing to the seasonable rainfall the prospects of the crops in Siam are reported to be favourable.—Ibid.

THE TIKARI CASE.—The great Tikari case, so far as the hearing before the judge of Patna is concerned, is drawing to a close. The evidence for the defence has been taken. Mr. Evans has summed up, and a week has been allowed to the Advocate General to prepare his reply, which will take perhaps another week in the delivery.—Ibid.

LIEUT. DENNYS.—Lieut. C. J. Dennys, of the Bengal Staff Corps, is to be appointed a cantonment magistrate in the Punjab.—Ibid.

CARRIER PIGEONS.—There is said to be a scheme on foot in the Quartermaster General's Department for training carrier pigeons for use at the different large military stations in this country, after the plan adopted in France and Germany.—Ibid.

CALCUTTA FREIGHTS.—At the date of the departure of the mail, the amount of unfixed tonnage in port was 15,000 tons. Rates:—London via Canal: Wheat 57s. 6d. and 55s.; jute, 62s. 6d.; tea, 70s. London via Cape: Wheat, 47s. 6d., 50s.; linseed, 50s.; rapeseed, 52s. 6d., 55s., 57s. 6d.; poppyseed, 55s., 57s. 6d. Agents asking for an advance of 5s. on previous rates. Liverpool: Wheat, 45s., 47s. 6d.; linseed, 47s. 6d. Hull: Linseed, 53s. 9d.

MADRAS.

THE SOUTH WEST MONSOON AT COCHIN.—During the whole of this week we have had little or no rain, and the temperature has, in consequence, gone up considerably. We hear complaints from all sides that the paddy plants have withered away owing to the excessive heat. Altogether, the look-out is a very gloomy one for cultivators.—Cochin Argus.

A MEMORIAL OF MR. ADAM.—It has been decided to perpetuate the memory of the late Right Hon. W. P. Adam at Ootacamund by the erection of a public market, with an ornamental memorial fountain. The committee of management consists of General Payn, Sir J. Gordon, the Chief Justice of Madras, the Bishop of Madras, Dr. Furnell, and other influential men in Southern India.—Times of India.

THE CARNATIC FAMILY.—According to a Madras paper, Mir Feroze Hossein Khan, of the Carnatic Family, proceeds to England shortly. This gentleman is related by marriage to the late Ghulam Mahomed Ghouse Khan, the last of the Nawabs of the Carnatic, and it is said that he is going with a view to represent to the proper authorities "matters connected with the affairs of the Carnatic."—Ibid.

DR. POPE.—The Rev. Dr. Pope, warden of Bishop Cotton's schools and colleges, goes home at the end of the year for good, as I told you in a previous letter, and the committee of the institution find it no easy matter to fill his place. I fancy they will have to send to England for a suitable successor to the worthy Doctor, who, with all his faults, has made his mark as a successful educationalist in Southern India.—Ibid.

MR. PUCKLE.—Mr. R. K. Puckle, C.I.E., second member of the board of revenue at Madras, is about to retire from the service.—Englishman.

MR. SANDFORD ON DANCING.—Bangalore society was startled the other day when the learned judge of the Chief Court, Mr. Sandford said, or rather was reported to have said, during the hearing of a case, that "no modest lady would learn dancing." But it appears that the judicial functionary did not make any such sweeping assertion after all. Writing to a local journal Mr. Sandford says: "A remark made by me in the trial of an appeal lately heard in my court has been, to the best of my belief, incorrectly reported in your paper. What I said, or at any rate what I intended to say, was 'No modest native lady would learn dancing.' I was alluding, of course, to the professional dancing of native dancing girls, which was the subject of the appeal."—Bombay Gazette.

DR. SHORTT.—With reference to the award of the Albert medal to Dr. Lowson for heroism, the Madras Mail says the decoration would be equally well bestowed on Deputy Surgeon General Shortt, Madras Army, retired. Some years ago when he risked his life repeatedly every day in his experiments to discover a cure for the poison of the cobra, a jugler was suddenly bitten by a cobra in the forefinger, and Dr. Shortt without a moment's hesitation, applied his mouth to the wound, sucked out the poison, ligatured the finger above the wound, and the man recovered. The doctor never bragged, and our contemporary only happens to know of his quiet deed of heroism from the fact that a friend witnessed it.—Ibid.

BOMBAY.

THE GOA TREATY.—At the opening of the Junta Geral da Provincia the other day, the Governor General of Portuguese India made a statement regarding the results of the Goa Treaty between Great Britain and Portugal. He said the experience of one year had certainly firmly convinced them that the new order of things had been productive of advantages to the population in general, and more especially to the poorer classes.—Bombay Gazette.

THE NEW CHAIRMAN, CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—Mr. E. Comber, of the firm of Messrs. Lyon and Co., has been elected chairman of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, in the place of Mr. J. N. Graham.—Ibid.

DIVORCE SUITS.—Two decrees for divorce were pronounced by a Judge of the Bombay High Court the other day—one against Captain J. S. King, acting assistant superintendent of Sawantwadee, at the suit of his wife; and the other against a Mrs. Pitt, wife of an engine-driver on the G.I.P. Railway, in the latter case with costs against a co-respondent named Warrington, captain of a British India S.N. Company's steamer.—Ibid.

THE BHILS.—The heavy rain which has fallen in the Bhil districts seems to have had the effect, anticipated by local officers, of diverting the attention of the wild ryots to their fields; and no further cases of lawlessness have been reported. Major Probyn will, however, carry out his mission by meeting as many of the headmen of the pals as possible, and making inquiry into the various causes of complaint put forward.—Ibid.

ARABIA AND SYRIA.—Reports received from Muscat give some details of the recent disturbances in Oman. In June last a conflict took place between the Beni Omar and the El Howasineh at a place named El-islam, in the Batinah. An attack had been made by the Ibriyeen of El-awabi on the Beni Ghafir tribe at Amk. Information has been received that the prohibition on the export of food grains from the Velayat of Baghdad, which was necessitated by the dearth of provisions in Irak, has recently been removed. It is reported from Baghdad that there had been no case of plague since June 27. Quarantine at Selahie, Tenkret, Ghumet Ali, Aleppo, and Damascus has been reduced to eight days.—Ibid.

The dispute which has been waging for several years between the Bombay Municipality and certain Mahomedan fakirs regarding a pir's tomb in a corner of the public Victoria Gardens, has been carried to the High Court, where the matter was part heard and the further hearing adjourned.

MAJOR SCOTT, the administrator of the Gondal State, Kathiawar, has published an order in that State by which protection is assured to those who make or assist widow re-marriages. This is a good example, which might be followed with advantage in other native States.

BERAR.—Surgeon C. Little is appointed sanitary commissioner in the Haidarabad assigned districts, in the place of Surgeon Major R. T. Abbott, deceased.—Englishman.

THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL COMPANY.—The Globe of Saturday evening states:—"We are informed on good authority that the Peninsula and Oriental Steamboat Company have at length definitely decided upon the long-contemplated step of abandoning Southampton as a port of arrival and departure for their steamers, and that, after the end of September, passengers will be embarked at Gravesend. In all probability they will be conveyed from Liverpool-street station to Tilbury at the P. and O. Company's expense, and there put on board the steamers by tender. It is also intended that the homeward-bound steamers shall call at Plymouth for the convenience of those passengers who choose to disembark at that port. This decision is almost of vital importance to the town of Southampton, which depends so largely for its prosperity upon business connected with the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamers, and the Great Eastern and London, Tilbury, and South-end Railway Companies will be large gainers by the increased traffic over their lines."

SIR ASHLEY EDEN.—The Lieutenant Governor will leave Darjiling on August 8, for his annual river tour. He will visit Rangpur, Dhubri, Dakka, Backerganj, Khulna and Port Canning, reaching Calcutta about August 24. From Calcutta Sir A. Eden will proceed to Midnapur, returning thence to Calcutta. He will be accompanied on tour by his personal staff and by Messrs. Cockerell and Levinge.—Englishman.

DARJILING FORESTS.—Few persons can have travelled much in the neighbourhood of Darjiling without being struck with the reckless way in which the country has been denuded of timber. The mischief thus done is practically irreparable, and is far from being confined to the mere loss of timber sources which, properly conserved, would be perennial. Yet it is still allowed to go on unchecked, if not in British territories, in the parts of Sikkim immediately adjoining them. All along the banks of the Ranjit the destruction of valuable sal forest, for the mere purpose of cultivation, continues unabated, and the time is not far distant when the rainfall of the district will be seriously affected. The trees, if they are not burnt, are allowed to lie and rot where they are felled, no attempt even being made to utilise them.—Englishman.

AN EXCHANGE FOR CALCUTTA.—Among the many anomalies which mark the business arrangements of Calcutta, perhaps the most prominent and the least justified by circumstances is the absence of a mercantile exchange. Among the various obstacles to the establishment of such an institution, the most formidable is, we suspect, the apathy of those principally interested. Whether this apathy is less now than it has hitherto been, we do not know. At all events a movement is on foot for the removal of what in most mercantile communities of importance would be considered a very serious want. The proposal, which has been submitted to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, is to erect a commodious exchange on the site at present occupied by the mean block of buildings in the new China bazaar opposite the Oriental Bank, containing among its appendages branch post, telegraph and telephone offices, a restaurant, members' and brokers' offices, and perhaps a library and reading room and rooms for the Chamber of Commerce. This, it is estimated, would cost about four lakhs, which might be raised by a debenture loan, and would, it is believed, be covered by the receipts in the shape of rent and subscriptions. It is considered, however, a sine qua non that the Government should give substantial aid in the shape of, at least, a free site.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY, AUG. 16.

RUSSIAN ADVANCE IN CENTRAL ASIA.

Lord STRATHNAIRN asked the Under Secretary of State for India whether the Government had received any information of the annexation of Askabad by Russia and its occupation by Russian troops. The noble lord observed that he had placed this question on the notice paper, but he also wished to ask the Government whether a railroad had been constructed or was in progress of construction from Askabad to Michaeloff, a new port, near the centre of the east coast of the Caspian, which frequently had been the intended, or actual base of Russian operations against Central Asia. He went on to say that Askabad was an old Turcoman fort, about 200 miles south east of Michaeloff, and stood on the junction of the Khiva caravan road with the Michaeloff and Herat road, which left Merv eighty miles east of its nearest point. It appeared by a debate in another place that her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at St. Petersburg had informed her Majesty's Government that this annexation and military occupation had taken place, but seemingly without the consent of her Majesty's Government. Askabad was important as belonging to the vast region called Central Asia, which ran between and marched with India and Afghanistan to its south and Russia to the north. Roughly speaking, it was of great political interest to both Powers, who, therefore, for the sake of their mutual rights and a good understanding between themselves, established a balance of power in Central Asia, of which Count Nesselrode often said England and Russia were the arbiters, and England and Russia had officially promised to uphold its integrity. Russia in possession of Askabad was sure to connect it by rail with Michaeloff, and by another rail with Herat and Merv. It was, he contended, impossible to argue that the annexation and military occupation of Askabad and its district by Russia without the consent of her Majesty's Government was not a very dangerous disturbance of the Central Asian balance of power. Astrakan, at the head of the Caspian, stood at the mouths of the Volga, and the operation against Herat by Michaeloff was 300 miles shorter than that of the operation formerly intended by Russia by the line from Astrakan of the Attek River and valley, with the further advantage that it would not awaken the susceptibilities of Persia as to any interference with her territorial rights on the Attek Valley. Those susceptibilities were so strong that when we were on good terms with Persia we obtained an engagement from Russia that she would respect these rights for a considerable distance up the course of the River Attek. In the Eastern Question and Afghanistan debates it was not the policy of her Majesty's Government to contemplate Russia's present policy by the light of the past, but to keep Russia in the background, although she was the great actor in both dramas from the end of the 17th century. The question of Askabad could not be properly appreciated without a brief reference to past history, in which he hoped their lordships would accompany him. In 1711 Russia, signally defeated in her attempt to invade the Bosphorus and Constantinople from the Black Sea and line of the Pruth, as shown by the Treaty of Falcscen, turned her thoughts of aggrandisement to the Caspian Sea as a base of operations against Persia and Central Asia, through which she wished to conduct her mercantile military caravan route from Orenburg or Siberia to the mouths of the Amoor River and the China Ocean. Fortune favoured her. The Afghans had invaded and overrun Persia and the Shah had fled to Ispahan, and, in despair, entreated the Czar to aid him with an army against the Afghans. The Czar consented, but on the condition that Persia should cede him her fairest provinces on the south east of the Caspian. Under the influence of a treacherous Prime Minister, the Shah, in a treaty bearing the Minister's dishonoured name—the treaty of Ismail Bey—ceded the provinces; but Peter the Great, with protestations of his unceasing friendship for his faithful ally and good friend the Shah, declined to fulfil the treaty promises of military aid. From this time to 1838 Russia's annexations from north to south and west to east were too well known to require description, but they mostly were in the direction he had stated. In that year Count Nesselrode had promised formally to Lord Palmerston that if her Majesty's Government would agree to the ascent to the throne of one of the Persian princes, not the heir, he engaged the Emperor's word that he should not undertake any war of reconquest, especially of Herat, the key of Afghanistan, which was the gate of India. But the prince had hardly become Shah before he, with the consent and assistance of General Simonich, Russian Minister at Teheran, organised the most formidable army that had ever been set on foot since Nadir Shah, and, in spite of all our Government's and Lord Palmerston's energetic protests, besieged Herat, accompanied by the Russian and English Ministers. From the Shah's camp the Russian Minister called on the Governor of Herat to surrender it to the Shah, or he would bring up an army to besiege it, and on Khamran Khan, backed up by a gallant British artillery officer, Capt. Pottinger, refusing to do so, General Simonich borrowed from the Shah 2,000 Russian deserters, and with a Persian division attacked the main redoubt of Herat and was severely wounded and repulsed. In the meantime, General Simonich had detached to Cabul his military attaché, Capt. Vicovich, to seduce Dost Mahomed, the Ameer of Afghanistan, from our alliance, and to persuade him, by a secret treaty, to give up Kandahar to Persia. Capt. Vicovich succeeded in both attempts, of which the results were war between India and Afghanistan, the flight of Dost Mahomed from Cabul, and the English occupation of Cabul by Lord Keane. There was another fatal consequence of Dost Mahomed's rupture with India, effected by Russian agency—the retreat from Cabul. Under an inefficient leader the column retired in disorder, encumbered by a helpless crowd of women and children, in frost and snow, with a scanty commissariat, with no precautions in the dangerous passes of the Suliman ranges, with no advance or rear guard, no reconnoitring, no crowning of heights. The English troops were attacked on all sides, and, with the exception of one or two individuals, destroyed by the savage and warlike tribes who inhabited and held the Suliman ranges and their dangerous passes, except one, the Golowrie Pass, further down. These ranges branched off from the Himalayas, opposite Peshawur, in a southerly direction, and divided India from Afghanistan to the meeting of the five rivers at Mittunkote. Their inhabitants were so aggressive that India, at a great expense, was obliged to maintain a small army of all arms, with a line of forts, to protect our Trans-Indus and Punjab possessions from their devastations. So fanatical were these people that it was death to a British subject to enter their mountains. Over such subjects the Ameer, their religious head, held a sort of suzerainty, half feudal, half religious, paying them £70,000 a year, instead of their paying him taxes. And he had no power over them for good, but only for the worst purposes, such as a cruel Jehad, which the Ameer meditated against India in 1857 to relieve Islamism in danger before Delhi; and if he had done so, we, in the opinion of the most competent judges, should have lost India. Such were the irregular soldiery of the Ameer of United Afghanistan, who had also at his disposal a fairly organised regular army, for the East, of all arms of from 45,000 to 50,000 men; but it might be said that the better organised they were the more dangerous they were, for they had a disagreeable quality of deserting to the enemy in a body. As regarded the present Ameer, surely no one could believe that he was of the slightest use with Ayub Khan in possession of Kandahar and the tribes of the Suliman ranges ready to rise in his support should he march on Cabul. And it was equally certain that, as Afghanistan was no longer part of our balance of power in Central Asia, to entrust the defences of our north west frontier to troops who would have to take the field in the deadly climate of Peshawur would be a useless sacrifice of them.

Viscount ENFIELD: Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at St. Petersburg has been informed that the country immediately surrounding Askabad is the southern boundary of the Tekke Oasis, which has been annexed to Russia; that the headquarters of General Rohrbeg, the successor of General Scobeleff, are at Askabad, but that there might be a few troops at Girvan; that some troops had advanced as far as Luftabad, but have returned. Until her Majesty's Government receives more exact information it cannot express an opinion as to the extent to which the Russian advances may trench, if they trench at all, upon what has been considered to be Persian territory.

The Marquis of SALISBURY suggested that the noble earl opposite (Earl Granville) should state whether his information on this subject was exactly similar to that which had reached the India-office. It was most important to know the exact position of the Russian forces on the borders of the Persian Empire. Of course he was quite prepared to be told that the information received at the Foreign-office was not such as could be communicated at present to the House; but he should like, if possible, to know what information the noble earl possessed on the subject—whether Persia was a consenting party to the presence of Russian troops on the ground they occupied, and whether there was any ground for connecting the operations of Russia with those of Ayub Khan. He asked these questions, which might appear to the noble earl indiscreet, because it seemed to him—he said so with hesitation, and he hoped the noble viscount would not consider it a personal reflection—that cold water was being thrown upon this subject. At all events, the importance of it in relation to English interests seemed to be somewhat depreciated by the noble earl disdaining to take notice of it.

Earl GRANVILLE: I agree with the noble marquis that perhaps I ought to have answered this question. The reason I did not is this: In the first instance, the noble and gallant Lord (Strathnairn) gave notice of his intention to address his question to the Under Secretary of State for India; then he wrote to me, requesting me to be in my place in order that I might answer it. I came down to the House accordingly, but the noble and gallant lord did not appear till a late hour, and his question was postponed. Then he gave public notice that he wished to put it to the noble viscount. In these circumstances I did not think it necessary to publicly interfere, but I furnished my noble friend with the answer I should myself have given. I therefore do not think I am altogether open to the charge of the noble marquis. On the other hand, there is some inconvenience in the noble marquis the late Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs starting up and putting a whole string of questions on this subject, some of which I cannot at this moment remember, without giving the slightest notice of his intention. As far as I can gather these questions, I do not think I am in a position to give an affirmative answer to any of them; but if the noble marquis will repeat them—say on Thursday—I shall be glad to give him all the information we possess.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY, AUG. 18.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY (REDEMPTION OF ANNUITIES) BILL.

Viscount ENFIELD, in moving that this bill be read a second time, said the object of the bill was twofold—first, to extend the power granted by the Purchase Act of 1879, by which the Secretary of State is permitted to create India 4 per cent. stock in order to purchase the annuity of any proprietor of East Indian railway stock, so as to enable him to create $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. stock (or stock at any other rate not exceeding 4 per cent.), in order to purchase the annuity of any holder thereof. The object was, secondly, to act in a similar manner in regard to any other existing liabilities of the Indian Government. In all cases it was provided that there should be a reduction of interest (by at least 1-9th), and that the saving so effected should be used, by way of sinking fund, to extinguish the permanent stock created within the period for which the liability existed.

The bill was read a second time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY, AUG. 18.

ASSAM TEA COMPANIES.

Mr. O'DONNELL asked the Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been called to the fact that the average mortality of the indentured coolies in the Assam tea gardens had been 10 per cent. per annum; whether he was aware that, notwithstanding this excessive mortality, the period for service for indentured coolies in the Assam tea gardens had been extended from three to five years; and whether he would grant a return of the servants of the Crown in the Supreme Government of India and in the Government of Bengal possessing pecuniary interests in Assam tea companies and holding shares in Assam tea gardens.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: It is the case that, according to the last annual report—that for 1879—on coolie immigration in Assam, the mortality rate among coolies in two districts exceeded 8 per cent. in one district and 9 per cent. in another for that year. Indeed, on two gardens it was considerably higher still during the second half of the same year. The average death-rate of the districts, however, was not 10 per cent., but 5.68 per cent., which, although a considerable improvement over previous years, is a high rate, and it was pointed out by the Secretary of State to the Government of India that, with a view to lessen the evil, efforts should be made in the direction of improving the condition of newly imported coolies; and, further, that a garden in which a high death-rate should be found to be due to neglect on the part of the planter should be closed to coolies immigrating under the Bengal Act of 1873. It is proposed, among other things, by a bill now before the Bengal Council, to extend the maximum of contract to five years, this being one of the recommendations made by a commission which has recently reported on the Bengal Emigration Act of 1873. As regards the return asked for respecting the interest of servants of the Crown in India in Assam tea companies and gardens, there is no information in the India-office on the subject; but there is nothing contrary to the rules laid down by the Secretary of State in 1861 and 1862 in the possession of shares by civil servants in such enterprises, provided they take no part in the management and are not employed in the district where the operations are carried on.

BENGAL GAOLS.

Mr. O'DONNELL asked the Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been called to the last administrative report on the Bengal gaols for 1880, issued on April 7, 1881, in which, among other instances of terrible destruction of life in Bengal gaols, the following figures appeared with regard to the death-rate per thousand in the gaol of Julpigoree:—Death-rate per thousand in 1879, 282.7; death-rate per thousand in 1880, 341.2; whether it was officially reported of the same Julpigoree Gaol, in which the death-rate was so fearful in 1879 and 1880, that "the mortality during the first quarter of the current year, 1881, had been at the rate of 612 per thousand per annum;" and whether any censure had been passed on the responsible Government of Bengal for permitting this state of things to continue for a period of two and a-quarter years unchecked, and without breaking up this death gaol and removing the prisoners to less fatal places of imprisonment.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: The Secretary of State is aware of the statement in the report for 1880 that in the Julpigoree Gaol the death-rates during the years 1879 and 1880, and during the first quarter of the current year, were such as are stated in the question of the hon. member. The mortality in this gaol has engaged the special attention of the Inspector General of Gaols and of the Lieutenant Governor, who, in his resolution of the 30th June last, gave orders that should there be no improvement apparent in the returns for that month the gaol must be temporarily closed. In 1879 this gaol was only third in point of mortality, so that there was no reason for singling it out for closing in that year. The Inspector General of Gaols says in his report for 1880, dated the 7th of April, 1881, page 45:—"The extraordinary death-rate in the Julpigoree Gaol has been, and I regret to say continues to be the cause of much anxiety. Everything that the medical officer in charge or myself could suggest has been tried without effect. The mortality for the first quarter of the current year has been 612 per mille per annum. If there is no decided improvement in the next two months I propose breaking up the gaol and transferring all the prisoners with sentences above one month to one of the neighbouring gaols." (Hear.) The following extract from a private letter of the secretary to the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal shows that from the moment of assuming the administration this subject has engaged his attention:—"Soon after assuming charge of Bengal, Sir Ashley Eden was struck with the unsatisfactory, and necessarily unhealthy, condition of some of the gaols, and under orders then issued by him the building of eight entirely new gaols was commenced; and these gaols, which are being constructed upon an approved plan, are fast approaching completion."

Mr. O'DONNELL said he had avoided personal matters in his question, and had confined it to facts only.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said he had not intended to infer that the hon. member made a personal charge; but as the case in reference to Bengal had been brought so prominently forward he had thought it only just to read the extract which he had given.

Mr. O'DONNELL asked the Secretary of State for India whether he had passed any censure upon the Government of Bengal for the enormous number of floggings, numbering 8,322 in 1879, and 3,386 in the first six months of 1880, inflicted upon prisoners suffering from the dietary scales enforced during those periods; whether he would lay upon the table of the House a copy of such censure; whether he would also cause a report to be laid upon the table of the House of the number of prisoners flogged for non-performance of penal task-work while subject to said dietary scales who subsequently died in prison from dysentery, diarrhoea, anæmia, and various forms of starvation diseases; and whether he would provide that such report be compiled under independent and impartial supervision.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: A marked decrease has taken place in the number of corporal punishments inflicted on prisoners in the Bengal gaols since 1879. In that year it was 8,322, in the first half of 1880 it was 3,386, in the second half of 1880 it was 1,268. In the first quarter of the present year only 284 prisoners were punished with stripes, and a further proportionate decrease is expected during the remaining months of the year. This great decrease is, no doubt, in a great measure due to the implicit directions given by the Lieutenant Governor in his resolution on the report of 1879, that this form of punishment should be restricted to the most serious cases, since we find that the number of gaol offences greatly increased during the same period. In 1880 the number of offences per cent. of prisoners passing through the gaols was 114.6 compared with 88 in the previous year. There will be no objection to lay on the table of the House the ordinary administration report of the Gaol Department for 1880. This report contains, among other things, statistics as to the offences committed by convicts, the punishments inflicted on them, and the causes of the deaths throughout the various prisons. It does not give these statistics, however, in the form specified by the hon. member, as it does not show the punishments inflicted for particular forms of offences, nor does it show the death-rate among those of the prisoners who were punished. This matter, like the mortality in Indian gaols, is under consideration by a special committee of the Indian Council, and the question whether further statistics should be called for from the Government of India will, no doubt, receive their attention. (Hear.)

NATIVE ARMY OF BENGAL.

Mr. O'DONNELL asked the Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been called to the fact that 922 men per 1,000 in the native army of Bengal, mustering 58,873 strong, were admitted to hospitals for fever during the year 1878, and whether the Surgeon General of Bengal had reported that such excessive sickness was mainly due to the fact that "the dwelling-house of the native soldier is unhealthy from top to bottom."

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: My attention has been called to both these statements, though the form in which the statement is put in the question is not quite accurate. The admissions into hospital were 922 per 1,000 strength, not 922 men admitted per 1,000 the same man may be admitted many times during the twelve months. The deaths from fever did not exceed 4.81 per 1,000. The remarks of the Army Sanitary Commission on these reports were forwarded to the Government of India, whose attention has frequently been called to the faulty construction of the native lines. Much has been done, I believe, towards their improvement, though much doubtless remains to be done, and the attention of the Viceroy will again be drawn to the subject.

IMPORTATION OF EUROPEAN GIRLS INTO INDIA.

Mr. O'DONNELL asked the Secretary of State for India whether his attention had been drawn to the numerous complaints in the Bombay press with regard to the importation for immoral purposes and by deception and false pretences of large numbers of European girls, principally from Wallachia and the Lower Danube countries, who were condemned thenceforth to infamous bondage in India. He referred the noble marquis particularly to the Bombay Guardian and the Bombay Gazette.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said the Bombay Gazette had been examined, but it apparently said nothing about the matter. He would look into the Bombay press and make inquiries.

LIEUT. COLONEL H. E. CONINGHAM.

Sir H. WILMOT asked the Secretary of State for India whether he would state on what grounds Lieut. Colonel Henry Evelyn Coningham, of the Madras Staff Corps, holding the appointment of district superintendent of police at Tinnevely, was precluded from returning to military duty, and why no additional allowances were granted to him for performing duties in the police department, his present allowances in the police being the unemployed pay of his rank and nothing more; and why he was not permitted to draw the same pay as that of officers of his rank in the native infantry regiments—viz., Rs.270 a month—in addition to his unemployed pay.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: Lieut. Colonel Coningham, after a little more than five years' service in the army, joined the police in 1861, and does not appear since that time to have performed regimental duty. It would, therefore, unless the military authorities had special grounds for desiring it, not be expedient to bring back an officer after twenty years' absence from military duty into a regiment in a position suitable to his standing. His present allowances in the police are those allotted to the position in that service which he has risen in, and these happened to be those of his regimental rank; or should they be less he is permitted to draw the full pay of his rank in the army. The Government of India did not recognise unemployed pay. Lieut. Colonel Coningham is drawing his full pay. It may be assumed that he entered the police in his own interests, and for the sake of higher salary or other advantage over regimental pay. It would not be for the advantage of the service either that on attaining a rank which would now give him an advantage in joining a regiment he should be allowed to do so to the prejudice of officers who have throughout performed regimental duty with its earlier disadvantages, or that, on the other hand, he should be permitted to place himself out of employment in order to draw his full military pay in idleness. As he draws the full pay of his civil or police appointment no addition can be made to it. (Hear, hear.)

THE KHYBER PASS.

Sir W. BARTELOT: I beg to ask the noble lord whether the reports in the newspapers are true that the tribes to whom the safe custody of the Khyber Pass was entrusted have made raids into the Peshawar district, and if so, what steps have been taken to restore the passage of the Khyber?

The Marquis of HARTINGTON: I have received no communication from the Government of India on the subject.

INDIAN (HOME) AND WAR-OFFICE CHARGES.

Sir G. BALFOUR asked the Financial Secretary to the Treasury why the report of Lord Northbrook's committee on the Indian (Home) and War-office charges had not been laid before Parliament, and whether a copy of the proceedings would at once be placed in the library for reference, prior to the discussion on the Indian Budget; and whether the information needed by the Controller and Auditor General, as set forth in his report on the appropriation accounts on army (Indian) home charges, would, without delay, be supplied, both to the House and to the Auditor General.

Lord F. CAVENDISH: As far as I am aware the report of Lord Northbrook's committee on the reimbursement of effective charges incurred in England on account of her Majesty's troops serving in India, dated Oct. 4, 1880, has not yet been moved for. There is no objection to giving it if my hon. and gallant friend will move for it, and if he wishes it a copy can be placed in the library without delay. As regards the second question, I can only assure my hon. and gallant friend that the Treasury will supply, as far as it is able to do so, all information which the Controller and Auditor General may require in connection with the account of the vote on Indian home charges. Such information would in due course reach the House through the report of the Controller and Auditor General and of the Committee of Public Accounts.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—SATURDAY, AUG. 20.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

Mr. GLADSTONE announced that, in the event of the report of supply being closed that day, the Secretary of State for India would make his financial statement on Monday.

THE Hon. W. Huddleston, Acting Governor of Madras, will resign the service in June next.

CALCUTTA OUT IN THE COLD.—The Statesman trusts there is no truth in the rumour that Lord Ripon will, after leaving Simla in October, stay a couple of months in Agra. "There can be no objection to the durbars and other official fetes, but there are strong objections to His Excellency spending such a long period of the precious winter months there. Last year His Excellency was compelled by sickness to break journey at Allahabad, and to remain a considerable time there, and while he was missed here, the cause of delay gave rise to a good deal of kindly sympathy for the Viceroy and the Marchioness of Ripon. We very much fear that other feelings will be aroused if they voluntarily absented themselves for this large portion of the few precious months when we expect their presence here. If Calcutta is only to be visited by the Government when there is nothing else to be done, or nowhere else to visit, let the sham of calling Calcutta the capital be done away with, and let it be understood that Calcutta shall henceforth be the capital of Bengal only."

AFGHAN MEMORIAL FUND, COLABA CHURCH.—The Bombay Gazette understands that Rs.344 have been subscribed by the 4th Bombay Rifles to provide a special memorial of the late Lieut. Col. Crispin, if possible; otherwise to be devoted to the general fund. The British officers of the 25th B.L.I. have subscribed Rs.55. Rs.200 have been sent by Mrs. Simpson and children in memory of Surg. Major J. Simpson, 23rd N.L.I., and the same sum has been received in memory of Lieut. Col. L. G. Brown, 8th N.I., from his mother and brother. An anonymous Rs.100 was sent through a Bombay bank "in memory of two brother officers." Much delay is caused by the necessity of references to the architect in London, who has undertaken the work of preparing the designs and estimates; but early next month details of the work are expected, which will satisfy many enquiries, and give a great impulse to the interest taken in the memorial. The total amount at present paid into the fund is Rs.2,735-14-6.

THE WAINAD GOLDFIELDS.

A CAPITAL book on the Wainad goldfields, thoroughly practical and yet most readable, has just been brought out by Mr. S. Jennings, the secretary of the South Indian Company and of the Indian Glenrock Company, who has recently returned from a tour of inspection. Mr. Jennings, who is a Fellow of the Linnæan and of the Royal Geographical, writes as a naturalist and a man of science, as well as a keen gold-pro prospector and a shrewd and thoughtful observer of men and things generally. His style is bright and lively, and he describes what he saw and did in the gold districts with charming frankness and ease, which carry his readers along with him in the best of spirits. His book is entitled "My Visit to the Goldfields in the South-East Wynaad"; and is published by Chapman and Hall (Limited). It is admirably illustrated with engravings from drawings made on the spot, and in every way is well calculated to effect its object—that of familiarising English readers with a region destined to become famous as one of the homes of gold.

As to the auriferous richness of the districts which he examined, Mr. Jennings is fully in accord with those earlier official reports which have already attracted so much English capital thither. And on this point, the sobriety and obvious candour of his opinions and expectations, even more than the calm confidence he evinces in the sure future of the enterprise, will be very valuable to those who are investing their capital in the exploitation of this new and most promising field. Mr. Jennings anticipates a satisfactory return even upon the first rough crushings; but he shows that this return will be considerably exceeded when the best method of treating the concentrates shall have been determined.

To those who know anything, from personal experience, of the marvellous rapidity of the progress of an Australian district when once gold has been found, the energy and verve that are being displayed by the gold pioneers in the Wainad will not be surprising. Mr. Jennings is able to testify that vigorous operations are being carried on, "that tunnels are being driven, machinery erected, roads made, bungalows, coolie-lines, and stores are springing up in all directions, the evidences of energetic determination to accomplish whatever is to be accomplished. Experienced and capable skill is to be found there too; and not a little enthusiasm amongst mining engineers, who to a man are confident."

Of course, where the scene of operations is in a country totally unlike, in its physical aspects and political and social conditions, any other in which gold mining has been carried on on a large scale, much has still to be learnt, numerous experiments will have to be tried, and doubtless many mistakes will be made before the best methods, in regard both to cheapness and to efficiency, will be discovered for every phase and detail of the work. Apart from the scientific question of the best modes of obtaining the gold, and the various theories on the process of reduction, there are the questions of roads, of railways, of sanitation, of banking—above all, there is the all-important question of labour. On all these points Mr. Jennings has something to say; on every point he gives excellent reasons for the faith that is in him, and we rise from the perusal of his book with the conviction that it would be difficult to find a safer or more sensible guide. As an instance of this accuracy of judgment, we would quote his remarks on the suggestion that has been made that Chinese labour might be introduced into the mining districts with advantage:—"I venture to think that in Southern India it would not prove of benefit in the long run. Any considerable influx of Chinese workmen would in all probability exercise an unfavourable influence upon native labour. I have already said that native labour is both abundant and cheap." Of course, the only difficulty with regard to native labour consists in the timidity of the native workmen—which, it has been suggested, might cause a stampede or a strike in case of any untoward accident happening to a party of them working underground. But we quite agree with Mr. Jennings that this danger is not sufficiently pressing to warrant such a ruinous measure as the introduction of the Heathen Chinese. The present writer has been down in a Raniganj coal mine, and seen gangs of Bauris and Santals, working as cheerily as Cornishmen, in galleries at a great depth below the surface; and they do so in parts of the Raniganj district under circumstances of considerable danger from flooding.

INDIAN TEA TRADE WITH KABUL AND CENTRAL ASIA.

(FROM THE PRESS COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE.)

From a report on the Peshawar tea trade with Kabul and Central Asian countries, it appears that from October, 1880, to Jan., 1881, 2,144 maunds of Indian tea and 7,940 maunds of China tea were exported from Peshawur. These figures include the whole of the tea exported over the frontier in the direction of Kabul and Bokhara. It has been ascertained that by far the greatest proportion of the tea exported from Peshawur is consumed in Bokhara. From Oct., 1880, to Jan., 1881, Peshawur merchants have sent to Bokhara 3,288 maunds of green China tea, 2,069 maunds of black China tea, 602 maunds of green Almora tea, 198 maunds of chara Almora tea, 262 maunds of putta Almora tea, 13½ maunds of black Almora tea, 524 maunds of green Dera Doon tea, 118 maunds of putta Dera Doon tea, and 30 maunds of green Kangra tea. In Bokhara proper green China tea is in great demand. China Lonka is of three qualities.

No. 1 is bought in Peshawar at	Rs.119	per maund
is sold in Bokhara at	147	"
No. 2 is bought in Peshawar at	112	"
is sold in Bokhara at	145	"
No. 3 is bought in Peshawar at	108-8	"
is sold in Bokhara at	130-8	"

There is a class of China tea known as "Kazaz," which has been from time to time imported to Bokhara from Russia. Persons who have long resided in Bokhara say that this tea is bought in Russia at 40 per maund and is sold in Bokhara at Rs.76 per maund. The road is now closed to this trade; but these figures show how far Russian merchants can compete with the Indian trade.

Black China tea is not drunk to any great extent in Bokhara, but finds a market in Khokand. It sells in Peshawar at 6 as. per lb. Bokhara is the central mart. The Indian teas are exported thither, but for the most part are at once bought up by merchants from Samarkand, Tashkend, Khokand, and other outlying places, and are consumed in those countries.

Of Indian teas, Lonka from Almora, Dera Doon, and Kangra, sells at Rs.77 per maund; from the trade returns it appears that the price per maund in Peshawur is 60.

The merchants in Peshawur are of opinion that there is an increasing demand for Indian green teas. Some Indian black tea was sent by one merchant as an experiment to Bokhara, but the tea did not meet with approval; this may be due to the fact that the Indian black tea was of the second and third quality, the heavy price of the first quality rendering its export unprofitable.

The average journey to Bokhara takes from three to four months. Merchants bound for Bokhara do not seek for a market on the road; it entails trouble to unpack their goods. They start with the fixed intention of bringing back Bokhara silks and gold, and are sure of a certain profit.

The route from Cabul runs by Bamian, Saighan, Doaba, Heibak, Hasrat Sultan, Khulm, Balkh, Kileffort, Karshi, to Bokhara.

The market in Bokhara is most uncertain, and there is a singular want of concert among the exporting merchants. The market is frequently over-stocked, and the smaller men come back with heavy losses. At the present time out of eleven merchants who have traded Bokhara with teas, seven declare that they can no longer trade with profit—that it is all a matter of luck.

The daily consumption of teas in Bokhara including the outlying countries is said to be 80 maunds; in Cabul 6 maunds, in Jelalabad 2 maunds, in Peshawur 5 maunds. From this it will be seen that the consumption of tea in Cabul is insignificant as compared to that of Bokhara, and all merchants connected with tea agree in saying that Kabul will never afford a large market for the sale of teas.

From the books of Peshawur merchants, it appears that from October, 1880, to January, 1881, 82 maunds of green China tea and 36 maunds of black China tea have been sent to Cabul, and 295 maunds of green Almora tea, 151 maunds of green Dera Doon tea, 7 maunds putta Dera Doon tea, and 30 maunds green Kangra tea. The greater part of the tea consumed in Cabul is exported thither by Cabul merchants.

China Lonka of the first quality is by far the most popular of teas as it is the most expensive, and all classes in Bokhara will stint themselves in many of the necessities of life to indulge in this luxury. A saying has almost passed into a proverb in Bokhara that "a man drinks tea or dies," and it is clear that Bokhara and the neighbouring countries will always be a great and increasing market for teas.

IMPORTATION OF EUROPEAN GIRLS INTO INDIA.

THE following letter on the above subject has been addressed to the editor of the Times :—

"Sir,—With regard to a question put by me to-day, the answer of which could not be traced by the India-office, allow me state, in reply to many inquiries, that the Bombay Gazette has for a considerable period been publishing letters from 'A Lady Visitor' on the painful topic. In the Bombay Gazette of July 4 there is the following paragraph on the horrible business extracted from the Bombay Guardian :—

"AN ABOMINABLE TRAFFIC.—We have more than once, in past years, spoken in our columns of the abominable traffic by which European girls, chiefly from Wallachia, we believe, often Jewesses, are brought to this city to lead lives of prostitution, that the chief traders may get themselves up as gentlemen and hang about our thoroughfares, and then go back to Europe with well-filled pockets, while their victims live and rot and die. We are glad to see that attention is being drawn to this enormous evil by correspondents of a contemporary."

"I understand that the police of Bombay are inclined to resent these disclosures, Bombay being under the Contagious Diseases Acts, and the official implication being that irregularities are impossible. As even previous to the Brussels revelations on the pretended Police des Mœurs I had formed my opinion on these detestable productions of degraded legislation, I need not add that the official implication carries slight weight with me. I am told that the German white slavery trade with Calcutta deserves the attentions of a Vigilance Association.—I have to remain, yours faithfully, F. H. O'DONNELL. House of Commons, August 18."

GOLD MINING APPLIANCES.

ON Friday last there was an important meeting of gentlemen interested in gold mining at the Works of the Foreign and Colonial Tunnelling and Prospecting Company, in Guildford-street, York-road, Lambeth, to inspect various kinds of gold mining appliances, and to witness a demonstration of a new chemical system of treating complex auriferous ores. There were present the Right Hon. Lyon Playfair, C.B., M.P., chairman of the company; Colonel Bolton, Colonel Beaumont, the agent general for Queensland, and others interested in gold mining and metallurgical operations. The chemical process is that of Messrs. Molloy and Warren, and its object is the extraction of gold and silver from ores of a refractory character, such as tellurides pyrites, arsenical pyrites, &c., which can only be partially treated by the ordinary methods of extraction. In the new system the ore is first crushed and roasted, and these processes were shown in operation by means of the Beaumont steam stamp which works direct, and is similar in action to a steam hammer, and an ordinary reverberatory furnace. The ore is then placed in a stone tank, and there subjected to a nitro-hydrochloric solvent. The liquid solution is drawn off into a settling tank and from thence into a precipitating tank, where the gold is precipitated as a fine powder. This powder is then placed in an ordinary crucible and melted down into gold bar. Should there be any silver present it is obtained by washing the residual ore, precipitating and melting down the product as in the case of the gold. The chief point is that about 90 per cent. of the acid is recovered after use, otherwise the process would prove too expensive, as has been the case previously when tried in practice. It is claimed that by this process the whole of the gold and silver is extracted from the ore however refractory it may be. This is, in fact, done by ordinary analysis by the wet process, which, however, involves the loss of the acid. By means of the process discovered by Messrs. Molloy and Warren the same acid is used over and over again, with only a fractional loss, as was demonstrated at the experiments. The plant and machinery employed are of a simple character, and appear to be subject only to slow deterioration. Besides the mining apparatus, there was also shown a system of electric lighting, consisting of a Gramme machine and a series of "British" incandescent lamps, arranged to show the application of that form of lighting to mines and other underground works.

HOME NEWS.

PRESENTATION OF MEDALS FOR BRAVERY BY THE QUEEN.

—The 66th Regiment, under the command of Colonel Hogg, marched from Parkhurst, on Wednesday, to Osborne, for the purpose of witnessing the ceremony of presentation of medals for bravery on the field of battle to six soldiers of the regiment by the Queen. The recipients, who were at the battle of Maiwand, were Sergeant Williams, Sergeant T. Lovell, Lance Corporal Martin, Private Clayton, and Private Battle, and Colour Sergeant Woods, of the 5th Fusiliers. The Queen pinned the medal on the breast of each of the gallant fellows, and addressed a few encouraging remarks to each and applauding their courage in the hour of battle.

NAVAL INTELLIGENCE.—The following information respecting the movements of her Majesty's ships is supplied by the Admiralty:—

—“From the East Indies, The Euryalus arrived at Port Louis, Mauritius, on June 28, proceeded to Rodriguez with the Lieutenant Governor on board, and returned to Port Louis on July 7. The Euryalus has since arrived at Tamatave.”

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—The tenders for Rs.35,00,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, Rs.32,06,000, and Bombay, Rs.2,94,000, the average rate in each case being 18.775d. Tenders on both Presidencies at 18.734d. received about 40 per cent. The amount offered would, therefore, appear to have been applied for two-and-a-half times over. Next week Rs.35,00,000 more are to be offered, and the minimum price will, as usual, be announced at noon on Wednesday. We suppose it may be inferred from this allotment that the market and the Indian Council have so far adjusted their differences, and, bills being really wanted, tenders are made more freely, notwithstanding the official minimum.

THE SILVER MARKET AND THE EASTERN EXCHANGES.—

On Wednesday bar silver was quoted without alteration at 51 9-16d. per ounce, the absence of supplies, however, preventing actual business from being transacted. The tone of the market decidedly improved on the announcement that for the first time for some weeks the entire amount of India Council drafts tendered for had been allotted, owing to the minimum price being placed by the Government at a figure more generally in accordance than of late with market opinion. The action equally of the exchange banks and the Government in the present instance is regarded as indicating that increased trade requirements call for remittances to the East. Mexican dollars remained at 50½d. Telegraphic transfers from Bombay and Calcutta were on the exact level of the price at which the Council bills were disposed of, the Eastern exchanges generally being unchanged. Four-and-a-Half Rupee Paper receded ¾, to 91 to 91½.—On Thursday the market for bar silver and Mexican dollars was inactive, but prices were again unaltered. The Indian and China exchanges were without change. The weakness in Rupee Paper both here and in India continued, and the rise of 1 per cent. in the Bank of Bombay rate to 6 per cent., coupled with dearer money in Calcutta, enforced the further closing of speculative accounts. In London the closing quotations for the Four-and-a-Half and Four per Cents. were 90½ to 91 and 84 respectively, while in India the rates were about 110 and 101½.—Friday was another quiet day in the silver market. Business was, in fact, at a standstill, and the supplies which were on hand were of the most meagre kind. In the meantime, prices both of bars and dollars were unaltered. The Indian rates for telegraphic transfers were unchanged at 1s. 7¼d., but the tendency is, if anything, not quite so strong. China rates, however, were steady at 5s. 1½d. in Shanghai and 3s. 8½d. in Hong Kong. Dearer money both here and in India continued to have an adverse influence on the prices of Indian Government paper. Values here have fallen to 90¼ to 90½ for the Four-and-a-Half per Cents., and 82¾ to 83¼ for the Four per Cents., these prices corresponding to the complete collapse of the market in India, whence 109½ and 100 respectively have been telegraphed as the nearest rates.—On Saturday the bar silver brought by the Araucania from Chili was disposed of at 51 9-16d. per ounce, but the consignment was not valued at more than £17,000. Mexican dollars were likewise unaltered at 50½d., and, moreover, without business. The Indian quotations for telegraphic transfers were a shade harder, at 1s. 7 13-16d., thus bringing the four months' sight rate up to a fraction over 1s. 8d. Advances have been received of a further advance of 1 per cent. in the Bank of Bengal rate of discount, the current quotation being 6 per cent., or on a level with the Bank of Bombay rate. This upward movement in money had an unfavourable effect on Rupee Paper, because speculators are loaded with stock, which they are trying to sell in any way they can. From India the rates received for the Four per Cents. were about 99¾ and for the Four-and-a-Half per Cents. 108¾, while here the respective closing prices were 82¾ and 90.

OBITUARY.—The Earl and Countess of Haddington have received a telegram from India announcing the death of their second son, the Hon. Richard Baillie Hamilton, of the Rifle Brigade. He died at Puna, where he was serving with the 1st Battalion of his regiment, on the 12th inst. The late Lieut. Baillie Hamilton was born August 28, 1858, and obtained his rank of lieutenant in August, 1880.—Colonel Sir Henry Atwell Lake, K.C.B., died on Wednesday, at Brighton, at the age of 73. He was the third son of the late Sir James Samuel William Lake, fourth baronet, by his marriage with Maria, daughter of Mr. Samuel Turner, and was born at Kenilworth, Warwickshire. He was educated at Harrow, and entered the army in 1826. Formerly an officer in the Madras Engineers, he was transferred to the Royal Army as a lieutenant colonel unattached for his services at the defence of Kars, for which he was likewise nominated a Companion of the Order of the Bath, received the Second Class of the Order of the Medjidie, and was made an officer of the Legion of Honour. He was for some time colonel of the 93rd Foot, but retired in 1856. He was nominated to the Civil Division of Knights Commanders of the Order of the Bath in 1875. Sir Henry Lake was the author of "Kars and our Captivity in Russia," and also of a professional work entitled "The Defence of Kars."—Colonel John Edmund Watson, of the Royal (late Bengal) Artillery, died on Wednesday, at Sharnford Rectory, Leicestershire. The deceased was the second son of the late Rev. Fisher Watson, vicar of Lancing, Sussex, and was born in the year 1826. He entered the army in 1843, obtained a lieutenancy in 1845, and was promoted to a captaincy in 1858. He served the Punjab campaign of 1848-49, including the battles of Sadoolapore, Chillianwallah, and Goojerat. He also took part in the Oudh campaign in 1858. He obtained the rank of major in 1867, was promoted to lieutenant colonel in the following year, and shortly afterwards retired with the rank of colonel.

BANK OF MADRAS.—The annual report and statement of the directors states that the net profits for the year, including the balance of Rs. 34,995-1-2, brought forward from the previous year, amount to Rs. 6,11,586-7-5, which the directors have disposed of as follows:—In payment of a dividend at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, for the half year ended Dec. 31, 1880; Rs. 1,75,000; in payment of a dividend at the rate of 11 per cent. per annum, for the half-year ended June 30, 1881, Rs. 2,75,000; transfer to doubtful bill account Rs. 52,261-5-9; transfer to reserve fund, Rs. 50,000; balance carried forward Rs. 59,325-1-8; total rupees, 6,11,586-7-5. The demand for money has been moderate during the year, and low rates of interest have prevailed. Following upon an easy money market there has been an increase in the value of good securities, in consequence of which the bank's investments in Government Paper have been profitable, and the bank's fixed deposit receipts are now granted at reduced rates of interest. The profits earned by the branches on the east coast have been in excess of those of last year, which has in some measure made up for reduced profits at the branches on the west coast, and in Ceylon, consequent upon deficient coffee crops. The sub-agency at Kandy, Ceylon, was closed in March last. It had been established in connection with advances to native traders at the Colombo branch, which have been considerably restricted, owing to the depressed state of the coffee enterprise. The board have to announce the death in March last of their secretary and treasurer, Mr. T. E. Franck, and desire to record their regret at the loss of the services of this esteemed officer. As a mark of their appreciation of the zeal and faithfulness with which the late Mr. Franck served the bank for a period of 28½ years, the directors recommend to the general meeting of shareholders that a gratuity of Rs. 10,000 be given to his widow. Owing to the retirement in the month of April last of Messrs. J. C. Shaw and D. Rasbotham, on their departure for Europe, two vacancies occurred in the board, which the directors have filled up, under section 29 of the Bank Act, by the election of Messrs. John Fortune and C. A. Ainslie.

On Friday, among Indian Railways, Great Indian Peninsular declined 1, to 133 to 135. In Telegraphs there was a fall of ¼ in Eastern, to 10¼ to 10½. LONDON PRODUCE MARKETS.

TUESDAY EVENING.

TEA DELIVERIES.—The quantity of tea delivered from the bonded warehouses in London for the week ended with Saturday last was 4,247,308lb. Of this total 2,562,035lb. was for home consumption; 980,809lb. was exported; 538,272lb. was sent coastwise; 161,084lb. was sent coastwise for exportation; and 5,108lb. was for ships' stores. The amount of duty received was £64,051.

RICE has continued in speculative demand. Business has been done in Madras to arrive at 8s.; and four or five cargoes Burma, including together about 8,000 tons Ngatsein, 8s. 10½d.; Ngakyoun, 8s. 7½d., Liverpool ex quay terms; Rangoon, June sailing, 8s. 9½d., open charter; Necranzie, on passage, 8s. 6d.; Bassein, August sailing, 8s. 9d., ex quay terms, Liverpool.

PEPPER.—More inquiry. Singapore white has sold at 7¼d. to 7½d.; black tending upwards. Penang, spot and arrival, 5d. to 5¼d.; Singapore, 5¼d.

COTTON.—The market is quieter on the spot, but quotations are unchanged. American futures opened at a slight advance, but closed at yesterday's prices. Sales about 3,500 bales, including Tinnevely for arrival July-October, Suez, 5¼d. for fully good fair g.f.c. Forward delivery, American, August-September, 6 31-32d., September-October 6 7-16d., October-November, 6¼d.; November-December, 6 3-16d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

SUGAR.—A good demand prevails for refined, and prices show a further improvement. In public sale 1,226 bags Bengal, bought in 22s. 6d. to 23s. 6d.; 483 hogsheads, 160 barrels Porto Rico at 23s. to 25s. 6d. For arrival 1,100 tons cane Jagghery sold at 15s. 6d. per cwt.

COFFEE.—The sales have again been small and unimportant, and went without alteration in prices; 85 casks, 13 barrels and bags plantation Ceylon, low middling, 80s. to 84s.; good middling, 93s.; bold 106s.; peaberry, 104s. 6d. to 107s.; 1,166 bags East India chiefly sold—raw, medium, pale grayish, 78s. 6d. to 79s. 6d.; medium to good medium, 87s. to 89s. 6d.; and bold, 95s. to 97s. 6d.; 20 half frazils mocha withdrawn.

RICE is less active; a cargo of 1,100 tons Rangoon sold at 8s. 8¼d. open charter.

JUTE a firm market, but business checked to some extent by the high prices asked; about 3,000 bales sold, chiefly for arrival.

COTTON.—The market on the spot continues inactive. East Indian to arrive are steady, and American futures partially 1-16d. dearer. Sales about 3,000 bales, including Dhollerah, at 5½d. per lb. For arrival—Tinnevely, Sept. Suez, 5¼d. for fully good fair g.f.c. Western Madras, August-Sept., Suez, 4 9-16d. to 4½d. for fully good fair g.f.c. Forward delivery—American, August, 7d.; Nov.-Jan., 6 3-16d.; Feb.-March, 6 7-32d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson state that the better feeling in several of the markets quoted last week has continued to prevail, and there is some partial speculative business. Tea does not follow the improvement in other articles, the very large supply, with further heavy arrivals, tending to keep prices depressed, and common grades of new season's Congou have sold down to 6d. per lb. The finer classes are not pressed for sale. Indian growths are without material change. Colory plantation Ceylon coffee has realised full to advanced prices, pale and ordinary kinds, including East India, being easier; and the numerous parcels of foreign brought forward only partly found buyers. Estimates of the Brazil crop remain at 5 to 5¼ million bags. There are at length signs of improvement in the sugar market, the trade taking moderate supplies of West India, and the decline of last week has been recovered. Refined more active, being dearer for pieces and and Clyde produce. Beet sugar cannot be obtained on previous terms. The unsettled weather has influenced speculative operations in Burma rice, many cargoes being sold at some recovery on late extremely low prices.

TEA.—The late high prices for Indian teas are fully maintained, and fine and finest China Congous are firmly held, and prices are steady.

COLONIAL HANDBOOKS, MAPS, &c.

NOW READY.

CANADA—including Ontario,
North-West Territory, Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia, &c.
With New Coloured Map. Crown 8vo. 288 pp. Cloth, 5s.
"Athenaeum," June 25, 1881.—"Full of information and statistics, which ought to prove very serviceable
to any visitor to the Dominion."

"Times."—"Under the above title Messrs. Silver have brought out much more than a mere "Handbook to Canada," an historical, political, social, geographical, and topographical guide for the use of travellers and settlers
over the greater portion of our North-American possessions.
The need of such a work, at once handy, comprehensive,
and trustworthy, has long been felt both by intending settlers and by readers at home: who are surprised, and not unnaturally, at the scanty information about so important a territory which is accessible to them. The volume is illustrated by a map, showing the whole extent of the Canadian Confederation from the shores of the Atlantic to those of the Pacific, and exhibiting all the details of inland communication, whether by Railway or the long chain of inland lakes. Those who have friends in British Columbia, Manitoba, &c., will find this map most useful; and it may be added that the historical chapters are full of materials for the future historian of Canada, or for the writer of an article on that subject in an encyclopedia."

"Manitoba Daily Free Press."—"Comprised in
this book is a mass of valuable information, which cannot fair to impress every reader with an intelligent idea of the great resources and capabilities of our country. In fact, we are convinced that in the words of the preface, a comprehensive, reliable, and at the same time cheap and handy work has been produced, which will furnish the kind of information most sought for in regard to the Dominion, and especially in regard to Manitoba and the North West territories. We have every reason to think that this handbook to Canada is one of the best contributions to immigration literature yet produced. It is also very handsomely got up—tastefully bound, and very well
printed."

"Graphic."—"We are already acquainted with Messrs.
Silver's Handbooks to Australasia and South Africa.
They are concisely written, accurate in information,
and full of practical details. The same praise may be accorded to the volume now before us, which comprises
a survey of the whole of British North America, the reader's researches being aided by an excellent map. To the intending emigrant the descriptions of Manitoba and British Columbia will be especially attractive."

lication could the immense activity of our Australian Colonies and the rapid advances they have made since their very recent foundation. It is a creditable and useful, and, we believe, trustworthy publication."

AUSTRALIAN GRAZIER'S
GUIDE. No. 1, Sheep. Crown 8vo. Limp cloth. 2s. 6d.

Colonial literature, and is indeed exactly the sort of 'Guide' for the assistance and instruction of those who propose to try their fortunes as stock-raisers abroad, and who so frequently inquire of the Field for such help as is afforded by its pages."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE, THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.

CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.

CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.

CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.

CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.

CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1884.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say had been sworn to.—See Times, 18th July, 1884.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1ld., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. Note is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanied each bottle.
